MR. EDITOR: Geneva is the most beautiful of the European cities we have yet seen. It has a most Venetian appearance. The river Rhone here broadens its waters into Lake Leman; Mont Blanc rears its majestic head in full view; the Alpine range sweeps above down; the adjacent hills are covered with vineyards, rock terraced, among which the peasants, in their pointed shoes and unique garb, are busily working; above all, bends the clearest, sunniest sky. Geneva is noted, aside from its famous watches, jewelry and music boxes, as a great educational centre and the home of many men and women prominent in history. John Calvin came here in 1536, "organized the Reformed Church and code, developed public instruction, founded the Academy, and elaborated strict and sumptuary laws," gaining, all the while, an immense influence throughout Europe. In St. Peter's Cathedral, where he preached, is still seen the old chair in which he sat, and the sounding-board that he stood under when in the pulpit. One of the quaintest, narrowest, grimmest streets is named for him. At No. 11 is the house where he lived—a great, dingy stone edifice, with an immense gate opening into an open court, built in a circular fashion, as many are. In a drive through the suburbs we saw a number of elegant residences, palatial in size and appointment, with the most extensive grounds. The handsomest of all is Baroness Rothschild's, which occupies a prominent position, commanding a view of the lake. It looks like some magnificent castle, but more modern in architecture than the baronial ones of feudal times. Across the border line from this eminence is seen the large white house in the little French town of Ferney. Here lived the man who laughed France into atheism—cynical, brilliant Voltaire. Further up the lake is the Chateau of Coppet, the country place where Madame de Stael lived when she was banished from Paris by Napoleon for being too much interested in politics. Her body now rests in the park beside that of her father, M. Necker, the Minister of Louis XVI. In the centre of Geneva is a little island named for Jean Jacques Rousseau, who was born, it is supposed, in an old building on Grand Rue. A splendid monument has been erected to his memory in bronze by Pradier. From my window at the Hotel Bergues is seen this tiny island, thickly covered with trees, under which are a number of seats, on which rest tired pedestrians; an artistic bridge reaches from there to a longer one in the shape of a right angle, which crosses the Rhone. If my geographical instinct is correct, it was here that Julius Cæsar fought his first battle with the Helvetii, which was the beginning of that historic campaign in detail of which he wrote in his celebrated commentaries. Although Geneva is such an antique city, being an important place over 2 000 years ago, it is very progressive. Horse cars and electric lines are seen in the principal thoroughfares; the latest improved vehicles and carriages are at hand, and in the elegant hotels are waterworks and electric lights. In some respects Switzerland is ahead of England, most decidedly so in its railway transportation, which has all the comforts of our American systems save in its toilet appointments in the second and third-class compartments. On the continent it is said that nobody travels first-class but fools and rich Americans; everybody else suffers inconvenience. Public fountains abound. The women do their washing at them in the basins attached. Sometimes on the lake-sides booths are built out in the water, and here dozens are seen with their sleeves rolled up scrubbing away on smooth boards, dipping the clothes in the water, and flapping them energetically. It certainly saves much labor in carrying heavy pails, and they do not seem to mind being the observed of all observers. It is amusing in continental towns to see a man hitched between two dogs drawing carts laden with milk or hay, or anything else. The man seems to do nothing but guide the dogs. The latter walk along as good naturedly as though they were out for a pleasant jaunt instead of doing hard work. Occasionally they bark and jump about in their harness in the most excited way, but are soon cooled down by the touch of the hand of their human companion. Lake Leman and all of this beautiful region is suggestive of Lord Byron. He wrote Don Juan in Geneva. The most delightful experience we have had lately was a visit to the prison of Chillon. It is too well known for me to attempt a description. In fact, all effort in the direction of European correspondence must partake more or less of the nature of a recital of ancient history, as so many people travel over the same ground and write of the same things.

Yours sincerely,

BELLE KEARNEY.

South Carolina Correspondence.

BY REV. SAMUEL A. WEBER.

We are in high expectation here in South Carolina at the approaching presidency of your Bishop Galloway at our Conference, which meets at Rock Hill, Dec. 4. A poll of the Conference would have shown him to be the first choice of our preachers. It was his turn. He has never presided over us. His only visit here was to preach the commencement sermon at Wofford College. He may not duplicate that sermon, but we want to hear him all the same.

The Bishop is just now the central figure of our connection, accounted for in part by his splendid personality and in part by the prominence which his recent episcopal travels and work in the East have given him. The lucid and pictorial description of his journey, in his correspondence with the Advocates, and his eloquent and powerful appeals for missions which he has been making in his rounds since his return, have not only largely enhanced his growing reputation, but, in the nature of the case, must bring forth much fruit in the growing interest of the church in the spiritual welfare of the heathen world.

Bishop Hendrix follows him, and is now well on his way across the Pacific. It is not the Bishop's first visit to the Orient. He was the traveling companion of the sainted Marvin in his official visit to China, which visit marked a distinct epoch in the history and experience of our church. Our work in the East and our workers there seem to be getting closer and closer to us in our growing acquaintance with the facts of the situation and in our continually deepening interest in them.

It is a matter of sincere and profound regret that our senior Bishop is in infirm health. It is to be hoped that he will let up in his labors for a while, and give himself and the church the benefit of an investment of needed rest—such rest, however, as will impose work. Our church ought to be more fruitful of literary work. The Bishop, who is peculiarly deft in the use of his pen, ought to leave a legacy to the church in a standard volume of permanent value. I know we don't read as much as we ought. I know also that we read a great deal, and a great deal, too, that we oughtn't to read. We need to hedge against the dangerous power of a corrupting literature. Supply creates demand. If the dear Bishop can't, as formerly, go around among the churches, walking with the divine Master among the golden candlesticks, let him, in the quiet isolation of home, turn his Baca into a well of water.

We have just finished our series of District Conferences in South Carolina. The tenth and last was held last week in the venerable town of Camden, where Baron De Kalb was killed fighting for our cause in the Revolution. A modest monument marks his resting-place. Methodism has a strong and increasing hold on the people of that ancient borough. Before the war we had considerable wealth there. We used not only to have a parsonage there, but also (and this is the only instance of the kind I have ever known of) servants, a woman and a man, deeded in fee simple to the church, for the use of the elegant manse. For a few weeks in the Summer of 1861, amid the scenes of the opening of the Civil War, I was as local supply in charge of the Camden station. I took the place of the knightly and chivalrous Meynardie, who went to the front as army chaplain. Among my other labors was a weekly meeting with the colored class leaders and a Sunday afternoon service to an immense colored congregation. The South Carolina Conference in those days did a great work among the people of color. When the war broke out we were paying $30 000 a year to sustain our missions to the blacks. In 1860 we had more colored than white members in South Carolina. There were no lynchings in those days for an unmentionable crime. Our white men were in the army for four years, leaving our defenseless and helpless women and children to the mercy of our colored people. And they were safe all the time. No disturbance, no cruelty, no danger. What does it mean, what did it mean, but that the good seed sown in the minds and hearts and lives of these people brought forth its legitimate fruit in their excellent behavior in a most critical period in our history?

The reports at our different district meetings exhibit the gratifying fact that we are still growing in South Carolina—not that we are spreading so much as that we are taking deeper root. Our present work is that of subsoiling, rather than the surface work after the sensational style of the pioneer in gospel methods. And our preachers are better and better prepared, year after year, for the higher style of work in the vineyard of the Lord. We are having more intelligence in the pulpit, more systematic teaching, more edification. The exhorter is giving way to the preacher; the John the Baptist to the trained apostle of the Lord. I am much pleased (and I know what I am writing about) at the manifest improvement in the teaching power of the South Carolina Methodist pulpit. We have no star preachers, and don't need them badly enough to import any. Wofford College has done a great work for our Conference. About a hundred of our preachers—notably our younger ones—have spent more or less time studying there.

Providence has clearly opened the way for the establishment of a Methodist orphanage in our State. By common consent we are calling it the "Epworth Orphanage." We have a site presented to us at our State capital—a plant worth several thousand dollars. The enterprise is already in the hearts of the people. Under God it will be a great success and a great blessing to South Carolina Methodism.

Our colleges are both providing cheap dormitories for a worthy class of patrons who are unable to afford the higher rates for board usual in first-class institutions. This will increase our attendance and widen the scope of our influence. We are succeeding well in our educational work; never better. This is all the more gratifying now that the State is offering cheap rates of education in the recently established schools at Clemson, for the boys; at Rock Hill, for the girls. These schools are the outcome of a political upheaval under the lead of the Farmers' Movement. We have our work to do, all the same. The Methodist Church must have her schools, and our people must sustain them.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

Grenada county has voted dry by a large majority. This leaves but two places in the hill country of our Conference where liquor selling is legalized. We hope that Aberdeen and Holly Springs will soon fall into line for "God and home and native land."

We regret that Rev. B. B. Sullivan has been compelled to desist from work for awhile on account of a severe attack of rheumatism. His charge is being supplied pro tem. by Rev. Randolph Tucker, a new licentiate, and son of Rev. Heslep R. Tucker. Success to the young man.

Our District Conferences have all been held, and it has been the privilege of this scribe to attend six of the nine. He would have missed none if they had all been held separately; but when they came in two at once, he could not divide himself between them.

Camp and protracted meetings are now the order of the day, from some of which we have good reports. The Lebanon Camp Meeting, Waterford district, began July 26 and closed Aug. 2, resulting in nineteen accessions to the church. Revs. J. D. Cameron, J. A. Bowen, M. D. Fly, A. J. Jones, J. W. Poston, J. J. Smith, the writer and a few local preachers aided the pastor, Rev. J. M. Morse, in the exercises. It was good to be there to listen to the Holy Ghost preach, to enjoy the communion of saints, and to drink the excellent water. From thence I went to Pine Mountain Church, and spent a few days with Bro. Morse and the good people in a protracted meeting. By preaching, Sunday-school and Epworth League talking and circulating religious literature, I hope much good was done in these meetings.

We are endeavoring to put into the hands of all our Sunday-school scholars, as their individual property, a copy of the Holy Bible, by sale or gift. We have these books from twenty cents upward for those who will buy, for half price for such as are able to pay only that much, and without price for any who are not able to pay anything. Will our preachers, superintendents and teachers help us to do this work as soon as practicable? Write to me about it.

I am resting a few days at home, and then shall hie away on another traveling and toiling tour. Brethren, help us with your prayers and co-operation.

G. W. BACHMAN.

The Arcadia District Conference.

The Arcadia District Conference convened in Minden, La. Rev. J. D. Harper took the chair, and presided with dignity and firmness, yet in brotherly love and Christ-like kindness. The traveling preachers were all present save two (sickness preventing them). The lay representation was the smallest for years. This was due to wet weather and grassy crops. A thorough examination of the fourteen pastoral charges was made, and some progress discovered. A strong resolution of no uncertain sound was introduced as soon as Conference was organized, in which the desecration of our holy Sabbath by the managers and patrons of the Louisiana Chautauqua was condemned.

Mansfield Female College was represented by Rev. J. D. Harper, and her claims strongly presented.

Prof. C. C. Weir represented Centenary in a manner that will score something for her.

Mrs. T. K. Faunt LeRoy represented the W. P. and H. M. Society, and cheered our hearts with facts and figures of progress.

The following-named lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: L. M. Kidd, Larkin Lay, Wesley Reams and Rev. T. J. Martin, D. T. Turner.

C. A. Hamel and Ledbetter were licensed to preach. R. J. Pollard was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial; T. J. Martin for elder's order.

The Conference was nicely entertained, and we pray that our ministry to the people of Minden will be blest of God.

The next session of this Conference will meet in Arcadia.

HARRY W. MAY, Sec.

On Aug. 1, at the Prohibition Park, at Port Richmond, New York, there was a joint debate on the prohibition question between Ex-Gov. John P. St. John, of Kansas, and Senator Tillman, of South Carolina. The former spoke against, the latter for the dispensary system. The jury by a vote of 8 to 11 decided in favor of Senator Tillman. The Senator claims that the dispensary system has greatly lessened drunkenness in his native State, and predicts that within ten years the prohibitionists will all come out in full force for the South Carolina system.

How Do We Educate?

During a two-months' campaign in the interest of East Mississippi Female College the writer has been impressed on more points than one. Rev. Sam Jones' advice to "travel" might be very profitably heeded by us all. There is no wider, more comprehensive and more suggestive course of study than what is to be learned abroad, when one has an eye to see.

To visit other places, mingle with men of other callings, and watch the methods pursued in other lines of business, broadens one's field of study and gives new ideas which often puts a new dress on things already familiar, so as to render it more attractive.

The old system of "line-upon-line" teaching is being so strengthened by the lecture system of to-day that teaching becomes a pleasure and study has a charm added which relieves the burden of former years.

The time was when study meant looking on the book (some of my readers can remember that well-meant reproof), and education meant a cramming into the memory the contents of the text. "The best scholar in school" was the one who remembered best what the author had written, whether comprehended or not.

In this day of blackboards, charts, maps and apparatus we see quite a new method, and one greatly superior. In the matter of education it may not be said that the days of our fathers were better than these. "The lines have fallen to us in pleasant places." The text-book teacher of to-day is at a discount, and the demand is for the apparatus, the laboratory and the observatory in all our colleges. The eye, the ear, the hand are all brought in to aid in what was once imposed upon the memory alone.

Analysis, practical demonstration, illustration is the demand of the day. Acting upon this, we have been greatly assisted in the teaching of physics, mechanics and chemistry by the practical lessons to be gotten in visiting the compresses, electric plants, and other similar institutions in our city; and we dare say that many things were made plain to our classes which the text-book had left obscure. A student will learn more concerning power in a great machinery building, or electricity in the office of a practical telegrapher (and we have always found them open to us, and the operators obliging), in one hour than in a week's study of the dry text.

The great advantage of the lecture system was forcibly demonstrated during the sitting of the Normal School in our midst. The teacher must be to no small degree a lecturer. The ideas of others must be studied, and thus the subjects made plain to the student. In this day of new books, new ideas, new developments, new discoveries, the teacher is of necessity a student, that he may keep abreast of the inquiring world.

The tablet, the pencil, and the lecture are all essentials in the education of to-day. When I was a boy my father set me to studying music. I remember nothing but the instruction book, the key-board, and the monotonous "One and two and one and two and"— Is it any wonder that I soon tired and begged to be relieved?

Now, while these still hold their places, the blackboard, the chart and the lesson book under a thoughtful teacher have taken away much of the monotony and added a pleasure to the study of this refining art.

The public lecture system of the day is a means of education fully worth what we pay, and is to be encouraged by our people. We of the South have lost much by our apathy at this point. A good platform lecture on a living question will give more in an hour than most readers will get from an octavo volume. Through voice, eye and gesture impressions are made indelible and facts are forever riveted. As educators, we should think on these things; as parents, we should not neglect them.

Again, Mr. Editor, have our thoughts ran away with us, and we have not stuck so closely to our subject as we might? Another time we may say more.

Our campaign is producing fruit. We have met with encouragement wherever we have gone, and the calls for catalogues are coming in by almost every mail.

Our last session has been pronounced the best in several years, and our prospects for the approaching are good indeed.

Both the City Board of Health and the president of the State Board of Health, Dr. W. F. Hyer, announce that the "city of Meridian and the surrounding country are entirely free from small-pox in any form or degree;" so our friends may put aside all fears they may have entertained from that source, and send on their daughters.

In the Living Present.

A Benedictine monastery, Westmoreland, Pa., operates within its precincts a large brewery and furnishes many saloons in Pittsburg and Johnstown with that insidious beverage. Monks brewing beer! When recently the abbot of that beer-brewing monastery visited Rome, Pope Leo received him with: "Ah! yes, Monseigneur Abbas Cervisiae." Signifying, beer-abbot.

Mayor Strong, of New York, enforces the Sunday law rigorously. Of this Tammany makes capital. One of the deposed sachems recently said: "Sunday in our metropolis is not a day of rest, but arrest." Here is a pointer in this connection. Foreigner to hotel clerk: "I would like to see some of your prominent statesmen." Replied the clerk: "Am sorry, but you will not be able to do so. To-day being Sunday, all the saloons are closed."

The Lancet holds that the modern stories of premature burial belong in the domain of the novelist, not of science. Having examined the numerous reports of such burial they were found the manufacture of fertile imagination. When a physician gives a certificate of death the relatives can rest assured that life is extinct.

Zola, the unctuous writer, as is well known, was refused an audience with the Pope. He was refused even admittance to the Vatican. This insult the irate Frenchman now resents. He has written a novel, entitled "Rome," in which the Pope and his prelates are held up to ridicule. The arrogance and sham of popery are bewitchingly exposed.

"A Woman of the Day" writes in Saturday's Review that the often stated "sisterhood of woman" is a delusion. Born of fancy, not of fact. History, sacred or secular, furnishes no account of female friendships like those of Damon and Pythias, David and Jonathan. If possible, women, more than men, are under the dominion of envy, jealousy, hatred, etc. Friendship among them a rarity.

Europe has no longer the monopoly of Roman Catholic relics. The church of St. Jean Baptiste, in New York claims the acquisition of a small bone of St. Anna. It is encased in a vial and publicly exhibited. On July 26 not less than eighteen thousand Romish votaries visited the church for the purpose of seeing the relic and kissing the vial. Kissing the vial removes all human ailments. Miraculous cures occurred. Many crutches found in church-yard. Humbug supreme!

Jerusalem will soon have a Hebrew University. Baron Hirsch has given five million dollars for that purpose. Other Jewish millionaires will add to the donation. It is to be an institution of highest rank.

Unparalleled Audacity.

One hundred and six acres adjoining the Chautauqua Assembly grounds have been secured by the American Brewing Company, and it is the reported intention of the company to erect a beer garden and brewery thereon.—Zion's Herald.

This case has a parallel in Maryland. A strip of land adjoining Emory Grove Camp Ground has been purchased by a syndicate and made a pleasure park, a dancing pavilion has been erected and a placard prominently hung in the trolley cars announces "Music and Dancing Every Afternoon at Emory Grove Park." Our brethren of the M. E. Church are much disturbed about it. All right-minded persons condemn such audacious wickedness. It is too plain to be misunderstood.—Baltimore Christian Advocate.

There is in some places an actual vice which may be properly denominated a lust for fine preaching. Men go to church from very much the same motive that takes them to the theatre—not to be edified, but to enjoy fine declamation.—Bishop Marvin.

SEED-TIME.

BY CHARLOTTE MURRAY.

We are sowing, ever sowing,
Something good or something ill
In the lives of those around us—
We are planting what we will.

Not a word we say falls fruitless,
Not a deed we do decays;
Every thought and word and action
Will be found in future days.

When, perhaps, the hand that sowed them
Shall itself have ceased to be;
Still the record of their being
Will live on eternally.

Grant then, Lord of all the harvest,
That the seeds we daily sow
May refresh the hearts of others,
Spreading blessing as they grow.

May each thought and word and action
Be the growth of Christian love,
To be found in coming ages
In the garner-house above!

Treasured there, in thine own keeping,
Just to prove our love was true;
For the motive gives the value
To the meanest thing we do.

Ultra-Conservatism

BY JULIEN C BROWN, D D.

NO. I.

There are questions for this day other than those of the tariff and money in government; than the probable candidates for the chief magistracy and outcome of parliamentary changes in politics; than the second-blessing theory, the cosmogony of Moses and original sin in religion. This, the next, or succeeding generation, must settle some ecclesiastical matters much more vital to human welfare. The issues are, and will be, the evangelization of the world, the fulfillment of prophecy, the establishment of Christ's kingdom, and the overthrow of the devil. To a stalwart Christian manhood, especially to a Christian ministry, every issue in politics, government, foreign relations, should be thrown into shadow, unless it appertains directly or indirectly to that far more important question, How can a divided and warring ecclesiasticism, a mighty army of jealous, envious, inharmonious sects and denominations be drawn together in a united and conquering onslaught against the princes of all evil, so as to give final answer to the Savior's masterful prayer for unity among his people?

To observe, to think and to speak, if occasion be given, is the inalienable prerogative of the man of genius, the man of talent, the beggar or the prince. No word of good common sense is ever lost, whether launched on the viewless air or printed in black ink on white paper. It is an Egyptian rice seed. The opposition waves of unbelief, or doubt, or ridicule, may sweep over it, but in the appointed time it will spring forth, green and pleasant to the sight.

There is an air of conservatism among many Christian thinkers of to-day which would be pitiful were it not so potent in checking progress and clogging the wheels of religious effectiveness. This conservatism sets itself to defend the actual state of things as they exist; not because it denies there may be a better way, but because it is timid, and dreads the result of possible mistake. It clutches with iron grip the present facts, and will not open wide its eyes to see that there may be better facts. It pleads, it apologizes, it fears that a change may work trouble. Its spirit is much after that of the aboriginal farmer, who still plows an old steer geared in a wooden yoke, and drawing a forked stick through a stubborn soil. The conservative reverences his household and ecclesiastical gods, daily burns incense before them, and never dares question their quasi-infallibility, or dissent from their dogmatic dictum. Thus, in a measure, he becomes an idolator. He lives and thinks in the past. He can not stand on his two feet, as a man, and stretch himself above the fogs, lowlands and miasma into an atmosphere where the sunbeams are pure as the silver sheen from the city of life. He appears oblivious to the fact that past ecclesiastical eras is our legacy from the dead and buried years, and that from such vast muck-beds nothing may be had save occasional grains of yellow gold truth. He ought to reflect that past eras may only be used to enrich the soil around that little mustard-seed tree planted by the ascended Master eighteen hundred, and more, years ago, and which should now be in its columnar strength and flowering into the rarest of its beauty, affording in its cool and shady branches a rest for the talon and the song-bird men and women of every clime and nation. "But," men say, "the ecclesiastical conservative is a safe man." Yes, a cedar gate-post is safe; a spavined, ring-boned horse is safe; a steam engine without cylinder or steam is safe, for they can none of them ever run away or do anything. Such conservative is safe enough to live in a rut, and finally die and rot in a ditch of dead forms and almost meaningless rites; the fit follower of Bunyan's man raking in the dirt for jewels while an angel swings over him, presenting a crown which he never will see.

A reverence for some things of the past, however, is not to be sneered at or ridiculed. We call it a dead past; but, while bearing continents of mud and slime, it yet carries a wealth more precious than that of the Indies, of art, of literature, of science, and historic details of ennobled characters. Its storehouses are full to repletion of things more valuable than were ever floated in argosies, or laden on camels, or transported by inventions; and yet, of all the ages gone and the eras spent, this present day and hour, with their circumstances and conditions, is the omniative result, the aggregation of moral and intellectual incentive, and the best drag of the net which the fishermen for men and ideas have made since ever they first cast into the sea of time. Trite, but true. We are the legal and responsible heirs to all the wealth, good and bad, which the centuries have produced since Adam and his saddened wife left the Garden of the Euphrates. To make a full and high use of it is no less a high-born privilege than a divine command.

The conservative, while drawing about him the shades—and substances, too—of the things which have been, will close his eyes to the alluring vistas and daring pictures which a hopeful enthusiasm concerning the future presents, and stand stubbornly on man's confessed limitations. His inspiration is wholly from beneath, and never from above, and as he presses backward to the things which are behind, he discounts all effort in those who move forward to the things which are before. His trust in what has happened is large; his faith in what Christ said shall happen is exceeding small. Especially is such true in matters ecclesiastic. Your ultra-conservative almost weeps like Alexander the Great as he blubbers it out that in the theological infinitudes there are no more worlds to conquer since Luther swore and Calvin raged and Melancthon loved and Wesley wrote. To his mind these men exhausted the stores of theologic wisdom and the vernacular of spiritual insight. When they ceased to articulate and dropped reins in the paralysis of death, the chariot of Theology stood still and the fiery coursers of after generations have never been able to move it from that high-noon of perfection.

Through long hours and in rapt attention, with huge telescope pointed to the spaces where burns the sidereal splendors of the mid-summer night, Professor Barnard sits gazing. Suddenly there flits across his spectrum the faint glimmer of a light never seen by astronomer before and a new world is discovered. Electric fire next day sends a message to Europe and America that a ray from the heavens which, perhaps, has been ten thousand years on its journey, has just arrived. The conservative discredits the statement until irrefragible testimony from other astronomers confirms the observation. It is his way. In like manner will he discount the man who suggests that in this age of the Spirit, this dispensation of the Holy Ghost, a new light might break out from the theologic heavens, one not seen by Luther or Calvin or Wesley. A convulsion of pious rage will seize a multitude of preachers if a bare hint is thrown out that Wesley didn't know it all and everything. Such is ultra-conservatism intermixed with ignorance and imbecility.

Almost every progressive movement in art, litera ure science and theology has had to fight its battle and win its way by sheer force of enthusiasm and an abiding faith in God and Nature. While not always hostile to and in open rebellion against reform and movement, conservatism, nevertheless, has thrown on wet blankets, turned a cold shoulder and discouraged out of an endless unfaith.

Letter from Oregon.

MR. EDITOR: As the season for reports from schools, colleges, etc., is now ending, maybe your readers would like a word from "far-away" Oregon. The special spell for writing is upon me, caused by Mrs. Futrell telling what she reads in the dear old ADVOCATE, for my hands are so full in carrying forward my church-building I have to take the news second hand. She tells me that surely there is a great epidemic of sickness among the churches, or the people, in and around Mississippi, for it seems every alternate man among our old acquaintances has turned Doctor. We hope they will make good ones, for poor doctors are a very undesirable commodity.

She tells me that the commencements have been the best ever known; that their excellencies have been so many that unused words have been brought into requisition to enable the writers to describe them; that the occasions have been of such unwonted interest that even the preachers—the Doctors—have so caught the fire that even their prayers had to be spoken of as uncommonly unctuous, fervent, etc.

Our District Conferences have both been held, and both were seasons of special interest. At our own it was often remarked, "I do not believe I ever saw the members so spiritual, or the preachers so full of unction." A session was given to the W. P. and H. M. Society, and it "was the best and most enjoyable of all." Reason: They had prepared for it, and the results of their labor so far surpassed the expectation of the most sanguine that it gave a delightful surprise. At the risk of being accused of being a little vain, I wish to say that our old friends would be surprised at Mrs. Futrell. Always so modest at times, shrinking from all publicity, she surprises me at the vigor and earnestness and push she throws into both the W. P. and H. M. Society and the Epworth League. If she could be relieved of part of her household duties so as to enable her to prepare for the work, she could do well in the management of both these fields of labor; but thus it is—"the ox . . . is muzzled." When will the church awake and release her workers—take them from "gathering straw," being "hewers of wood," etc.—that they may go forth gathering the Lord's harvest?

This reminds me of the letter of P. A. Moses, in the ADVOCATE of July 25—"Young Men Wanted." I hope there will be several responses to that call. Write to Bro. Moses, or to one of the presiding elders—Rev. R. A. Reagan, Albany; H. S. Shangle, Oakland—and have your presiding elder write a separate letter, and in each letter that needs a reply enclose a self-directed, stamped envelope. Two or three cents is not much, but it is more to them than to you. But let me say: If you are not determined to come for the glory of God, and fully intend to stand by Southern Methodism, you had better not come. Every man who comes here, and drifts off to another church for the loaves and fishes, hurts us and buries himself. I've made diligent search into the facts, and have yet to find an exception to the rule. Flattering offers are made to our men to go elsewhere, and for one, two or three years all seems well; then they are pushed to the wall, showing that the only desire is to get them from us. Our salaries are small here, and there are many difficulties to encounter, but there is not near as much difference as many suppose. We haven't the colored brother and sister to do our extra jobs for us; nor are they here to take our extra quarters and dollars, for we do the work ourselves, and there is nobody to think the less of us for having done so. We get our flour for $2.40 per barrel; and if a man has the energy enough to take the wheat to the mill, it costs eighty cents per hundred pounds. Wood is $1.75 to $2.50 per cord; pork about five cents, and bacon eight to twelve cents. Goods that have to come from the East we have to pay from one-third to one-half as much more than you do. Some of our brethren go to the woods, cut their own wood; the hauling costs fifty cents to one dollar, and thus they get it cheaper. This Summer loose hay is $2.50 to $4 per ton; baled hay, $2 more.

If we wish to take an outing to the springs, coast, or mountains, we just get a wagon, tent, etc., and go. The expense on such a trip is little more than staying at home. We were out five or six weeks last Summer, and the cost was only about $35 for us three; and then we are in veritable mountains from 2,000 to 14,000 feet high, canyons 2,000 feet deep, rivers deep—oh! so deep—and yet so clear you can see the smallest object discernible by the eye as far as, or further than, on the ground.

Fish? Yes, thousands of them; but you will have to learn to fish, for there is an art both in casting the well-prepared hook and line, and in keeping it "a-going" when you get it there.

Hunting? Yes, indeed; quail, grown pheasant, prairie chicken, etc.; innumerable smaller animals, and deer, elk, moose, bear—both black and grizzly, if you care to tackle him—and cougar, etc.

Did I tell you of one of my fishing bouts over in Klamath county? On Klamath Lake one morning I am sure I saw one thousand snakes. Early in the morning it was cool, and often fifteen or twenty would be in a roll together, and I would put my foot on the tail to see them squirm and run.

In a river near there—"Lost river"—I was told that in "the running season" the stream was so full of fish that you could not get a horse to cross it; that their fins would stick far above the water; that you could back a wagon into the stream, and in a very short time fill it by using a pitchfork, like throwing in hay. Since then I've been told there are several streams in Oregon like that.

How cold does it get in Winter? A few times the mercury has gone to zero in the valley. The lowest I have seen it is eighteen or twenty above. On the mountains, of course, it is as cold as you may wish, even in Summer, if you go high enough.

How hot? I've seen it 110, but even then I've walked eleven blocks, preached, and returned, and did not wet my shirt collar.

Truly, J. L. FUTRELL.

The Proper Posture During Prayer.

In the ADVOCATE, of July 25, I find an article urging upon pastors and people the observance of the disciplinary rules; among other matters of less importance, the requirement to kneel during prayers. The writer lays much stress upon the fact that the forms for the conduct of public worship require both the congregation and preacher to kneel during prayers, and that, because the ritual of the church prescribes, it ought to be observed by those, especially, who have taken the vows of church membership. While all this is true, it occurs to me that there are much stronger and more cogent reasons why human beings—no matter how holy, pure and righteous they may be—should humble themselves, even to prostration, when presuming to approach the Divine Majesty. If there were no other reasons, the fact that our race, as such, is under the curse of violated divine law, and have no rights which the Almighty is under any obligation to respect, is amply sufficient; but when to this is added the infinite debt of gratitude, humility and obedience we owe to "the Man of Sorrows" for our redemption, purchased by the sacrifice of himself and the shedding of his precious blood upon the cross, the wonder to me is how any human being, and especially any who have "tasted of the heavenly gift," etc., can presume to otherwise approach the throne of grace. To be perfectly frank, it is hard for me to believe that any Methodist—preacher, Bishop or layman—who fails to kneel—if possible for him to do so—while prayer is being offered, has sufficient religion in his heart to save him. I have always noticed that when the heart is full of the divine love the knees are extremely limber, and there is a feeling of profound humility and utter self-abasement. We read in Revelation that the hosts of heaven prostrated themselves before the throne, and the thought comes that if those who knew no sin conceived that their relations with the occupant of "the great white throne" demanded that they should assume such a posture, where are the descendants of Adam to find any justification of the practice of standing to pray or of sitting during prayers? To my mind, there is no better index of a man's spiritual condition, except his daily walk, than the condition of his knees as to flexibility. I never see an alleged Methodist—Bishop, preacher or layman—standing up to pray, especially in a Methodist meeting, that I do not feel greatly pained at his assuming a posture ill-becoming a lost and ruined wretch when addressing the Creator of all things, the Judge of all the earth.

The trouble with our modern Christianity is, that there is too little of humility—a grace inseparable from a proper spiritual condition. I sincerely hope that the church may soon get near enough to its Head to make its membership assume such posture in their devotions as becomes a condemned criminal who has been pardoned and restored to favor through infinite mercy. May the good Lord revive his work! REX.

Questions for Young Christians.

Do you read your Bible every day; and if so, as a duty or a pleasure—either, or both?

If you miss any church services, are your excuses such as you would give to the Master?

If a social meeting drags, or proves spiritless, and you have taken no part, can you explain why these conditions exist?

And if you take no part (apart from singing), are you carrying out the requirements of your Christian vows?

Is there any one in your society needing special help, and do you feel yourself the person to give it?

What do you think of these questions—as pertinent, or impertinent? If the latter, why are they?

"Many years ago," says Oliver Wendell Holmes, "in walking among the grass in Mount Auburn Cemetery, I came upon a plain, upright white marble slab, which bore an epitaph of only four words, but to my mind they meant more than any of the labored descriptions on the surrounding monuments: 'She was so pleasant.' That was all, and it was enough. That one note revealed the music of a life of which I knew and asked nothing more." The music of life—that is the precious gift we are missing to-day. If all men possessed this rare genius of being pleasant, this gentle spirit of constant cheerfulness, what a blissful and radiant world this would be. For instance, what an amazing revolution would be worked in the proceedings of Congress and our Legislatures if every member carried out the new and supreme commandment—"Love one another." What bright homes, offices, shops we should have if we all tried to bear one another's burdens, if we were all gentle, and kind, and "pleasant."

Have You a Boy to Spare?

The saloon must have boys, or it must shut up its shop. Can't you find one? It is a great factory, and unless it can have two million from each generation, for raw material, some of these factories must close up, and the operatives be thrown upon the cold world, and the public revenue dwindle. "Wanted, two million boys!" is the notice. One family out of every five must contribute a boy, in order to keep up a supply. Will you help? Which of your boys shall it be?

These statements are as true as they are startling. It is beyond a peradventure that if no boys were tempted and ruined during the next generation, in three and thirty years every saloon in America would have to put up in its window the placard, "For Sale," or "To Let." The old drunkards would be dead, and there would be no young ones to take their places.

Here, then, is an indisputable fact—if they are not closed within the next thirty years, two million boys, who are now innocent and pure, will be ruined.

If it was believed that, within thirty years, two millions of American boys would die of hydrophobia, or a tenth part of two millions, every dog in America would be destroyed, and a law of absolute prohibition would be passed on dog-kennels and their occupants.—Herald and Presbyter.

"Art of Putting Things."

The usual throng poured out of the Grand Central Depot. One said to another, "Here we are again; all rushing to the city; everyone trying to gouge his living out of the others."

"Count yourself in that crowd if you choose, but not me," replied the person to whom he had spoken. "I come to New York every day to serve my fellow-men, and they esteem my efforts so much as to support me and give me enough besides for a rainy day."—New York Advocate.

DEAR SISTERS: Our State corresponding secretary's appeal, presented to you several weeks ago in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, deserves your consideration. I wish I could emphasize her earnest words forcibly; but I can only hope to remind you again of the importance of the work which she laid before you.

We have several missionaries, whose outgoing is stayed for want of the money necessary toward their outfit. Do we realize the case as it concerns them, the heathen and ourselves? They have answered the call which our Savior made to every one who claims to be his disciple—"Go." They are willing and ready. They have passed the ordeal of self-sacrifice and consecration. With longing gaze their eyes are fixed beyond the seas, where "every prospect pleases and only man is vile." The whole armor is fitted on and they are girded with staff in hand, ready to move. But, alas! with weary longing they await the craft which is to bear them onward. Somebody is responsible for this delay, which wears on the zeal and energies of the restive missionary, and not only hinders her usefulness, but involves the loss of many heathen. For every hour that the glad tidings is withheld, nearly four thousand Christless souls pass in a long mournful procession before the bar of God. Somebody is accountable for this wholesale loss of souls.

"Go tell," is the stern command which was promulgated from the Mount of Ascension, and the echoes of all the ages have borne the refrain to the dull ears of the church. The missionaries stand waiting, the heathen are dying unsaved, and we are at ease. The missionaries may suffer martydom in even waiting, and the heathen in God's mercy may find a way of escape; but we, ah! how does the situation affect us? Can it be possible that we are resting in the security which doomed the Laodiceans! Can it be that we are feeling rich in the salvation which has come to us, when in reality we are "wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked!"

Beloved women of the church, let us consider these things. The opportunity before us is this, stated briefly: Several young missionaries, educated and well trained for the work, have been accepted by the Woman's Board. These zealous young ladies are ready and anxious to reinforce the army already in the foreign field. They can't move a step until we come to their assistance. Our Conference corresponding secretary, in session with the W. B. F. M. last May, with a feeling sense of the urgent need, pledged our Conference society [illegible] $300 toward this work of sending them forward. It is a pitiful amount in comparison with the promises of many of our sister Conferences. Shall we sustain our delegate's faith and confidence in us? If so, let us send up our free-will offerings, and with our gifts "buy gold tried in the fire that we may be rich; and white raiment that we may be clothed."

Pres. La. Con. W. F. M. S.

Notice.

To the Auxiliaries of Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, W. F. M. S.—

DEAR SISTERS: Please observe the following:

(1) Let each member pray, at least once a day for her auxiliary, the work and workers.

(2) If you have no juvenile society organize at once and send me notice of same. A juvenile society, with a lady manager filled with the Spirit, will accomplish more than the majority of adults.

(3) Let the agent put the Woman's Advocate, the Little Worker and the Evangel in every home, whether missionary or not. The importance of this office can't be sufficiently emphasized. Remember, our Conference is pledged 600 subscribers to the Evangel, for the support at the training-school of a missionary one year.

(4) Appoint a committee of one each month to gain new members.

(5) Send your quarterly reports to me instead of Conference secretary not later than the third of June, September, December, March, that I may report for the district. Send me a full report. Number of members, adult, juvenile, honorary; number of Advocates, Little Workers and Evangels taken; amount of money collected for dues; Conference and home funds; also McNemar fund, and any other special work you may have on hand.

"Arise and shine, for his grace so free
Hath shone with a wondrous light on thee."

What a privilege it ought to be to every Christian woman to be connected with such an organized body of workers for Christ as our Parsonage and Home Mission Society. It is such a blessed resource for help and inspiration in filling our individual sphere, being brought so near to the awaken hearts of so many. God help us to make use of our opportunity to do what we can in this work, and not be discouraged, though what we do seems small, for God will reward what is done in the right spirit.

This organization is now becoming firmly fixed for good upon our Conferences that we may safely expect greater momentum of work than ever before.

The time is near by when every pastor will be expected to exert a finer influence upon his people in this particular and when all the waste places will be speedily cared for.

How it should ever have been neglected seems now to be marvelous in view of the great good that has grown out of them. And in view of the fact that this work must be, more or less, looked after, even where the greatest provisions have been made as the years roll by, is a certainty.

It is becoming more and more needful to the church each year, and, as its scope is better understood and its necessities are becoming apparent, there will not be necessary that urgency of appeal to both preachers and people. PAULINE STAFFORD, Conference Editor.

During the annual meeting of the W. P. and H. M. Society at Wesson the ladies organized an auxiliary with [illegible] members. Let the good work go on.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. B. H. Sheppard, P. C., Ringgold circuit, Louisiana Conference, Aug. 2: "I report a most gracious revival at Brushwood Church, this circuit. We began July 20 and continued until July 31. The preaching was done by Rev. J. B. Cassity, of the Louisiana Conference, and was to the point, reaching the hearts of the people. There were quite a number of conversions and twenty-seven accessions to the church. To God be all the glory."

Rev. W. J. Burt, Pastor Kossuth circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "I am at Rienzi holding a meeting. Bro. W. D. Bass is with me. We are having a good meeting. The church has been revived. About twenty have professed religion. Eleven have joined the church. Rienzi has a number of nice young people. Bro. Bass has won their love and friendship. They are consecrating themselves to the Lord. Many of them prayed in public last night. We will organize an Epworth League before we close. We have about worked up all the material we have here. Pray for us."

Rev. P. D. Hardin, P. C., Westville, Miss., Aug. 5: "We have just closed a very successful meeting at Jones' Branch, five and a half miles north of this place. It was indeed a most wonderful revival. The Holy Spirit was present in great power. Many happy conversions, twenty-six accessions, and a general uplifting of the church, are some of the visible results. Nearly every family promised to erect a family altar. The neighborhood is stirred, spiritually, as never before. May God continue the good work begun. We have a new church here which, when completed, will be one of the finest churches in the county. Surely there is a bright future for this church. Revs. C. C. Griffin and G. W. Brown rendered faithful service in the meeting."

F. C. Greenwood, Homer, La., July 31: "The spiritual state of the church at Homer is as good as it could be expected. The young men's weekly prayer meeting is held regularly every Monday night in the Methodist Church, though it is non-sectarian. The weekly prayer meetings are held every Wednesday night at the Methodist Church, and Thursday night at the Baptist Church. The various denominations are at peace with each other, and all supplied with good pastors. Sunday-school in each of the three churches every Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. Our pastor, Rev. V. D. Skipper, is a splendid man, and second to none as a pastor and preacher. All denominations and those who belong to no church like him. His wife is a most excellent woman. We want them for the full time—four years."

REVIVAL AT RIENZI, MISS.

We closed one of the most powerful meetings this little town has had in some time last Sunday, at 11 A. M. About twenty-five conversions, which includes most of outside material in the community. Fifteen joined our church. On the close Bro. Burt organized a nice Epworth League of thirty members. I never saw young people made more useful than they are here. We have some splendid ones, too. The people are highly pleased with Bro. W. J. Burt as pastor. May God bless him and Rienzi is my prayer. W. D. BASS.

PLAQUEMINE BRULEE, LA.

We have just closed out a two weeks' meeting at Plaquemine Church, which, we trust, has been a blessing to our people. We were assisted some by Rev. R. M. Walker, of Rayne, La.; Rev. W. J. Porter, of Indian Bayou; our presiding elder, Rev. H. O. White, and Rev. W. W. Drake, of Crowley. These brethren were with us but a few days each, but did good gospel preaching, and the Lord put his spirit upon them. We had about twelve conversions, three or four backsliders were reclaimed, four believers professed to have received the experience of entire sanctification, and we had fifteen accessions to the church. The interest was good to the closing service.

We have fine congregations. We have had 41 accessions to the church since January, and finances are coming up very well. We are praising God for full salvation and his keeping power. J. S. SANDERS.

Prof. Robert A. Webb, D. D., speaking of the Southern Presbyterian Church, complains of the professional musical services as being extravagantly costly and growing more so. He tells from personal knowledge of a congregation that pays twelve hundred dollars for its choir service and fifteen hundred dollars for its pastoral service, and yet the choir worked less than two hours a week, while the pastor gave his entire time to the service of the congregation. The disproportion here is certainly very great. The same authority asserts that there are cases in which this source of expense prevents almost entirely contributions to beneficence. This is a heavy price to pay for satisfying a morbid desire for estheticism in the worship of God, when, after all, the tendency of such musical performances is to convert the church into a sacred concert hall.—Christian Intelligencer.

One of the sad things with which we often meet in the world is that thousands of young men, whose fathers are abundantly able and perfectly willing to give them an education, are utterly indifferent on the subject. When a very rich man's son becomes a finished scholar, the case is so rare as to attract attention and excite comment. On the other hand, there are thousands of poor boys who are eager for the chance to gain knowledge, and full of grief because their way is blocked. Such boys have in them the making of great and useful men. They ought to be encouraged. If any of our readers has as much as one hundred dollars which he wishes to put where it will do the most good, we can help him to dispose of it to advantage.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

The Christian Guardian, of Toronto, is particularly pertinent and forceful in the following paragraph: "If a man accepts some new theory, or adopts some fad in science or religion, he is sure to think that all who do not believe as he does are altogether 'behind the times.' 'Behind the times' from such an one means behind his time or opinions. These opinions, which are made the standard by which all men are measured, may be crude and unproved theories. A watch that runs too fast is as misleading as one that runs too slowly."

An extra cent a day from each one of 15,500,000 Protestant Evangelical church members in the United States would add $56,575,000 a year to the Lord's treasury. Only an extra cent a day is required. The First Church at Newton Centre, Mass., has an Extra-Cent-a-Day Band, which has raised on the average $359.20 every year for the last five years, in all $1,796, of which it has given one-half to the American Board and one-half to the several home missionary societies.—Evangelical Messenger.

Whenever any Christian becomes too liberal to wear any denominational uniform he has also become too liberal to fight in any corps of the Lord's army. He makes a merit of loafing and handshaking and keeping in the way of people who have work to do.—Arkansas Methodist.

The church member who spends two-thirds of the Sabbath reading the newspapers consoles himself with the reflection that he has read everything in the Bible that is interesting.—The Bible Reader.

Suggestions to Pastors.

BY T. L. CUYLER, D. D.

How much time should be devoted to pastoral visitation must be left to a minister's good judgment and the conditions of his parish. For myself, I seldom allowed a day to pass without being in some one or more houses. On the Sabbath, you will often hear of some absences on account of sickness, and you will wish to visit such cases on the next day—although Monday ought to be, as far as possible, a rest and recreation day after the strain of Sabbath work. Go through your parish systematically, street by street; that saves time, and secures the reaching of each family. It is not wise to announce from the pulpit any route of calls you intend to make on any particular day. You may not be able to carry out your plan, and your parishioners will be disappointed. Run your risk of finding them at home; if they are away, try again. Make your visits familiar, cordial, affectionate and profitable. Learn all you can about your flock. Encourage no gossip, but free, frank talk about the important things: make your people confide in you as their spiritual guide and loving friend. If they unload their troubles to you, don't repel them; "bear ye one another's burdens," is the Master's order to his servants. If it costs you something to be sympathetic, accept it as part of your holy calling; a faithful ministry can never be a cheap or a careless one. It is a good custom to offer prayer with the family you call on, especially if circumstances clearly demand that service. Get hold of the children, by all means, with a loving word; and when you have come to know them, never pass them—or older people either—in the street without remembering them. Every human being, rich or poor, likes to be noticed.

Funeral services involve a strain on your nerves, and sometimes a demand on your delicate discretion. Put yourself into sympathy with a bereaved household, and then let your heart speak out freely. 'Weep with them that weep"—did not the Master do the same at Bethany? When hearts are softened, strive to stamp saving truth on them.

Always be watching for the Holy Spirit. When you detect special tokens of his presence, be prompt to follow his leadings. Strike at once. Co-operate with the Spirit. That means a revival, and there is no genuine revival in any church unless it be produced by and attended with the "power from on high." Such a revival is a foretaste of heaven. But whatever the spiritual state of your flock, be continually preaching to save souls.—Christian Work.

At Mahanoy City (Pa.) a chicken flew into a church and laid an egg on one of the seats. A Pottsville young lady used the egg in a cake, and thus started a fund for the building of a new Methodist Episcopal Church at that place. The fund is growing to large proportions.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

The best way to extend the pastoral term is to develop pastors who are full of faith and the Holy Ghost, who can do work that will last and grow, who can win souls to Christ and cause them to hang on him for salvation. Such a pastor will have a long term, whether he goes or stays.—Wesleyan Advocate.

Everything fights against a man who is not on God's side; while he who does right, not because it is profitable, but because it is right, who loves the truth, arms himself with God's power—the universe is on his side.—F. W. Robertson.

To live in the presence of great truths and eternal laws, to be led by permanent ideals—that is what keeps a man patient when the world ignores him, and calm and unspoiled when the world praises him.—Balzac.

"A man who does not know how to learn from his mistakes," said Henry Ward Beecher, "turns the best schoolmaster out of his life."

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. Editorial Paragraphs.

Wise is he who "knows that he knows nothing."

There are not a few people who are in love—with themselves.

The Christian who is no better to-day than he was last year is like a stunted shrub.

Pigheadedness is the cause of no little friction in religious circles as well as elsewhere.

Looking at the wrong side of things does not change the fact that there is a right and bright side.

If church members were all earnest Christians, the saloon curse would shortly be a thing of the past.

A contemptible piece of business—getting others to carry out selfish schemes which you would not father yourself.

"Sanctification," says the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, of England, "is an intense desire not to have your own way." A happy definition that.

Some who fail to achieve greatness, strive to attract attention by the exhibition of crankiness. Eccentricity, we are sorry to say, is sometimes mistaken for genius.

In this fast age people who meditate are becoming scarce. Yet maturity of thought and the symmetrical development of character are hardly possible without seasons of serious meditation.

It is ludicrous to see a man posing as a martyr because he meets with some measure of opposition and ridicule. Angularity and bigotry are chargeable with much of so-called religious persecution.

How smoothly church affairs would move on if every member would try to live up to the exhortation: "Let nothing be done through strife, or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves."

There is no virtue or magic, as some suppose, in saying prayers. Petitions coming from the heart are the ones God hears. The exclamation of King Claudius, in Shakespeare's "Hamlet," when attempting to pray, is now and then applicable to all of us:

"My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:
Words without thoughts never to heaven go."

Pressing Forward.

The salvation of a believer may be said to begin with godly sorrow, and is consummated in eternal glory; but the heavenly race is not run in a day, nor is the redemption of the individual accomplished entirely by divine agency. God forgives and purifies the sincere penitent, and the Holy Spirit comes to guide and strengthen. No man, however, is ever regenerated without his consent; neither for one moment can grace operate in the heart to the subduing of sin save through the submission of the human to the divine will. From conversion till the end of our probation at death, the same heaven-reaching faith, the same unreserved consecration, must characterize our relation to God. If we continually submit ourselves unto the Lord, "he which hath begun a good work in us will perform it unto the day of Jesus Christ."

Although the Lord converts the soul instantaneously, there is no way by which we may escape the intermediate stages of the journey to the heavenly city. There is sound theology, as well as noble sentiment, in J. G. Holland's beautiful poem, "Gradatim," for it accords with the exhortation, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling: for it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure."

"Heaven is not reached at a single bound;
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the low earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to the summit round by round.

"I count this thing to be grandly true:
That a noble deed is a step toward God—
Lifting the soul from the common sod
To a purer air and a broader view.

"We rise by the things that are under our feet;
By what we have mastered of good and gain;
By the pride deposed and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet."

Toilsome marches, afflictions, slips, buffetings of temptation, persecution—all these enter into our experience, and contribute to the perfecting and purifying of our natures. The promise reads, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." It is written that the "Captain of our salvation was made perfect through sufferings." Oh, blessed thought, that our Lord "leads us through no darker rooms than he went through before."

In the Christian life there is no place for self-congratulation, or for resting on one's oars. Just as the contestant in the Olympian games kept his eye steadily fixed upon the goal toward which he pressed with all his might, so we must ever press onward and upward, forgetting past successes and failures. The great danger is that, ere the race is ended, we will relax our spiritual energy, and look back upon the course already run. To pause, however, means loss, and possibly ruin. Stagnation is the companion of failure and the precursor of death. Activity, in the spiritual as well as in the physical realm, signifies life and progress.

"Not, my soul, what thou hast done,
But what thou now art doing;
Not the course which thou hast run,
But that which thou'rt pursuing;
Not the prize already won,
But that which thou'rt wooing."

A church member may be the best man in his community; but if he ceases to grow after having become thus good, he has totally misinterpreted the nature of Christianity. The inspired apostle had attained heights in holiness which few of us can hope to reach, yet he testified thus: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." For the Christian there is always something better further on. The "new birth" is the starting point, and heaven is the goal. The more definitely marked is our initial experience, the surer and more confident will be our running. As the acorn contains the lordly oak in miniature, so the regenerate man has in him the germ from which may be developed the lovely tree of Christian character.

What would the world think of an artist who, after having finished one masterpiece, would spend the rest of his days in admiring its beauties and praising its merits? More than one general has suffered reproach and loss by not following up the enemy after a splendid victory. How much more foolish is the Christian who, having achieved a great victory over sin, and having his heart filled with joy unspeakable, rests content with this experience! How long, think you, will he have cause for peace and boastfulness? "There is no safety," says Dr. Stephen Olin, "but in perpetual diligence and advancement."

Christians who have a low ideal, and are easily satisfied with their work and improvement, would do well to learn a lesson from the reply which Lord Nelson gave to one of his officers after the battle of the Nile. The officer had assigned as a reason for not pursuing another of the defeated enemy's ships that they had already captured nineteen of the French fleets, and had done remarkably well. "Sir," said Nelson, "if we had captured thirty, and allowed one to escape when we might have taken her, I should not call it well done." Nothing short of the perfection of our Great Exemplar should be the ideal aimed at by the Christian. The possibilities of growth are infinite; the riches of grace and knowledge inexhaustible. We can not please God unless we strive continually to be like him. "Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." And if "we wait upon the Lord, we shall mount up with wings as eagles; we shall run, and not be weary; and we shall walk, and not faint."

The Methodist Review of Missions.

The August number of this splendid Southern Methodist missionary periodical measures up to the high standard of excellence hitherto maintained. The first article, headed "A Visit to the Bakuba of Africa," is exceedingly interesting, being part of an address delivered at Hampton, Va., by Rev. Wm. H. Sheppard, F. R. G. S., a former student of Hampton, and now a missionary to Africa. "Prayer and the Kingdom," by Rev. J. H. Pritchett, Mexico, Mo., is a vigorous and helpful paper. The three-fold sin of the church, the Doctor says, is prayerlessness, faithlessness, covetousness. Among the many striking thoughts presented is this: "A saved man who does nothing to save somebody else breaks the circuit of divine grace, and plays the part of a needless ground-wire." Next follows a most inspiring and instructive address by Archdeacon Farrar on "Missions a Success," which we wish every churchman, indifferent and doubtful as to missionary progress, could read. We quote one sentence therefrom: "Is it not perfectly erroneous to talk of the failure of missions when they started with one hundred and twenty despised Galileans, and when now—not taking the number of other divisions of Christians—there are at least one hundred and twenty millions of Protestants, and they have in their power almost all the wealth and almost all the resources of the world?"

Dr. J. M. Weems, of the Mississippi Conference, in an entertaining and well-written article upon "Young Life in Mexican Homes," throws much light upon the subject. He makes the startling statement that during the three years of his ministry in the land of the Montezumas he never heard a song from the lips of woman or child, nor did he hear man or boy whistling a tune, except among the converts to Protestantism. Rev. F. K. Struve, Vancebnrg, Ky., contributes a paper on "Divine Authority and Example for Missionary Effort," in which he pleads for an advance. "One hundred men to the front this year! Why not? Ten cents as a special offering from each member will do it." "Demon Possession and Allied Themes," a recent book, is reviewed by Dr. J. M. Wright. The "Lone Star" incident of the Telugu Mission, in India, narrated in the editorial department, reads like a tale of fiction. The department of miscellany is also full of intensely interesting matter.

A missionary spirit and missionary liberality would be greatly promoted by the wide circulation of our Review of Missions. Every layman, as well as preacher, ought to take it. The price, $1, is within the reach of all.

A Righteous Decision.

Judge Moise, of this city, last week rendered a decision to the effect that social clubs which furnish liquor to their members are as amenable to the Sunday law as the private saloons, and hereafter can have no exemption. For some time effort has been made to have the Sunday-closing law enforced, but with only partial success. The social clubs, of which there are quite a number, have all along been claiming special privilege, and, of course, an evasion of such magnitude was necessarily demoralizing upon the public at large.

The most important points brought out in the decision are:

"If, under the law, employes of club saloons are forced to labor on Sunday, while those of saloons owned by private individuals are not; and if the clubman can get his Sunday drink while the ordinary citizen can not, then the law would be partial in its operation. To so construe the law would confer special privileges upon social clubs and their members, doing violence to that maxim of constitutional law requiring statutes to be general in their operation. The principal object of the law is to secure to all laborers, mental and physical, one day of rest in the week. It is a general law, and is intended to operate with equality and uniformity throughout the State, and without class distinction of any sort. Upon what principle, then, of reason or justice, would the Legislature deprive employes in the saloons of social clubs of their day of rest, when this privilege is enjoyed by others of the same class?

"If club saloons were permitted to sell liquors on Sundays, New Orleans would soon contain more social clubs than any city on earth. This would be an easy, available and effective means of evading the law, and would rather encourage than repress the evils intended to be corrected."

The justice of this ruling is bound to be generally recognized. The city is to be congratulated upon having such an incorruptible and impartial judge. It does seem, after all, that the opposers of the Sunday law are not to have things entirely their own way. Let all good citizens lend every encouragement to the city officials and police in their endeavors to stop the selling of liquor on Sunday.

An Ill-Treated Word.

A much-abused word is the word "consecration." In the religious sense it means a solemn dedication or setting apart of oneself to the service of God, and in every case precedes the consciousness of pardon. Genuine consecration always includes the dedication of all our powers and faculties to holy uses. Consecration which is not entire is spurious, nor does God honor such an imperfect act of devotion by the gift of his Spirit. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." (Luke ix, 23.)

A New Book.

READING AND SPEAKING. Familiar Talks to Those Who Would Speak Well in Public; With a Thorough Presentation of Mandeville's System of Sentential Delivery. By Brainerd Gardner Smith, Upson Professor of Rhetoric and Oratory in Hamilton College. 12 mo. 199 pages. 1895. D. C. Heath & Co., Boston, Mass.

This is an excellent treatise, containing in small compass suggestions, rules, hints, encouragements, warnings, examples, illustrations—all bearing on the "noble art of oratory;" and is likely to be helpful to young men and others interested in speech-making. The author says in the introduction: "My one aim is to help young men to a natural, comfortable, manly, forceful manner of speech in public. That is not oratory, but it is a long stride towards it." The book is well adapted to class-room work, and will be found of considerable value to teachers and students, as well as to readers in general. At the close are appended twenty-three brief, but well-chosen, declamations for practice. Among the subjects discussed are: "Control of the Breath;" "Faults, and How to Cure Them;" "Good Articulation and a Natural Manner;" "Gesture;" "Physical Earnestness." The closing chapter contains "Suggestions by Experienced Speakers," as Hon. Seth Low, president Columbia College; George William Curtis, and others.

PERSONALS.

The family of Dr. E. E. Hoss are spending the Summer at Monteagle, Tenn., where the Doctor owns a cottage.

Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, of Bay St. Louis spent two or three days in the Crescent City last week. He looked to be in fine health and spirits.

Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald is summering at Newport, R. I. He is announced to preach at Tremont Street Methodist Church, Boston, the last Sunday in this month.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, of the Louisiana Conference, is in the city under medical treatment and will remain several weeks. Surgical operations performed so far have been decidedly successful.

Bishop Galloway is to deliver the next series of Cole lectures before the theological students of Vanderbilt University. "The Evidential Value of Christian Missions" is the subject he has selected.

Rev. T. H. Yun, a Corean graduate of Vanderbilt University, has become vice-minister of education for the Corean government. He is said to be the only outspoken Christian in office in that country.

Dr. I. S. Hopkins, president of the Georgia School of Technology, will supply the pulpit at Trinity Church, Atlanta, the rest of the year in place of Dr. Bigham, the newly elected educational secretary.

The many friends of Rev. George Bancroft, of the Mississippi Conference, will be glad to know that he is sufficiently vigorous to preach every Sunday and also to do efficient service in revival meetings. He is now a resident of Meridian.

Rev. J. M. Henry, of Moreau Street Methodist Church, of this city, left last Monday for Newberry, S. C., where he goes to visit his mother. Madame Rumor has it that he will visit somebody else also. He will be gone several weeks.

Rev. A. S. Andrews, D. D, left recently for Asheville, N. C., where he will lecture before the Biblical Assembly, in session at that place. Asheville is best known as a health resort, as the home of Bishop J. C. Granbery, of George Vanderbilt and Bill Nye.—Greenville, Ala., Advocate.

Prof. Edwin Mims, of the chair of English, in Trinity College, is taking a course of special studies at Cornell University during the vacation. Prof. Mims is a scholarly young man, and will spare no effort to keep his department in the front rank for efficient work.—North Carolina Advocate.

With the issue of July 18 Rev. George J. Bond assumed editorial charge of the Halifax Wesleyan. Mr. Bond was one of the Canadian delegates to the Chattanooga Epworth League Conference, at which he made a great hit. He is said to be an able and cultured Christian gentleman. We wish him much success.

Married in parlor, Wesley Hall, July 27, by Drs. W. R. Lambuth and W. F. Tillet, Miss Jennie Counell to Rev. T. H. Haden. They left at once for Kobe, Japan, where Mr. Haden will engage in missionary work under the direction of our Board of Missions. The bride is the granddaughter of the late Bishop Joshua Soule.—Tennessee Methodist.

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes.

W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

P. S.—Should you fail to get the full quota of subscribers, you will get a good cash commission. W. C. B.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

The Fall session of this institution of learning will begin Sept. 11, 1895, with a full faculty and a large patronage from different sections of the country. As pastor of this college, I desire to call the attention of the friends of female education, and especially the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, to the school. There are five instructors in the literary department, all of whom have had fine training, and some of whom have enjoyed the best advantages of the East and of Europe. Latin, Greek, French and German will all be taught by instructors who are thoroughly qualified to teach them. The teachers of English have made special preparation for their work, and we believe that the work done in this department here will be as good as is done anywhere,

Dr. Malone has secured the services of Miss Burgess, who has been abroad for some time, to teach English literature, and that means that it will be efficiently done. Miss Ludie Williams is to teach higher mathematics and history, and she has no superior in the State. Miss Sallie Fort is to be hall teacher and instructor in science and mathematics, and to those who know her she needs no introduction as a woman of superior talents and a consecrated Christian. Mrs. E. G. Payne will continue in charge of the preparatory department. For thirteen years she filled this very responsible place, and for excellency of character, fitness for the place, and consecration to her work, she is without an equal in this country. There are to be four instructors in the music department: Miss Conly, Miss Neblett, Mrs. Calkins, and Mrs. Malone. As I do not know much about music, but being passionately fond of it, I will say: They can beat everything I ever heard. They teach vocal and instrumental music. They give lessons on the organ, piano, violin, mandolin, guitar, banjo, cornet, and all the rest. Miss Callie E. Daman will have charge of the art department. With a very handsome art studio fitted up in the fifth story, and with Miss Daman as teacher, this department is thoroughly prepared to give the young ladies the very best advantages. Mrs. A. M. Calkins is teacher of elocution and physical culture. The last has just been added, and Dr. Malone feels assured that, with the addition of a splendid gymnasium, the department will be appreciated. The boarding department will be under the immediate supervision of Mrs. Malone and Mrs. Cone.

All these teachers are consistent and consecrated members of the Methodist Church, and this whole property—from the first brick to the roof of tin—belongs to the church. The outlook is very hopeful. Dr. Malone confidently expects the largest patronage in the history of the college. He has put down board and tuition to the lowest figure. Considering the advantages offered, it is a very cheap school.

How We Carried the County.

Grenada county has long been the whisky stronghold of North Mississippi. We had kept the whisky devil at bay for four months, and on the sixth of August we had a local-option election which resulted in a prohibition victory. For two weeks before the election we worked and prayed, and the whole county was stirred from one end to the other. Judge A. T. Roone and Hon. W. C. McLean—two prominent members of the Presbyterian Church; Hon. W. M. Dubard, a prominent member of the Methodist Church, Rev. W. J. O'Bryan and myself, accompanied by eight ladies and six boys with organ and cornets, went from neighborhood to neighborhood preaching, singing and praying prohibition, until the whole country was ablaze. Rev. J. C. Carothers, of the Presbyterian Church, was with us three-fourths of the time and rendered us valuable service. Rev. R. W. Merrill, of the Baptist Church, and Rev. L. H. Snell, of the Episcopal Church, did fine work, but were prevented from being with us all around the county. Mr. Archie Roone and Mr. Alfred West, two boys, delivered addresses every day, and reached a large class of young men. In making the canvass we traveled 160 miles, offered 20 prayers, delivered 50 speeches and sung 250 songs.

Quite a number of people from Grenada accompanied us to every appointment. Great crowds welcomed us at every place, and sinners were converted to Christ as well as to prohibition. When our party of 35 returned to town about 500 people met us on the public square to welcome us back.

On Monday before the election we had a big rally in town. At least 2,000 people were present, and nine-tenths of them pledged themselves to prohibition. On the day of the election about 100 ladies met in the Methodist Church and had an all-day meeting. No one got tired; there was not a yawn or a nod, but earnest prayer and joyful testimony followed each other all day. What joy filled the hearts of the people when the news came that we had carried the county by 203 majority! King Alcohol is dethroned in Grenada, and we are free. Praise the Lord!

A Word of Approval.

A good woman from Mississippi writes:

MR. EDITOR: I often feel like thanking you for the good things in the ADVOCATE. Those who passed that resolution will doubtless incur adverse criticism, so I write this word of thanks and approval.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE HEALING OF THE CENTURIAN'S SERVANT.

A centurian—that is, a captain of a hundred soldiers. A Roman, and, presumably, hitherto heathen soldier.

1. The centurian, a prominent and, likely, rich man interested in his afflicted servant.

(1) A servant not our inferior because of possible poverty. That we inherited riches, or enjoy better annmen in acquiring wealth, not a reason for pride and arrogance.

(2) A servant serves for his wages. Gives and receives quid pro quo. It is a mercantile transaction. The vendor of his labor not less honorable than the purchaser of same.

(3) The laboring classes are not so much galled because of low wages, as by the manifest disdain on the part of the employer.

2. Christ commends the centurian's course and grants his request.

(1) He was solicitous about his servant's restoration to health. Unanommon. Now when a servant can not serve, he is sent away.

(2) The centurian was genuinely humble. Deemed himself unworthy to have the Master cross his threshold. More than anything else, pride, Pharisaism, prevents conversion.

(3) The centurian had strong faith in Christ. Believed that the laws of nature were at the Master's command, the same as his soldiers to him.

(4) Of course, the servant was healed. Just in accordance with his faith. Oh, for such faith! It would revolutionize our surroundings.

3. In conclusion, Christ foretells the success of his church. Converts would be brought in from all parts of the world.

(1) The vision to Peter of a large sheet containing unclean animals, etc., was expressive of religious barriers, hitherto in vogue, being removed.

(2) Thus, previous to his ascension to heaven, Christ enjoins his disciples to go into all the world, etc.

(3) The indicated happy consummation is had in view when we pray, "Thy kingdom come!"

(4) Many. Are you included? Your loved ones? Our interest in the cause of missions among the heathen should not cause us to forget that "the Greeks are at our door." If we do our duty, our children and relatives will not find a home where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Union Epworth League Meeting.

Last Thursday evening, at the Craps Street Church, a large congregation of young people gathered to transact the business of the League and be entertained by the excellent program which was gotten up specially for the occasion. It was conceded that it was the best attended union meeting ever held in this city. Representatives of every League in the city were present.

The church was artistically decorated, and immediately over the altar hung the motto of the League: "All for Christ." Upon entering the church everyone was presented with a badge of yellow and white, the colors of the League.

The reports from every League in the city showed a marked improvement along all lines, and interest in the coming State Conference is increasing. The prayer of the New Orleans Leagues is that the coming Conference might be a complete success, and, judging from the way the young people have taken hold of the matter, it will be a grand success.

The feature of the evening was an excellently prepared paper by Miss Addie McKnight, who gave an entertaining account of the Second International Conference. The address created much enthusiasm.

Leagues will shortly be organized in Gretna and Carrollton.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

HOME CIRCLE.

WHICH ARE YOU?

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

There are two kinds of people on earth to-day,
Just two kinds of people—no more, I say.

Not the sinner and saint, for 'tis well understood
The good are half bad, and the bad are half good.

Not the rich and the poor, for to count a man's wealth
You must first know the state of his conscience and health.

Not the humble and proud, for in life's little span
Who puts on vain airs is not counted a man.

Not the happy and sad, for the swift flying years
Bring each man his laughter, and each man his tears.

No; the two kinds of people on earth I mean,
Are the people who lift, and the people who lean.

Wherever you go, you will find the world's masses
Are always divided in just these two classes.

And oddly enough, you will find, too, I ween,
There is only one lifter to twenty who lean.

In which class are you? Are you easing the load
Of overtaxed lifters who toil down the road?

Or are you a leaner, who lets others bear
Your portion of labor and worry and care?

—Harper's Weekly.

Spare Time.

A party of ladies and gentlemen were shown through a large carpet establishment in Brooklyn not long ago. They were permitted to look into every nook and corner of the building except one. At the bottom of the stairway leading to the top floor they came upon a closed door, upon which were the words, "Positively no Admittance." The curiosity of the ladies was awakened at once. "What is up there?" inquired one, eagerly. "That is our workshop," explained the representative of the firm. "We have one hundred and fifty women on that floor sewing carpets."

"Oh, I should so like to see them at work," said the fair questioner, with a playfully beseeching look.

"I am sorry that I can not take you up there," replied the firm's representative, "but the rules are very strict. Really, there is nothing worth looking at, and there are no trade secrets there. The reason why the firm interdicts visitors is because the presence of strangers causes every sewing-woman to look up, and takes her attention off her work from one to five minutes. Suppose every woman loses an average of two minutes. With one hundred and fifty women that means a loss to the firm of three hundred minutes, or five hours of time. That is too much to lose when we are working under a full head of steam, as we are now."

"Put no marks of punctuation on the back of the volumes," a famous librarian once said to his book-binder; "my eyes have no time for such superfluities."

William Herschel discovered Uranus, the greatest discovery of the telescope. He had hitherto been known as a clever amateur astronomer, who had spent the intervals between his musical studies in writing a theory on the height of the mountains of the moon, or in manufacturing telescopes. Music was his profession, but so jealous was he of the spare moments he might give to astronomy that he habitually rushed from the orchestra between the acts, to snatch brief glimpses of the heavens. No one ever appreciated the value of time more than Lord Nelson. "Five minutes," he used to say, "make the difference between a victory and a defeat."—Lucy E. Keeler, in Youth's Companion.

A Story about Crabs.

The ancients tell a very instructive fable about the crabs who once deliberated in council what to do in order to amend their backward walk:

"It is a shame for us," said the speaker, addressing the assembly, "to walk contrary to all other animals. Whenever a man is unfortunate in his business at once they say, 'He walks like a crab.' We must suffer this no longer. As regards ourselves we are too old to change our habit; but let us make it a law that every parent shall train his young one, by all ways and means, never to walk otherwise than forward. Our descendants will then gradually amend the disgraceful oddity of our species."

The law proposed was unanimously adopted, and the meeting dissolved.

"It is now time," said the old crab to the young one, "that you learn to walk."

"How must I do it?" inquired the youngster.

"Lift up your feet, one after the other, and put them straight ahead, and pay attention not to walk in any other way," was the parent's reply.

"Father, walk ahead and show me," was the youngster's demand.

The old one began to walk in his old fashion, and the young one followed him at once in like manner.

"Hold!" cried the old one in anger. "Didn't I not tell you to walk straight ahead; why don't you obey me?"

"I can not do differently from your example," the little one meekly replied.

To be brief, the old crab could effect nothing to the purpose by all his explanations and threats; and this is the reason why all the crabs still walk backwards.—Baltimore Christian Advocate.

Make It Plain.

People do not always take pains enough when instructing children in religious matters to see that they understand what is taught; consequently a child will often get entirely mistaken ideas in regard to important things, and very queer ones, too, sometimes, as the following true incidents will show:

A little girl had been taught that when good people died their bodies were buried in the ground, but their souls were taken to heaven; and, not knowing that one's soul is one's self, imagined that the souls in heaven were little round things about the size of a watch crystal, and the color of a white porcelain button, ranged in rows on shelves like the plates in her mother's pantry.

A Sunday-school teacher in talking to her class of little girls used the word dogma, and probably all that she said showed equal wisdom, for one child, struck by the word as a pretty-sounding one, and one she had never heard before, and getting no idea of its meaning from the connection in which it was used, thought it must mean a little dog.

One night a gentleman found his little boy sobbing in bed, and went to him to see what was the trouble. He found him in great distress, fearing that he was not a Christian, and the reason he gave was that he was quite sure he would get very tired of doing nothing but sing through all eternity; and he thought, since he felt in that way, it must be that he was not a Christian.

A little time spent in the endeavor to find out what ideas the children have and in making things clear to them will not be lost.

Make it plain.—The Lookout.

What Some Wives Have to Bear.

A stout, pleasant-faced woman got into a Harrow train at Baker Street Station, followed by a man with gray hair and closely cropped gray mustache and a dyspeptic expression.

They sat on the sunny side of the carriage. The man relapsed into a gloomy silence. The woman looked around the carriage and tried to be cheerful.

"Cold, isn't it?" she observed.

"What?" growled the man.

"Rather cold."

"Where?"

"Here."

"Well, I suppose you can stand it."

The woman took the man's sourness as if she was used to it. After a bit she said: "What pretty flowers!"

"What?" growled the man.

"I said what pretty flowers."

"Where?"

"At the house we passed!"

"Well, what of it?"

Five minutes later she said: "Isn't that a nice baby?"

"What?"

"Isn't that a nice baby?"

"Where?"

"There," pointing to a beautiful little boy on the opposite side of the carriage.

"Looks like a fool."

It was Sunday. A peal of bells could be heard while the train stopped at a station.

"That's nice music," said the woman.

"What?"

"That's nice music."

"Which?"

"Why, those chimes."

"Sounds like a lot of cowbells."

Do you wonder that wives sometimes do not "love, honor and obey?"—London Woman.

The Breath of Life.

Procure a tolerably large bell glass, such as is used for covering clocks and ornaments upon the mantlepiece. It should not be less than eighteen inches high, and eight or nine inches in diameter. Provide also a common dish, sufficiently large to allow the bell glass to stand well within its raised border. Then procure two little wax candles, three or four inches in length, and stand each in a little bottle or other temporary candlestick. Place them in the center of the dish, and light the wicks. Then pour water into the dish to the depth of nearly an inch, and finish by placing the bell over the candles, which of course are then closely shut in. For a few minutes all goes on properly. The flames burn steadily, and seem to laugh at the idea of their being about to die. But presently they become faint—first one, then the other; the luster and the size of the flames diminish rapidly, and then they go out. This is because the burning candles consumed all the oxygen that was contained within the volume of atmosphere which was in the bell, and were unable, on account of the water, to get new supplies from outside. It illustrates, in the most perfect manner, our own need of constant supplies of good fresh air. The experiment may be improved, or at all events varied, by using candles of different lengths.—St. Nicholas.

"Mr. Ten Minutes."

A touching story is told of the late Prince Napoleon. He had joined the English army, and was one day at the head of a squad riding horseback outside the camp. It was a dangerous situation. One of the company said: "We had better return. If we don't hasten, we may fall into the hands of the enemy." "Oh," said the Prince, "let us stay here ten minutes and drink our coffee." Before the ten minutes had passed, a company of Zulus came upon them, and in the skirmish the Prince lost his life.

His mother, when informed of the facts, in her anguish said:

"That was his great mistake from babyhood. He never wanted to go to bed at night in time, nor to rise in the morning. He was ever pleading for ten minutes more. When too sleepy to speak, he would lift up his two little hands, and spread out ten fingers, indicating that he wanted ten minutes more. On this account I sometimes called him 'Mr. Ten Minutes.'"

How many have lost not only their lives, but their precious, immortal souls by this sin of procrastination! When God calls, we should promptly obey.—Episcopal Recorder.

The poorest girls in the world are those not taught to work. There are thousands of them. Rich parents have petted them, and they have been taught to despise labor and to depend upon others for a living; and are perfectly helpless. The most forlorn women belong to this class. It is the duty of parents to protect their daughters from this deplorable condition. They do them a great wrong if they neglect it. Every daughter should be taught to earn her own living. The rich as well as the poor require this training. The wheel of fortune rolls swiftly around; the rich are likely to become poor, and the poor rich. Well-to-do-parents must educate their daughters to work.—London Gentlewoman.

Going to Bed Hungry.

Fasting during the long interval between supper and breakfast, and especially the complete emptiness of the stomach during sleep, add greatly to the amount of emaciation, sleeplessness and general weakness so often met with. It is well known that in the body there is perpetual disintegration of tissue, sleeping or waking; it is, therefore, natural to believe that the supply of nourishment should be somewhat continuous, especially in those in whom the vitality is lowered. As bodily exercise is suspended during sleep, with wear and tear correspondingly diminished, while digestion, assimilation and nutritive activity continue as usual, the food furnished during this period adds more than is destroyed; and increased weight and improved general vigor are the result. All animals, except man, eat before sleep, and there is no reason why man should form an exception to the rule. I am satisfied that were the weakly, the emaciated and the sleepless nightly to take a light meal of simple, nutritious food before going to bed, for a prolonged period, nine in ten of them would thereby be raised to a better standard of health. It is found that after digesting a bowl of bread and milk, or a saucer of oat meal and cream, before going to bed, for a few months, a surprising increase in weight, strength and general tone has resulted. Persons who are stout and plethoric are recommended to follow an opposite course.—Dr. W. T. Cathell, in Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Summer Breakfasts.

Easy, comfortable, appetizing breakfast dishes will help. It is best to plan the breakfast exactly over night, and always arrange it so that the preparation in the morning will not be too burdensome. A pretty, tasteful table is never more grateful than on a very warm morning. Fruit and flowers are the best adornments. A single rose, broken at the window, perhaps, and put in a glass, will give a touch of true grace and refinement which has its effect, even if not immediately appreciated. Fresh strawberries, currants, cherries, or whatever is in season, give relish as well as beauty. Fruit is "gold in the morning," and to many persons never quite so good as at breakfast. The actual cookery should be very light. A little skill will produce variety from the simplest resources; and a few simple dishes may be extended by easy variation to a far greater number.—Selected.

The Eclectic Medical Journal says that the continued use of the eyes, in such work as sewing, typesetting, bookkeeping, reading and studying, the saving point is looking up from the work at short intervals and looking around the room. This may be practiced every ten or fifteen minutes. This relieves the muscular tension, rests the eyes and makes the blood supply much better.

Children should be trained to eat slowly, no matter how hungry or what important business is pressing. Much safer a little food well ground than a hearty meal swallowed in haste. Cold food is even more difficult to digest than hot if taken too rapidly. The normal temperature of the stomach is about ninety-eight degrees. Food has to be raised to this temperature before digestion can take place.—Ex.

It is said to be a rule of the American line of steamers, that no captain or other officer, sailor or other employee, shall use intoxicating liquor as a drink.—Pittsburg Advocate.

TOMATOES, FRIED.—Wash and wipe four large tomatoes, cut each one into three slices; season with one even teaspoonful of salt, one-half even teaspoonful of pepper, dust over with flour; dip each slice separately into beaten egg, and cover with grated bread crumbs. NULLINAX—Mrs. D. W. Nullinax (nee Jackson), was born Feb. 22, 1824. In 1847 she was married to Joel T. Hough, and eighteen years after his death she was married to Mr. Matthew Nullinax, who still survives her.

For fifty-three years she was a devoted Christian and on the thirteenth of July, 1895, "she was not, for God took her" to himself. She was a good woman in all her relations in life, and her three children are imitating her example. She died in hope of a glorious immortality, and is gone to her reward.

A short time before her death she sent the following clipping to one of her daughters as expressive of her feelings:

HOME-COMING.

When life's hours of toil are ended,
And my day draws to a close;
When the bells of evening, chiming,
Call me to my long reposo,
Eagerly my feet shall hasten,
And my eyes shall look to sea,
That line close by heaven's portals,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

They who long from that far country
Watched me as I faltered on,
In earth's weary round of labor,
Strength and courage almost gone.
When they see me drop life's burdens
And to heaven's refuge flee,
Swift will gather round the portals
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

And when on their silver hinges
Wide the gates of pearl shall swing,
And by grace of Him who loved me
I am suffered to come in,
First of heaven's joys to greet me
In that joyful hour shall be,
As I pass those shining portals,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

Then the cords which earth's rude conflict
Here had broken shall be joined,
And beyond death's gloomy kingdom
Still more strongly shall be twined.
Ah! my heart, fail not thy singing,
Though the way may weary be,
Soon my joyful eyes shall see them,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

—Selected.

She is now waiting for loved ones on the shining shore. THOS. J. UPTON.

BARTHE—Miss LOUISE BARTHE was one of the youngest of a large family which had been raised in New Iberia, and in great measure also in the Methodist Church; and after a useful life, which had about reached meridian, she died in great peace at Abbeville in the month of last June. For several months she was under the writer's pastoral charge, and rarely has he known a more beautiful and consistent Christian character. Of a quiet temperament and reserved manner, she did not usually impress strangers. Few ever came in speaking distance of her, however, without being profoundly convicted that they were in the presence of a disciple of Christ. She was one of two members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society when the writer took charge at New Iberia, and, perhaps, the best friend of missions in the whole community. She was also a member of the Ladies' Aid Society, and a valued teacher in the Sunday-school. She made a profession of entire sanctification several years before her death; professed it wherever she went, and avowed it as a supreme subject of comfort in her last hours. She was universally beloved in the church and community where she had lived from infancy. A large crowd of weeping friends and relatives attended her funeral. May He who comforted her in life and death comfort these sorrowing ones, and may her godly example inspire them all not only to become Christians, but to be "faithful unto death!" J. M. BEARD, P. C.

CREWS—WILLIE CREWS, son of W. H. Crews and wife, of New Iberia, La., died at New Iberia in January of the present year, in the twenty-fifth year of his age. Bro. Crews was converted under the ministry of Rev. Fitzgerald S. Parker in February, 1890, and rapidly developed in the Christian graces until he reached what appeared to the writer and many others a very strong resemblance to maturity. He was an experimental Christian, always ready to give a good reason of the hope that was in him. His religious influence in his home community was very marked, as was attested by the large crowd of mourners who attended his funeral obsequies. His death is regarded in the community as a public calamity. No young man of the town or religious community will be so much missed. Early in his religious life he felt a call to preach, and having obtained a license as local preacher, he exercised in public with much acceptability and promise for two or three years previous to his death. He was possessed of talents which had been fairly improved by education, and gave promise of great usefulness. He was for several years a pupil of Prof. Harrison, of McTyeire Institute, Tennessee. But it was in the family circle, where he was best known, that he was most valued, and where his loss will be most keenly felt. May the great Comforter be their portion in this sad bereavement, and may they so profit by his example as some day to form a united family in heaven!

J. M. BEARD, P. C.

STARNES—Died at the home of her mother, in Wesson, Miss., May 26, 1895, JULIA, second daughter of J. T. and Josephine Starnes, and granddaughter of Judge Wadsworth.

Julia was a Christian, and while we feel sad, she is with God and the angels. No more headaches; no more sending for the kind doctor, who was always so ready to go and ease her pain. She was a patient sufferer for three years, but now the great Physician has healed her diseases.

Mother, what more could you have to comfort your sorrowing heart? Sisters and little brothers, love God and keep his commandments, and soon you will see Julia and live with her in heaven.

Sweet friend, adieu! We confidently expect to meet you in "the land of unclouded day."

LILLIAN LEE BEESLEY.

ALLEN—Died, at his residence, in Homer, La., July 22, 1895, FRANK N. ALLEN, aged forty-nine years five months and twenty-four days.

Bro. Allen had been sick more than two years, and for a year or so before he died he was confined to his room and bed. He suffered a great deal, but was never heard to murmur. He told the writer often during his sickness that he was perfectly submissive, and willing for God's will to be done, and when the ordeal of death came it had no sting. He had trusted God and lived right; hence could die right. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

He left a wife—his second—an aged mother, two daughters, one sister, two brothers and lots of friends to mourn his loss to them, but they rejoice in the full assurance that he has a home in heaven.

Among all the good deeds of his useful life the best one for his family was the carrying of $7,000 life insurance. He was buried July 23, with Pythian honors, in the Homer Cemetery beside his lovely daughter, Ruth, who preceded him about two and a half years.

To his family and mother: Dry your tears. Live as he did, and you will die as he did, and ere long it will be a reunited family in heaven, where all shall be as the angels of God.

F. C. GREENWOOD.

Homer, La.

TAYLOR—Rev. NATHAN TAYLOR was born in Stork county, Ohio, July 21, 1816. He died at his home in Pleasant Hill, La., July 11, 1895.

Bro. Taylor was a superannuated member of the Kansas Conference of the M. E. Church at the time of his death. He served for more than forty years in the regular itinerant work. He came South a few years back, and made this town his home, where he has a host of friends, for he has so lived among us that we love him for his piety, his generous disposition, and deeds of love. Although he could no longer take regular work, he was still active in the Lord's work, doing all he could in the Sabbath-school, among the colored people, and among his neighbors. During his sickness he often spoke of the sufferings of Christ, and his love for Christ was beautiful to behold. Once, when I referred to his long, active life in the ministry he replied, "I am a poor sinner saved by grace." Often have I sought the company of this man of God, and felt it a great blessing to have his fatherly counsel and example of love. Yes, truly a good man has gone home.

J. B. WILLIAMS.

ROBERTS—BENJAMIN F. ROBERTS died at Rolling Fork, on May 31, 1895, in the seventieth year of his age. Since his departure public attention is directed to his great devotion to the cause of Christ. That Rolling Fork has a nicely planned and splendidly constructed church-building is due largely to his personal efforts. I am informed that much of the timber used was cut and sawed and put up with his own hand; and often by gifts in money from his own purse the work was hastened on. So great was his love for the church that it was in his heart to bequeath his residence for a preacher's home.

A short time before his death, during the delivery of an earnest lecture on missions, his heart was deeply stirred over the condition of the heathen world, and at the close, with tears in his eyes, he brought forward a pair of golden-framed pebble glasses and deposited it with the secretary of the society, wishing the proceeds to be used for missionary purposes. At that time silver and gold he had none, but gave such as he had.

Literary Notes.

The leading article in The Monthly Illustrator, for August, is, as usual, upon the work of a prominent American artist. In this case it is Frederick Dielman, more than a dozen of whose paintings and sketches serve as admirable illustrations to an appreciative paper by Alfred Trumble upon the work of this 'painter of the beautiful." This is followed by the fourth of Arthur Hoeber's papers, entitled "My Pet Subject," which serves as a vehicle to exhibit the preferences in choice of motif of several well-known men and women. Thus the first twenty pages of The Monthly Illustrator, for August, exhibit the work of not less than twenty artists, including Frederick Dielman, W. Verplanck Birney, M. F. H. de Haas, James A. Fraser, W. T. Thomson, James Symington, and others of reputation. Published and edited by Harry C. Jones, 92, 94 and 96 Fifth avenue, New York.

Herbert Spencer opens the August Popular Science Monthly with the fourth of his papers on Professional Institutions. Andrew D. White, writing on The Continued Growth of Scientific Interpretation, describes the battle by which reason conquered tradition in English theology. In the series on the Development of American Industries since Columbus, John G. Morse describes Apparatus for Extinguishing Fires, with many pictures of apparatus, ancient and modern. Prof. E. L. Richards sets forth the importance of The Physical Element in Education. In this number we have some lines by David Starr Jordan, addressed To Barbara, with a portait of a charming little girl. Garrett P. Serviss points out many celestial wonders in a trip From Lyra to Eridanus. Prof. John T. Stoddard gives a full account of Argon, the new constituent of the air. Dr. John Ferguson writes on the Nervous System and Education. Gustave Le Bon discusses The Work of Ideas in Human Evolution. There is a Sketch with Portrait of Charles Upham Shepard, the mineralogist, who collected at Amherst College the finest cabinets in America. In the Editor's Table there is a reply to Mr. Clark's article, in this number, a tribute to Prof. Huxley, and some remarks on Mr. Spencer's declination of the honor offered to him by the Emperor of Germany. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents a number, $5 a year.

The proposition to take $5,000 out of the city treasury to pay lawyers' fees for Mayor Fitzpatrick's defense from the charges of maladministration and violations of law, recently brought against him, is wholly unreasonable, and is meeting with great opposition.

At Dr. A. B. Simpson's Christian Alliance meeting, in Old Orchard, Me., Aug. 11, $65,000 was pledged for missionary work. This is the largest collection ever taken in the world in a single day for missionary purposes. Nearly 8,000 people attended the morning meeting, and the wildest enthusiasm prevailed.

Last week there was a renewal of gold shipments, the amounts withdrawn from the treasury and shipped abroad aggregating $2,000,000. As a result of these withdrawals the reserve has dropped to less than $103,000,000, and in another week, should the exports of the precious metal continue on the same scale as during the past two weeks, the reserve will have dropped to the limit of $100,000,000.

Pleasant Reading

It is pleasant to see Methodist work appreciated and commended by the secular press. An editorial writer of the Richmond Daily Times, of July 24, reviewing and praising the educational institutions of that State, says of the Randolph-Macon schools and colleges:

In the wide field of educational advantage which Virginia offers there is no institution nor association of schools and colleges which presents the distinguished and peculiar opportunities which the Randolph-Macon system extends to the country for the education of the youth and the scholarly finish of the maturer student.

A LIFE OF LIBERTY.

Father! I know that all my life
Is portioned out for me;
The changes that will surely come
I do not fear to meet
I ask thee for a subject mind,
Intent on pleasing thee.

I ask thee for a thoughtful love,
Through constant watching wise,
To meet the glad with joyful smiles,
To wipe the weeping eyes;
A heart at leisure from itself
To soothe and sympathize.

I would not have the restless will
That hurries to and fro,
Seeking for some great thing to do,
Or secret thing to know;
I would be treated as a child,
And guided where I go.

My God, I ask for daily strength,
To none that ask denied;
A mind to blend with outward life,
While keeping at thy side,
Content to fill a little space,
If thou be glorified.

Prayer.

BY REV. B. M. PALMER, D. D., Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

[The following thoughts on prayer are compiled from Dr. Palmer's recent work, "The Theology of Prayer." If there is anything better on the subject in the whole realm of religious literature, we have not found it.—EDITOR.]

It is evident that prayer can be addressed only to a personal God standing in immediate relation with the subjects whom he rules. It is no apostrophe to bold and lawless force, nor to blind and impersonal fate. Neither has it any significance if the God to whom it appeals is locked up behind the bars of nature, with no power to control the movement of the mighty machinery. Prayer is a protest against every phase of Pantheism, which warps or denies the essential personality of the deity. It is equally a remonstrance against the naturalism which renders all personality useless by sundering the ties which bind him to the creature he has made. It is an infinite personal God alone to whom finite and dependent beings can approach as to a father providing for his own. It is only to him who is the God of all grace that guilty can come, pleading for the forgiveness of sin. It is only he who is "glorious in holiness" that can receive the homage of a true worship. Each element of prayer leads directly to a personal God, as the sole object to whom it can be addressed; and each moment, in its turn, finds the duty upon the conscience with all the authority of constitutional law.

What is prayer but the language of absolute dependence upon that God from whom being itself is derived? We are accustomed to dilate fondly upon the dignity of man, in the grandeur of his intellectual powers, in the infinite expansion of which these are capable, and in the wonderful achievements which they have wrought.

But when all this has been put together, and we have reached the highest height of our ideal, we must come back to the mortifying truth that man is still a creature locked up within limits which he can not pass.

The mind, too, in every path of knowledge strikes against barriers that forbid further progress. In the very powers which nature returns to our questioning lie deeper secrets to be explored.

Even consciousness of dependence finds its only full expression in prayer. We lean upon God, and are at rest. This is prayer: when, sinking through earthly crust, the creature seeks repose in God; when from the eternal fountain he derives the help and solace which the creature always needs, and which the Creator alone can supply.

But if man has fallen from his original state of innocence, and is now under condemnation of law, then prayer takes on a new feature as the confession of sin, and becomes the language of guilt. However we may recoil from the acknowledgment, it is universal under the pressure of an accusing conscience. All the religions of earth, save Christianity alone, are religions of fear. There is scarcely a mountain-top upon which the blood of victims has not smoked upon altars dedicated to some avenging deity. The troubled confession breaks forth in a thousand ways in daily life. In sudden peril there is a mysterious unveiling of sins which, before that dismal hour, conscience had not seemed to note. At death, when eternity throws its shadow upon the soul, the spectres of the past rise as the witnesses of our guilt and crowd with us across the bourne. Nay, long before this last experience there are pauses in every man's life when a great hush is thrown upon the soul, as the law smites with the edge of the sword. Under the crushing weight of his guilt the penitent exclaims with the publican in the court of the temple, "God be merciful to me, a sinner!" This, again, is prayer: not, as before, the simple recognition of dependence upon sovereign power, nor as the homage paid to infinite perfection. It has now gone into depths far gloomier than mere sense of sufficiency and weakness. It has become the wail of a soul burdened with its guilt, and casting itself upon the mercy of God for pardon. This is prayer: not simply asking for blessings which shall fill the measure of its need, but bewailing the sin which is strangling the soul with its serpent coil, and seeking deliverance from its hideous embrace.

All the faculties which make up the complement of a rational nature are drawn into this holy act of prayer to God. Of course, this is not affirmed of routine prayer, which, falling into a round of set phrases, is as purely mechanical as the pagan petitions fastened to the arms of a wind-mill and driven by the breeze. There is no prayer that does not bring into itself the whole content of our spiritual being. If, then, one should aim only at the perfection of his own nature, on this comparatively low ground of its educational value, he can not afford to disengage himself from the office of prayer.

Again, no act so employs these powers upon the noblest objects as this of prayer. As soon as we truly kneel we touch with our thought the throne of the Most High. We mount above the stars beyond creation's limit, and the soul is alone with God. The electric current, which thrills through every fiber of the human frame, is but a faint image of that spiritual force which comes forth at this contact with the divine and pervades the human soul. Probably in our profoundest meditation we form no such conception of the majesty of God, as when in prayer we lay our littleness beside his infinite grandeur.

We touch, in touching him, all things that are awful and high in his eternal dwelling-place; and the soul feeds on all that fills the mind of Jehovah.

Again, no act so lifts the soul out of the troubles of life, and sustains it under its burdens. Just think of it! We "sink in deep mire where there is no standing," and in the twinkling of a thought we are borne, as on angel wings, into the pure region where God and the angels are. It may be only a momentary suspension of earthly cares, but it has nerved the spirit to take up again its burden, and endure to the end the discipline of grace. The buoyant spirit that soared for a moment "into the upper day," where no cloud threw its shadow on the heart, understands now the secret of a Father's chastening. The contrast has been felt between the trial and the reward; and now the neck bows meekly to the yoke which was before intolerable.

Equally so with the sorrows and bereavements of life, which are seen to have a holy connection with so much that is peculiar and individual in the happiness of heaven hereafter. There is thus no exercise of its powers in which the soul so emancipates itself from all the trammels of its connection with the body, and so nearly approaches to the omnipresence of the Deity, as when engaged in prayer. And in this marvelous obliteration of the limitations of time and space, in its hope taking possession of all that eternity itself can promise, prayer transcends in dignity and raise every employment in which man can embark on earth. Yet proud man ventures to deride that which draws him to his knees in reverential homage of his Maker, not perceiving, in all nature, that stooping to the ground but gathers up the muscles for the loftier spring that disdains the earth.

It comes in place now to recognize in prayer a sweet, but unseen, bond that holds society together. We can not ask of God the forgiveness of our sins without the explicit pledge that in like manner we will forgive those who trespass against us. Withdraw this pledge in its direct and incidental influence upon human conduct, and let loose the tiger of revenge on society everywhere, and how soon will the restraints of human law prove ineffectual to control the malice and hate burning in human hearts! Who can estimate the power of that sweet charity for the faults of others, induced by the consciousness of our own defects, which drives us daily in weak confession to the mercy-seat! Think, too, how the intercession for others, which forms a part of prayer, adds link after link in the chain of forbearance, which, like the girdle of love, passes around society and binds its parts together.

There is a sense in which prayer enters into the worship of "the spirits of just men made perfect," and of the spotless angels who are gathered into one body with them in Christ. The principalities and powers in heavenly places are still creatures, with natures grand indeed, but finite. Their holiness, like their life, is communicated, and can only be sustained by close fellowship with the Giver from whom it is derived. The fundamental idea underlying creatureship is that of insufficiency and dependence, and the sense of this must abide in the consciousness of the highest and holiest being whom the Almighty has made. In the very blessedness which fills the measure of every want and anticipates its rise, there must be the knowledge that it is drawn from the divine fullness. Just in proportion to their holiness will be the quick discernment of this dependence upon him in whom they "live and move and have their being." But this sense of creatureship lies at the very root of prayer. The articulate expression of this in the utterance of our desires belongs to the outward form of prayer, through which it receives body and shape. But the inward essence is found in the feeling of dependence, out of which petition and thanksgiving must alike spring. Many a prayer does not form itself into a speech at all. The real prayer lies back of the utterance in the thought, in the desire, in the constant and quiet attitude of the spirit towards God. The angels are thus swept within the compass of this large generalization. In the joyful consciousness of their dependence upon Jehovah, the whole posture and frame of their spirit is one continuous, concrete, and living prayer. It is not so much prayers as prayer. The entire living consciousness is one all-comprehending act of dependence upon the Infinite, without intermission, through their whole existence, and qualifying every service in which they engage.

Christianity and Mental Culture.

Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs, in his great work, "The Divine Origin of Christianity Indicated by Its Historical Effects," outlines with eloquence and learning the influence of the gospel upon the intellect of man. Among his utterances are these noble paragraphs:

Of course, popular education has been incessantly stimulated, wherever this religion has gone, by the effort to bring the general mind into immediate and quickening contact with the doctrines and precepts set forth in its books, and with the studies which these inspire.

* * * * * *

Christianity alone, with instinctive impulse, seeks to quicken and expand the minds of the humblest, that they may apprehend what she affirms to be truths of the universe, and may be lifted to contemplate his incomparable plans on the word of whose power the worlds are hung. It is at least a great aspiration. We see its effect in the millions of schools with which continents are alive, and in which are laid the sure foundations of the world's ultimate civilization. These are not special to our times. They had their origin far back in the depths of the darkness which followed the crash of the Western Empire. Before that, indeed, they had already begun to be established; and the forces manifested in their erection have never since failed in Christian communities. It is noticeable, too, that wherever such schools have once been established, their tendency has been to enlargement and expansion, under Christianity; till the "Schola" has become as of course the "Universitas," and that which started with teaching men only the contents of the Scriptures, and the general laws of Christian living, has gone back over history, has gone abroad over nature, has pierced the rocks and searched the suns, has taken learning from all languages, and discipline from all dialects, and has gathered in its enormous libraries the aggregate treasures of the mind of the world.

* * * * * *

Whatever else is true or not, the superlative educational force of the world appears embodied in this system of faith which came by peasants as its ministers, and the son of a carpenter as a mysterious sovereign Teacher. It lays its hand of supreme benediction on countries and centuries at the furthest remove from its first proclamation. It furnishes the matrix out of which genius may be expected plenteously to spring. And skeptics themselves, with whatever learning, eloquence, or wit, appear to me but involuntary witnesses to the underlying and impenetrating impulse of this religion, which has given possibility to even their hostile culture and force.

Are We Civilized?

The prospects are that we will have the disgrace of a Mexican bull fight at the coming Exposition at Atlanta, Ga. The arrangements for importing from Mexico bulls and toreadors have been completed, and the "show" promises to come off. Officers of the Humane Society appealed to the Secretary of the Treasury to prohibit the importation of the bulls, on the ground that they are immoral instruments, and of the toreadors, because their admission would be a violation of the contract labor law. But the Secretary declines to act on the ground that bulls do not seem to come within the provisions of the law against importing articles of an immoral nature, and the Commissioner of Immigration calls attention to the fact that Congress, by joint resolution, provided for the production on the Exposition grounds of "scenes illustrative of the arts, amusements, entertainments, etc., of foreign countries, and the admission of aliens by express permission of the Secretary of the Treasury." So the general government will not interfere. Whether the authorities of the State of Georgia can and will interpose, remains to be seen. Surely this disgraceful exhibition should be prevented, if possible. This enlightened age and country should not tolerate it.

It may be said that this would be simply an exhibition of one of the amusements of a foreign country, and that there can be no wrong in allowing our people to witness such an exhibition. But it is a sufficient answer to say that such an exhibition is essentially brutal, and can not but be demoralizing in its effects on the people. If there is wanted a real and impressive show of the customs of savage peoples, we can suggest some better things—things far more tragic and exciting. Let the managers bring in a band of frontier Indians, who are just now in an ugly mood, and turn them loose at the aforesaid Exposition, with the understanding that they are at liberty to scalp any of the spectators whom they might be able to catch. Or, better still, bring over a company of African cannibals, and allow them to roast and feast publicly on any of those within the grounds whom they might bring down with their weapons. We are not convinced that such exhibitions would add much to the gate receipts of the Atlanta show, but they would be samples of exciting amusements—to the actors; and they would have the merit of exempting the poor dumb brutes from human cruelty.—Pittsburg Advocate.

Bishop Boyd Carpenter remarks in his recent volume on "Preaching:" "It is the fashion (why, I know not) among young ladies who sing to be inarticulate. We may hear the voice, but not the speech of her who sings. One is tempted to ask why, when words are wedded to music, they should be denied their natural rights; or why, when words are made eloquent in melody, the power of their eloquence should be lost by their becoming inaudible." The Bishop touches one of the sorest evils of church choirs. A venerable friend of ours says that familiar words of Scripture have become a new thing to him when set to appropriate music and sung so as to be distinctly heard. But nowadays even a solo is sung so indistinctly that an attentive hearer fails to distinguish the words, and loses the chief object of the service. Thus a serious wrong is done to the major part, if not all, of the congregation.—Exchange.

Mr. Wesley's Advice to One of His Preachers.

"Your talent in preaching does not increase; it is about the same it was seven years ago; it is lively, but not deep; there is little variety; there is no compass of thought. Reading alone can supply this, with daily meditation and daily prayer. You wrong yourself greatly by omitting this. You can never be a deep preacher without it, any more than a thorough Christian. O begin! Fix some part of every day for private exercises. You may acquire the taste which you have not. What is tedious at first will afterward be pleasant. Whether you like it, or not, read and pray daily. It is for your life; there is no other way. Else you will be a trifler all your days, and a petty, superficial preacher. Do justice to your own soul; give it time and means to grow. Do not starve yourself any longer."

A humorous hit at the so-called higher criticism may sometimes be about as useful as the more staid and severe attack. A contributor to the New York Observer gets off the following: "Outside of my study window there is a pup amusing himself with the battered remains of a rag doll. What gives interest to the proceedings is that the pup's teeth are weak and the doll is tough, and the worrying process can go on indefinitely without terminating in destruction. It affords no end of fun to Bruno, and the doll is not very much the worse for the part it plays in the little comedy. I do not know what our critics will do when they get tired of worrying the book of Genesis. I am quite sure they will not wear it out; and I do not think it will be much the worse for the treatment it receives. Despite the Tuebingen school, the Gospels seem to be in about as good repair as before Baner was born, and we believe our grandchildren will find the Old Testament very much as our grandfathers left it. But for the present it affords a certain class a great deal of employment, and keeps up 'critical activity.'"

Two or three weeks ago the daily papers contained alarming news from Idaho and Wyoming, setting forth in vivid rhetoric the atrocities which had been and which were about to be perpetrated by the Bannock Indians upon the peaceful pioneer settlers of that region. The militia forces were put under arms, parties of citizens were armed and organized, and United States troops were ordered to the place of danger. It now turns out that the whites were the aggressors, that several Indians were murdered without provocation, and that the Bannocks had done no harm to anyone. The scare was created by men who are anxious to deprive the Bannocks of their treaty rights. These Indians have lived in peace with their neighbors for nearly twenty years.—Exchange.

Rapides Camp Meeting.

Seven years ago, while Bro. C. M. Lyons was stationed at Boyce, the movement to build up a camp ground and hold annual meetings was started. These meetings have been held every year since, and it is impossible to estimate the good which has resulted therefrom. At first some of the boys thought it a good place to have a good time at the expense of quiet and order; but as the management is in the hands of law-abiding, but determined, men, these festive youths soon found that they had to behave themselves. The result of this firmness on the part of the management is the best behavior ever seen on any camp ground in this State. We have had some of the best preachers in the State at every meeting. In fact, I heard one of them say the other day that he had attended the Seashore meeting just closed, and the preaching here was much better than at the Seashore.

The seventh meeting at this camp ground has just closed. It commenced on the second of August, and ended on the eleventh. We had with us the following preachers: S. J. Davies, P. E.; J. I. Hyland, J. A. Parker, James Denson, George Jackson, W. H. LaPrade, J. B. Kent, A. W. Turner, A. D. McVoy, and O. C. Weir. This meeting was fruitful. Souls were converted, believers edified, and backsliders reclaimed. Especially were we all delighted with Dr. LaPrade's preaching. His sermon at eleven o'clock on Friday will long be remembered. In his development of the parable of the prodigal son, the lights and shadows of life, and its meaning and mystery, were revealed to many a wandering child of error and unbelief. A season of refreshing followed this service. Preacher and people were borne to heights of joyous experience, and the manifestation of the Spirit's presence was clear and undoubted. God only knows how much was done. But we do not intend to make invidious comparisons. The services of all our brethren were highly welcomed and appreciated. Let them all come again and remain during the entire camp meeting. The Board of Trustees are somewhat embarrassed at times by brethren accepting the invitation to attend, and then failing to come.

Mr. Editor, we have a glorious time every year at this camp meeting, and if you don't think so, just come up to the next meeting, and before you get away, if you don't watch yourself, you will be shouting and laughing like Bros. LaPrade and Denson and all the rest of us.

In the Living Present.

'Tis incredible, but true, that an Episcopalian rector in the Whitechapel district, London, conducts religious smoking services. He furnishes gratis tobacco and pipe to every visitor. All, including the rector, smoke half an hour. Prayer and sermon follow. The latter is said to be usually very good. After the sermon all attendants receive a cup of good tea.

Yes, sir; Gen. Coxey, of tramp fame, is candidate for governor of Ohio on the Populist ticket. Carl Brown, Coxey's first lieutenant, and who married his daughter—the same who was crowned queen of labor in Washington—will publish a paper in Baltimore called Cactus. His prospectus abounds in alliteration expressive of his conceit and socialism. Hear him, "I'm a poet, painter, and punctuator of pompous pride." Again, "My opponents are political puppets, pusillanimous poltroons of purse-proud plutocracy."

Christina Goodwin publishes in The Forum, for August, an eloquent "Appeal to Housekeepers." Says many daughters seek recreation away from home because that home is devoid of moral sunshine. Mothers should see to it that their daughters find pleasure in habitual household and needle work. Servants are good and bad in accordance with good and bad employers. Servants should help. But the term "help" indicates that the housekeeper takes the lead in setting the house in order, and in preparing the meals.

Dr. Elias D. Weighle discusses in the Lutheran Quarterly "Interference of Divine Providence with Epidemic Diseases." He holds that prayer for prevention is sacrilegious if the sanitary and hygienic regulations are not observed. God would not do for man what man should and could do for himself. God would allow the laws of nature have their course, prayer to the contrary notwithstanding. Breaking those laws would inevitably entail punishment.

The Forum suggests "Remedies for Rural Depopulation." At present too much monotony on the farm. All work and no play, etc. Daily papers and large library should not be wanting. Pictures and music apparatus for amusement, etc., should be supplied in abundance. Railroad facilities should be increased, enabling occupants of farms to visit the city. The roads should be perfect, telephone and daily mail provided, etc.

Prof. Case, in Fortnightly Review, opposes admission of women to Oxford University, England. Occasionally an exceptionally intellectual woman could master the curriculum. Much ado made in such case. But a university should accommodate itself to the ordinarily intellectually clever. As an average, men possess intellectual acumen superior to that of women. Women, it is said, excelled in the fine arts. Well, in music she has enjoyed undisputed sway for centuries. But where are her musical compositions? Where are the women who can compete with illustrious Mozart, Beethoven, Bach, Meyerbeer, etc.?

WATCHWORDS.

BY MRS. A. FREEMAN PALMER.

"Look up, and not down!" Do you see how the tree-top
Rejoices to sunshine denied to its root?
And hear how the lark, gazing skyward, is flooding
The world with his song while the ground-bird is mute?

"Look out, and not in!" See the sap rushing outward
In leaf bud, and blossom! All Winter it lay
Imprisoned, while earth wore a white desolation;
Now Nature is glad with the beauty of May.

"Look forward, not back!" 'Tis the chant of creation,
The chime of the seasons as onward they roll;
'Tis the pulse of the world, 'tis the hope of the ages,
'Tis the voice of our God in the depths of the soul.

"Lend a hand!" Like the sun that turns night into morn,
The moon that drives storm-driven sailors to land.
Ah, life were worth living with this for the watchword,
"Look up, out, and forward; and each lend a hand!"

Human Knowledge Progressive.

BY JULIEN C BROWN, D D.

NO. II.

Many a great, profound and fruitful idea has been strangled in the cradle at its birth by the anathemas of a venal priesthood and the relentless opposition of ill-natured ignorance. Papal watch-dogs have been keen of eye and quick to scent any invasion into realms where roving genius might discover a thought fatal to hierarchic ascendency. A woe and a curse has been pronounced on the venture one spirit who would seek to break the dull monotony of a corrupted church or infuse a new life into the flaccid veins of a pampered ecclesiastical aristocracy. In much measure the sneers of the agnostic Huxley and the damascus thrusts of the incisive Tyndall, no less than some vulgar blows of noted scoffers, have been deserved, as directed against the pride, the arrogance and the incompetency of Priestcraft. By the tricks of its trade this same craft has many times thwarted the methods of nature and the plans of Providence. By unholy ambitions, by self-seeking, by cruelties and oppressions, by an iron-clad dogmatism, by resistance to progress, by distortions of truth and by a vicious holding to traditions without warrant of divine authority, it has severed connection with the sympathies of multitudes of the winged and immortal minds of each succeeding generation. Such stricture, however, may not apply to our Protestant ministry only in this—such ministry, for the most part, may be too conservative, and dread, from its lack of faith in an omnipotent God, every advance movement which leads farther away from John Calvin and John Wesley.

It is astonishing to see with what pertinacity men in our day cling to the sayings and teachings of the titular demi-gods of early, middle-age and perhaps post-renaissance theology. Representative periodicals and papers of the leading evangelical churches of Christendom, in their writings, and even the sermons of metropolitan pulpits, will quote Bede, St. Jerome St. Clement, Polycarp, Martin Luther, Swedenborg, John Calvin or John Wesley fifty times before quoting Jesus Christ once. Without consciously meaning, it maybe, the servant is thus put before his Master, and the supposed interpreter has higher honor and more careful recognition than the "Word" interpreted. Our writers seem to have decreed, although they stand as the conservators of our moral and spiritual forces, that the "first shall be last," perhaps inadvertently relegating to the final judgment the execution of a fiat which long ago declared, "the last shall be first." Would it not be preferable to make the Christ-teaching and the inspiration which flowed from it, "first," now and forevermore, in thought, in quotation, in song, in literature, in art, and peculiarly in worship? Would the people not rejoice more and the "health of the daughter of my people" be improved if Christ were quoted oftener and Calvin or John Wesley less? Truly, if Christ's simple statements, put down in our King James translation, are so hard to be understood as that they require the combined wisdom of eighteen centuries of theologic disputants to explain them to the common people, why not the common people as well worship Plato or Buddha?

As for the sour and crabbed John Calvin, with his perversions of truth, his fatality and almost demoniac portraitures of divinity, he must be left to the tender graces of the devotee who swallows his noxious mixtures and believes in the out-worn prescriptions of the dyspeptic physician. For his system a deep grave has long been dug, and from its cavernous depths no resurrection will ever recur in the ages of future thinking and free-will worship. All reason and intelligence, and even the instincts of humanity, will take pleasure in throwing on that tomb the clods emblematic of an endless oblivion. The Arminian Wesley may hardly be mentioned in the same breath, so diametrically opposite have been their views. Without doubt Wesley stands to the forefront so far as the best expositor of biblical truth and practical religion that the world has seen. And his followers are true to their leader. He was unhappy in his domestic relations. After surmounting numberless difficulties, he stood at last a colossal figure and unique in history. Scholarly in attainments, exalted in character, impassioned in speech, honest as the North star, diligent as time, earnest as the lightning, a poet in temperament, a philosopher by study, a theologian by application, and now a saint by the grace of God, he enunciated truths and taught doctrines which have modified every theology taught during and since his day. As he verged most nearly to apostolic simplicity in faith and method, and as his teaching so nearly interpreted the Christ-thought, it is not surprising that almost every evangelical pulpit is now influenced by him in greater or less degree.

True, there is much foaming at the mouth and fretting over the mode of water baptism; over the divine purpose in Bishops, elders and deacons; over the use of surplices, surplices, skull-caps and slickers; but when there comes a moment of rest for the tortured atmosphere around such pulpits, and the preachers get down to an honest work in telling sinners how to be saved from sin, they preach John Wesley's theology. The straitest of the Calvinists even are come to drawing this fire from an alien altar. We cheerfully give the red coals of a seed-fire to all the denominations, not slighting even our little "weak sisters," "the small sects "which have no breasts," neither fire to warm into life their proselyted progeny. It is the best theology to be had in this generation, the most philosophical and the simplest. It is the most liberal, the most conspicuous, effective and universal known to men, save perhaps that of the chameleon papacy.

While paying all reverence to the immortal projectors of past reforms in the world of science and realm of theology we must still dissent from that view which so many hold, that the books are closed, the last continent of truth discovered, and that the last beams of spiritual light have fallen upon our enquiring race. We can not submit that the mines have been worked and all the leads followed until no more gold can be had. The Antilles, the Himalayas and the Rockies of mystery are piled peak on peak in confused sublimity till yet, awaiting in their granite sides the entrance of drills and chisels, driven by selected spirits to find in the fiery flints a hidden wealth to enrich the world as never before. No one little home-crop holding at its maximum, but sixty-four ounces of grey and white matter called brain can gather in its cavity all the thoughts which throb in the earth, the sea, the air and the heavens above. No one lens can focus all the sunlight that flows abroad in multitudinous waves, nor by one man can the prismatic colors be bottled for the daily feast of delighted eyes. St. Paul, Martin Luther, John Wesley and they all found much, but not everything. They were faithful to discover some new and sunny lands, but over all tracts to which even a finite knowledge is accessible, they were not permitted to walk and dogmatize. Other latitudes and longitudes remain. In glory and in joy some choice soul may yet have high and divine commission to tread on ground more holy than any ever pressed by prophet, apostle, saint or martyr's foot. The secrets even of the old High Priests who entered the Sanctum Sanctorum to hold communion with God, have never been told. They died without expression in a dispensation less able than ours. There are voiceless solitudes and unmeasured distances where this same commissioned spirit may yet travel to give speech of their wonders and maps of their contents.

To be sure, there is limit to human knowledge, and metes and bounds to the most anxious of human questionings. But let us not look on chemistry and astronomy, the applications of physical sciences and the multiplied inventions of our last fifty years, so marvelous as to be incredible to four-fifths of the world, and still say that the science of God has run out, and that the tongues which once sat on the Pentecost hand are now silenced forever. There is no warrant in all the wide earth for the optimist faith of a dead stagnation. There is no warrant for an unbelief in future disclosures of the Divine Spirit, until the last enemy of God and man has been defeated and until the snow-white banner of the ascended Savior shall wave in triumph over an emancipated world.

But your scribe is slow in coming to the point for which these and foregoing words have been written. Our next, under caption, "Applied Common Sense," may express what to some will appear but a visionary scheme.

Friar's Point, Miss.

It is Folly to Expect it and Unjust to Ask it.

I think the International Epworth League has for one of its avowed objects the fraternity of the two Methodisms. I do not suppose any of those who have directed this movement from the beginning would deny that this hope has been dominant in their bosoms. Dr. Steele, since the day he was first made a fraternal messenger, has had a very warm place in his heart for this sentiment, and has been ready to do anything legitimate to prepare the way for it. The Northern Church is, of course, ready to do anything in the way of recovering back the erring child who broke away from home in 1844, and having organic union. She is perfectly willing to forgive all the past and receive the South at any day that she comes back; but it is certainly asking too much to ask that she allow the returning prodigal to bring into the family what she regards as her very un-Christian and indefensible prejudices against social equality with the colored people. She has never, even by the slightest word, encouraged the thought that such a thing could be thought of, and it is folly to expect it and unjust to ask it. The fact is, that many of us who are fully convinced that the time has not yet come for union, nor for the social commingling of the races, can not but applaud the consistent course of the Northern leaguers. They are committed to no caste, and we, if we keep up this general association, must simply submit. It is folly to expect that persons so firm in their belief that slavery was the sum of all villainies to do more than pardon the repentant slave-holders, and ask nothing more from them than an acknowledgment that those who overthrew the system were patriots and philanthropists. It is folly to expect that a people who have always been right should at this late day admit they may have erred. We must not be narrow, and ask from others what we would not yield to them. It is folly to ask these things from the North, and as great folly to lead the North to suppose we endorse these views; and the only way out the trouble is to say nothing about them. We need not get into a passion every time Dr. Moore or Dr. Edwards or Dr. Parkhurst reaffirm the position the M. E. Church holds, and threaten at this early day a dissolution of the League. If we take the League, we must take it with all it brings, and respect the prejudices and the feelings of others as we would have our own respected by them.

GEO. G. SMITH.

P. S.—As for myself, I belong to the old fossils so often alluded to in the Era; and, while I am perfectly willing for others to do as they choose, I prefer to neither ask from the North what it will not give, and not to give what they ask, and so I shall not put myself where it is necessary to do one or the other.

Church Conference.

When, why and how should we hold a Church Conference? The Discipline, under the question, What directions are given concerning Church Conference? answers: "Section 88—All the members of the church, and resident members of the Annual Conference, shall come together once a month, or on circuits at least every three months, at every appointment, to hold a Church Conference, over which the preacher in charge shall preside. It may be held at any time most convenient for assembling the greatest number of members. If on the Sabbath, it should not interfere with the morning public worship."

I have found, after several years' experience, that the best time to hold a Church Conference is at some other time than just after preaching at eleven o'clock. Usually our morning services are so long that a congregation will get tired and become impatient, and you will have to rush through your Conference so hurriedly that it will be with very unsatisfactory results to yourself and of little benefit to the church. In view of this fact, I always preach at my appointments in the country on Saturday evening, and hold my Church Conference immediately after services. If I have a good deal of work to do in Church Conference, I let it take the place of the services. In towns I have found it best to hold Church Conference some night of the week most convenient for the membership to come out. I usually try to hold my first Church Conference before the first Quarterly Conference.

How to hold a Church Conference—In order to make it a success, you must understand your church; then bring up such points as you wish to stress in the Conference. Have in mind some material improvement you wish to make; then find some live member who is in harmony with your ideas, and speak to him freely on the subject, and let him know what it is that you want to do. Get all the points in favor of your purpose, and have him to make a warm and pointed speech. This is very apt to call out others. When they are all through, pro and con, follow up with a warm exhortation, and have your church to appoint a committee to canvass the matter, solicit subscriptions, and report at your next meeting.

If you wish to arouse your church on spiritual interests, education, or the circulating of our literature, then find out the need of your church, and, under the proper questions, have some one to make a talk and suggest plans for carrying out your wishes. If your desire is to increase the spiritual interests in the church, turn your Church Conference into an inquiry and experience meeting. In so doing you will find matter for several fine sermons. It will give you an insight into the spiritual needs of the church. In all of your exhortations don't criticise your members harshly or demean them. You will find that they will be very sore by the time they are through, and will rather need encouragement than criticism. In your Church Conference, if you wish to make it a blessing to your membership, don't allow it to be turned into a committee of investigation or court of trial. If you do, you may preach its funeral, and lay it away quietly to rest.

Why should we hold a Church Conference?

It is one of the best methods of educating the members. In this meeting you can bring out facts and say things that ought to be brought out and said that it would not be prudent to present to the congregation. Then it is a great protection to the stewards. A steward said to the writer once that he would not act as steward for any pastor who would not hold Church Conferences regularly. Here the pastor has an opportunity of letting the church know the exact condition of the work. It also gives the class leaders an opportunity to make their report as to the spiritual interest of the church. The superintendent of the Sunday-school has an opportunity to let the church know the condition and outlook of the school. The stewards make a report of the financial and spiritual interest of the church, and also have an opportunity to bring before the church any cases of need or distress; also to correct. The church roll also may be corrected, so that the pastor may be enabled to make an intelligent report of the general condition of his work at the Quarterly Conference. By taking notice as to time and method of holding Church Conferences, the pastor may be able to enlist the energies of the whole church in works of benevolence, and in spiritual and temporal enterprises. The main object of a Church Conference is to put every member to work for Christ. I don't see how any pastor can afford, with his obligations to the church and with the opportunity for good, to neglect holding a Church Conference at least once a quarter at each of his appointments. If brethren will send to the Publishing House, and get our blank Minutes for Church Conference and the Church Conference record, they will never have any trouble in holding Church Conference, and the secretary will have no trouble in presenting a neat and well-kept record at Quarterly Conference.

Hennington Camp Meeting.

The twenty-fourth annual camp meeting of Hennington Camp Ground closed the eighth instant, after having been run seven days, under the control of Rev. W. M. McIntosh, assisted by those faithful and earnest laborers: Revs. M. L. Burton, I. B. Robertson, of our Conference, and Dr. J. W. Price, of Water Valley, North Mississippi Conference. The first service was begun by Dr. Price preaching the opening sermon—a sermon to the point, and most appropriate. Prof. C. W. Smith, Bro. McIntosh's leader in music; Dr. Price and his daughter, Miss Daisy Price, gave such music at that service as to convince all who heard them that we had first-class musicians with us for the meeting. From that hour the music—which, as to instruments, was composed of one organ, two pianos, two cornets, two violins and one flute, and those united with many of the best and well-cultivated human voices—grew in popular favor to the closing hour of the camp meeting. We can not name in full the parties employed on the instruments; suffice to say, each did his or her part most faithfully. Dr. Price certainly impressed all who heard him that a musician can sing, make melody, and announce the words so as to be distinctly understood. He and his daughter, Miss Daisy, certainly excel in this respect. The music was the best we have ever had, no camp meeting excepted. And with the instruments we had two violins—that old and much-hated instrument on account of its associations. Now, however, they were consecrated, and if objected to by any, we have never heard of it. They did not prevent the baptism of the Holy Spirit, which was one of the prevailing features nearly every service of this camp meeting.

Bro. W. M. McIntosh, who did much of the preaching, is a small man, seemingly, not more than five feet three or four inches high. He began unwell, but grew in strength and power unto the end, although some days seemingly laboring beyond human endurance. The success attending his labors is the convincing evidence that he is a man of God. His preaching, from a human standpoint, can not be said to be great. It is the most simple, plain, with great earnestness, and attended with great power and immediate results, which is the true evidence of a most successful minister.

The final summing up of the results of this camp meeting places it among the greatest we have ever held on this camp ground. There were over two hundred and twenty conversions, sixty-five accessions, many backsliders reclaimed, old family feuds and hard feelings all broken down with all, a great revival among the good and faithful. We praise God. Yes, blessed be his name for the gracious results of this meeting.

We will not close this communication without mentioning that the Mississippi Chautauqua closed its first session on this camp ground only two days before our camp meeting began. The Chautauqua was a pronounced success from beginning to end—the programme good, the attendance fine, and the finance a success. The matter of the establishment of a Chautauqua was first agitated by Rev. J. W. Cooper before our association during our camp meeting of 1892. The association cheerfully gave its consent; made a liberal offer of its grounds free of charge, with some restrictions, with a number of its members taking stock in its establishment. Some thought then the project impracticable. This year's success has removed all doubts in their minds as to its final results, provided the Chautauqua is managed with care and energy. Again, some seemed to fear it might affect the interest of the camp meeting by its location on the same grounds. The success of both bodies this year removes all fears upon this point also. Either may, or both may, fail any year. This does not mean, as a cause, that both are located on the same grounds, but that either, or both, may be badly managed. That the public may know the status of matters between the two, we would state a joint committee has been appointed to make satisfactorily all the necessary arrangements between the two bodies as to the future of each. They certainly can be of great help to each other, and thereby make each the more successful.

Good Preaching.

Good preaching is determined by its results on character, rather than by its effects on the sensations. The true design of preaching is to conform men's character to the character of Christ. In the first place, it is to lead men to Christ, and in the second place, it is to make such ones more like Christ. The preaching which fails to do this, however sympathetic, stirring, orthodox and elegant it may be, is poor preaching. The worldly minded may call it good, splendid, brilliant and charming, but the voice from Calvary, the utterance of the cross, the speech of God pronounce against it.

The following story aptly illustrates what good preaching accomplishes: A man was once riding by a bleaching-ground in Scotland and there saw a woman at work, watering her webs of linen cloth. He asked her where she attended church and what she heard on the previous Sabbath, and also how much she remembered. She declared that she could not remember anything of the sermon, not even the text. The man then asked: "And what good can the preaching do you, if you forget it all?" She made this significant reply: "Ah, sir, if you look at this web on the grass, you will see that, as fast as ever I put the water on it the sun dries it all up; and yet, sir, I see it gets whiter and whiter."

This illustrates the true test of good preaching. The question is, Does it cause one's character to become whiter and still whiter? One may be pardoned if his preaching lack symmetry, coherence and clear-cut logic; but if it fail to make his hearers better, more genuine, more honorable, more like Christ, he is blameworthy and not fit to be in the pulpit. It is true that large responsibility rests on the hearer, but the preacher can not place all the responsibility on the hearer. He is accountable to God.—Standard.

The Power of Faith.

Whatever may be the real nature of faith, its power can not be contested. There is profound reason for the gospel affirmation that it can move mountains. The great events of history have been brought about by obscure fanatics armed with nothing but their faith. The great religions which have governed the world and the vast empires that have extended from one hemisphere to the other were not built up by men of letters, of science, or by philosophers. The creed on which the civilization under which we live was founded was first spread by obscure fishermen of Galilean market town. Shepherds from the Arabian deserts, whose contemporaries hardly knew of their existence, were the men who subjected part of the Greco-Roman world to the dogmas of Mohammed, and founded one of the vastest empires known in history.

A strong conviction is so irresistible that only an equal conviction has a chance of struggling victorious against it. Faith has no enemy to be really afraid of except faith. It is sure of triumph when the material force opposed to it is the servant of weak emotions and of weak belief. But if it is brought to face a faith of the same intensity, the contest becomes very active, and success is often determined by accessory circumstances usually also of a moral order, such as the spirit of discipline and better organization.—Gustave Le Bon, in Popular Science Monthly, for Aug.

North Mississippi Conference W. F. M.

The following report of the meeting of the W. F. M. and P. and H. M. Societies of the Winona district, recently held at Carrollton, is clipped from the Carrollton Conservative:

"The Woman's Missionary Society, Wednesday morning, was presided over by Mrs. Ben. Jones, of Sunnyside; the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, in the afternoon, by Mrs. Kittrell Shivers, of Black Hawk. The ladies presided with ease, grace, dignity, and dispatched business rapidly. Some of the brethren said they did not always put the motion to vote, but then no motion was known to fail on that account. Several very excellent papers, evidently prepared with care, were read by the ladies. It was agreed, without any disparagement to any of the papers, that the one by Mrs. Shivers was entitled to special mention as a model of elegance in diction, beauty and strength of thought.

"Several excellent recitations were given by the juvenile delegates. The reports from both the woman's and juvenile societies show a high degree of prosperity, and the good being accomplished can not be computed—'that day' will reveal it. The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Dr. Evans; the response by Mrs. J. Stone, of Winona. Each of these addresses was made up of pure, good thoughts, clothed in choice words. After passing resolutions of thanks to the town for hospitality extended, the meeting adjourned."

Also the Conservative gives this account of Bishop Galloway's lecture delivered on Saturday night of the district Conference:

"For days interest had been centering in Bishop Galloway's missionary address, to be delivered Saturday night. Rain had been falling all afternoon, and continued to the hour of service. Notwithstanding this, a great congregation filled all the available space in the church and vestibule. Extra benches and chairs were brought in, and each seat was occupied by an eager hearer. Rev. R. A. Meek announced a hymn, led in prayer, read Scripture lesson, and in a most eloquent manner presented the Bishop to the congregation, saying, 'Bishop Galloway needs no introduction to a Southern audience.' The Bishop began with a brief, though vivid, description of the leading facts of Japanese history, and giving personal incidents of his journey through Japan, China, Egypt, the Holy Land, Italy, Greece, and other countries. He then went at once to the heart of his subject, 'Missions.' For one hour and a half, in words of burning eloquence and thrilling interest, he held the most breathless attention of the audience, notwithstanding the extreme heat of the weather and the crowded condition of the church. There were ripples of laughter as the Bishop humorously told of some incidents seen during his travels, and fervent amens in response to his powerful appeals. At the close of this splendid address Rev. Mr. Stone led in prayer, and the congregation stood and sang 'All hail the power of Jesus' name.'

"There had been no understanding as to taking a collection, but Mr. Porter arose and said the meeting would be incomplete without a collection, and asked that the hats be passed for a free-will offering for missions, whereupon the Bishop said: 'The collection is to be taken, let's make it worthy of the occasion and this audience.' The collectors took with them pencils 'and paper, and went through the congregation. Reinforcements they reported in cash and subscriptions $448. The Bishop said, 'Let's make it $500,' which was done more quickly than we can write this sentence."

Rev. H. W. Wallace, P. C., Wesley ge: "Have just closed a most essful meeting at Holly's Spring. Spirit of God was with us, to own bless the preaching of this Word salvation of souls. Bro. Rev. A. T. Bell, Marion circuit, Mississippi Conference: "Our third Quarterly Conference was held at Why Not in our new church, on Saturday, July 27. It was a delightful occasion. The largest congregation assembled that I have seen yet at a Saturday appointment, the church not being able to accommodate the crowd. Our presiding elder, Rev. R. J. Jones, preached a strong, spiritual sermon from II. Peter i, 57, and after a sumptuous dinner held the Conference. It is a pleasure to meet our Quarterly Conference. The brethren come together in a spirit of unity and harmony, which is very encouraging to the pastor. Our new church-building is a credit to the community; to the good sisters, who first conceived the idea, and who have persevered in the face of all obstacles and discouragements; to the men who have so liberally given of their substance and labor, some of whom have gone pretty deep into their pockets for the Lord's work; and to the pastors, who toiled and prayed and trusted for the accomplishment of their hopes. The present pastor is only sorry that he can not lay any claim to the credit of having had a share in the work, and glad to accord the honor where it is due, viz.: to Revs. F. B. Ormond and G. Bancroft. The hull of the building was completed last year, and this Summer it has been ceiled and painted, and it now stands one of the most beautiful churches in the county outside of Meridian. On Sunday, the twenty-eighth, Bro. Jones preached a powerful sermon on 'The Trust and Mission of the Methodist Church,' and afterwards performed the ceremony of dedication, and the building was solemnly set apart for the service of God. We held our protracted meeting during the week; preaching by the presiding elder, Rev. R. F. Wilt, and the pastor. It was a fine meeting, deeply spiritual almost from the outset, and steadily increasing in interest until it culminated in one of those wonderful outpourings of the Spirit which baffle all description. We are in the thick of the fight now, with protracted meetings on our hands for eight weeks to come. Brethren, pray for us."

BAYOU CLAIR M. E. SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Much to the delight of the church people and the citizens of Bayou Clair their Sunday-school is again in active progress. There was a good Sunday-school at that place during the Spring of the year, and it died a hard death when Summer time came. Bro. P. C. Holcomb seeing how very much it needed the encouragement of some one to start it, came on Sunday, Aug. 11, and met a nice crowd of the Bayou Clair young people assembled awaiting the arrival of Bro. Holcomb. He arrived at 10:20 A. M., and at once made known the purpose of the assembled young people, and asked them to select a superintendent, and the choice fell on Henry P. Glaze. Bro. A. P. Hathaway was elected as assistant. Then a secretary, Sister Mary Glass; treasurer, Sister Trine Woods.

There is not any doubt but the Sunday-school will be a nice one, and a grand example for all young people. This Sunday-school has elected all boys and girls as officers. Their superintendent is only about twenty years of age. We do hope that the surrounding country will help this young Sunday-school in their good work and encourage them and their young superintendent.

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., Aug. 10: "We have just closed a good meeting at Oak Ridge, Miss.—Warren circuit. We began on the fourth Sunday in July, with Dr. C. G. Andrews doing the preaching. He preached twice a day for four days, and we were perfectly delighted with his preaching. I do not see how it could have been excelled. Then Dr. I. W. Cooper came to us for four days, and he was at his best, and did some of as fine preaching as we have heard for a long time. It was indeed a great treat to us all to have the presence and preaching of two such men in our meeting. If any brother needs help, he need not fear making a mistake if he can get either of them. Rev. T. J. Miller, of Steen's Creek, Rankin county, was also with us, and rendered valuable service. He is splendid help in a revival meeting. Dr. Cooper did some good work for Millsaps College while here. He got the promise of two or three boys for the college for the next session, and some more for the future. He is evidently the right man for the place he is filling. If he can't stir up a young man and his parents, too, on the subject, no one else need try. We are all proud of Millsaps College, and think it has a very bright future before it. We ought to have four hundred boys there next session. May God grant that we may! Every young man that can possibly raise a little money ought to go, and it won't take much next session. Now, brethren of the two Mississippi Conferences, let's help Drs. Cooper and Murrah drum up four hundred boys for next session. . . . Well, I got so much interested about the college I forgot to tell the results of my meeting. We received 7 members, and the church was helped very much. We hope the meeting will yet result in much good. May God graciously bless Oak Ridge Church!"

It is singular how great the difference is as to the degree in which persons who die are missed by those who survive. Last Winter there died in this city a man with several millions, the fruit of his own toil and frugality. Yet it is doubtful if the loss was felt by any but his own immediate family. He was upright and a believer, but he lived to himself, and it made no difference to friends and neighbors whether he was in this world or out of it. But a few weeks ago a lady died, possessed of moderate estate, and she was sorely lamented. Bright, cheerful and amiable, she was the life of every circle she entered. A woman of great sympathy, she never tired of helping others who were in any kind of difficulty. She was wholly unselfish, and always considered others' interests before her own. How she is missed by her kindred and friends! They feel an aching void whenever her name recurs to memory. The tears they shed at her loss are the expression of genuine and deep-seated sorrow.—Christian Intelligencer.

Editorial Paragraphs.

Croakers are seldom workers. In the church and out of it they are the last men who can be pressed into service.

There is reason for questioning the piety of the Christian who avers that the vast body of the church are going to hell because they do not live and believe exactly as he does. "Love thinketh no evil."

It speaks well for a pastor to keep his church register neat and up to date. It is not every preacher who thinks the matter of sufficient importance to give it his careful attention. "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."

Mr. Wesley, in one of his sermons, says: "We must take care to let all men know we esteem no faith but that which worketh by love; and that we are not saved by faith, unless so far as we are delivered from the power as well as the guilt of sin." A great truth that. The Scriptures thus strongly put it: "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."

Preserving the health is a religious duty of no mean importance. It is only with sound bodies that we can be most useful in the Lord's kingdom. One of the beauties of Christianity is that it provides for the physical nature as well as the intellectual and spiritual natures. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."

From Queen Victoria's address at the opening of Parliament, on the fifteenth, we quote as follows:

I deeply regret to say that the most atrocious outrages upon a body of English missionaries are reported from the province of Fu Kien, in China. In reply to earnest representations addressed to the Chinese government by my direction, active measures, which I trust will prove effective, are being taken for the punishment of the murderers and all persons in any degree responsible for these crimes.

The internal troubles which have broken out in the Armenian district of Asiatic Turkey have been attended with horrors which have moved to indignation the Christian nations of Europe generally, and my people especially. My ambassador and the ambassadors of the Emperor of Russia and the President of the French Republic, acting together, have suggested to the government of the Sultan reforms, which, in their opinion, are necessary to prevent a recurrence of constant disorder. These proposals are now being considered by the Sultan, and I am anxiously awaiting his decision.

Report of the W. P. and H. M. Society.

The ninth annual report of this splendid organization has been received. It contains some interesting facts and figures, and shows that gratifying progress has been made during the past year. According to the statistical table, there are at present 39 Conference, 712 Adult, 44 Juvenile, and 33 Young People's Societies, the adult membership alone being 10,638. During the year 235 new societies have been organized. The official organ, "Our Homes," now has 3,000 subscribers. Out of the general treasury 14 parsonages have been helped to the amount of $3,050. The various Conference societies report 46 parsonages helped to the amount of $3,225 26, which sum does not include the aid rendered by local societies to local parsonages.

Valuable assistance is being rendered through the agency of the Loan Funds, which, including accrued interest, now aggregate $6,785. Through this fund twenty-six parsonages have been aided to the amount of $7,240. At the last annual meeting fifty-one applications for aid in parsonage building were received, asking for $9,658 in donations, and $4,450 in loans. For lack of funds, only twenty-one grants were made—$3,100 in loans, and $2,375 in donations.

Figures are inadequate to express the amount of good done by the department of supplies in relieving the needs of the families of some of our brethren laboring out West. The estimated value of the eighty-two boxes of supplies sent out during the past twelve months is $2,870.

The city mission work being done by this society should command the heartiest co-operation as well as admiration. In St. Louis, Nashville, Houston, New Orleans, Chattanooga, and several other Southern cities, cultured and consecrated lady missionaries employed by this organization are visiting and working among the destitute and neglected classes in the slums. All honor to the noble women who have inaugurated this Christian movement. The ladies recently opened up two mission schools among the Cubans of Florida, near the city of Tampa. One hundred and fifty children of Spanish descent have already been enrolled.

Mrs. E. E. Wiley, Emory, Va., is the president of the society; Mrs. Bishop Hargrove, general secretary; and Mrs. Geo. P. Kendrick, Louisville, Ky., general treasurer. We bid these good women God-speed in their noble work.

The Orphanage.

The Holston Conference Orphanage Executive Committee met at Greenville last week, and finally settled the question of location. The site selected contains twenty-three acres, with a magnificent grove of oak. A splendid private residence, containing some fourteen rooms, is in process of erection. Nearly six thousand dollars have already been spent on this mansion. Fifteen hundred dollars will complete the building, four of the rooms being already finished. Thirty-two acres adjoining were also purchased for farming purposes, making fifty-five acres and a $5,800 building for $7,500, with Greenville contributing $8,500. Mrs. Dr. Wiley has been in the field securing subscriptions, and will continue that sort of work.

The above, from the Holston Methodist, of recent date, contains information which is exceedingly gratifying. We hope the day is not far distant when Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana will do likewise. We have continued our suicidal policy of turning over our orphans to Rome too long already. Why should the Conferences of Mississippi and Louisiana be behind in a matter of such importance? We do not believe they will long remain so.

Immigration.

The immigration question is again attracting public attention. During a part of '93 and '94 there was a very large falling off in the number of immigrants. For the last twelve months, however, there has been a rapid increase. Whether immigration is beneficial or not, depends upon the character of the immigrants. Nobody objects to the coming among us of foreigners who will make good citizens. Unfortunately, however, a very large percentage of our immigrants are not of this sort. Europe is dumping upon our shores paupers and criminals by the wholesale. This is a matter that demands attention on the part of the powers that be. We have more paupers and criminals than we know what to do with already. To perpetuate this policy is simply suicidal. It is, therefore, a cause for rejoicing that wise and patriotic men have put their heads together to devise a remedy for this evil. An organization called "The Immigration Restriction League" has come into existence, and is making preparations for vigorous work. An immigration restriction bill has been prepared, to be submitted to Congress at its next session. Strong influences will be brought to bear to secure its passage.

The Baptists in Louisiana.

At the Louisiana Baptist State Convention, held last week at Monroe, Dr. D. I. Purser, of this city, was elected president—an honor worthily bestowed. The convention rejected the proposition to establish a new college, and gave hearty commendation to the two colleges already in existence—Keachi and Mount Lebanon. The statistical report shows a membership of 30,509 as against 17,067 in 1884—an increase of 13,442 in eleven years. This is a most remarkable percentage of increase — eighty-four per cent. Should Methodism in Louisiana increase at this rate during the next eleven years, her membership in the year 1905 will be 51,709 as against 28,103 in 1894. The conclusion of the report is as follows:

Though we have entered two parish sites of the State this year, and began work at several other destitute points, the harvest remains white. Eighteen parishes still remain without a single white Baptist Church. In ten or a dozen of these our Methodist brethren have no societies. If we will, this record, so far as Baptists are concerned, can be completely changed before the close of the century.

That so large a section of country in a State as old as Louisiana should be destitute of the gospel of Christ is a fact which furnishes food for reflection for every lover of our Zion.

One fact we desire to call special attention to, viz., that the Board of Home Missions of the Southern Baptist Convention gave for mission work in Louisiana during the year just ended the sum of $3,800, besides a liberal donation to First Church in this city. How much has the Board of Missions of the Southern Methodist Church given in the last year or the last ten years for the furtherance of the gospel in the State of Louisiana? Echo answers, "How much?"

Points from Pulpit and Press.

No wonder some men die mentally. We have seen private ministerial libraries into which there had not come a single new book in probably twenty-five years. How can such a man keep from the dead line? Impossible! We know of young ministers who scorn or neglect their Conference studies. We predict for them an early migration across the dead line, even before their sun reaches the meridian.—Evangelical Messenger.

This is true, but it should not be forgotten that books cost money, and that many preachers find it difficult, if not impossible, to get the money requisite for a yearly replenishing of their libraries. In making estimates for the support of their pastor, stewards should never lose sight of his literary needs. Books and periodicals he must have to be abreast of the times. Many a steward clamors for freshness in the pulpit who uses his official position to keep the pastor's salary down to a point which leaves no margin for the purchase of books.

The following clipping from the North Carolina Advocate gives a picture of the closing scenes of the last Congress, drawn by the hand of Congressman M. W. Ward, of Alabama. O tempora! O mores!

It was the holy Sabbath day, and the church bells were ringing all over the city. In the Capitol champagne flowed like water. Committee rooms became temporary brothels. Women of ill-repute swarmed the corridors and sang songs in the public restaurants with inebriated Congressmen. "I have seventy five dozen glasses out," said Tom Murray, the disgusted caterer of the House restaurant. "That tells the story of the committee rooms better than any words I could utter."

In front of the main door is a perfect cloud of gentlemen, interested in legislation. Some of the faces are familiar and have been seen here for the last twenty years. Some are comparatively new. Thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars are to be won or lost within the next few hours.

Around the other door are more lobbyists and among them are some women. Backed up against the marble pillars everywhere are members button-holed and on the defensive. Some of these women are notorious. The very fact that they are brought to bear upon any item of legislation is enough to stamp it with condemnation.

There were poker games in the committee rooms and the sideboards were stocked with the best liquid refreshments which could be bought with the contingent fund. There were the House and Senate bars, where everyone, from the most respected to the lowest, could obtain a drink.

An aged Senator passed into a private room with a hilarious member of the demi-monde on each arm.

A Congressman was carried away by friends fighting drunk. A woman, with her dainty booted foot elevated on a committee table and a glass of champagne elevated in her hand, was singing a merry song, while a dozen members and their friends sat around, smoking and enjoying the society of the real lady. But this is enough. I will cease. All of this beneath the jeweled dome, between the marble walls of the temple of liberty, amid the royal surroundings of art expressed in bronze and marble and the exquisite touch of the painter's brush.

The Texas Advocate is waging a vigorous warfare against the proposed prize-fight in Dallas. The indications are that the proposed prize-fight will not take place, the governor having given notice of his intention to prevent it. If our sister State is spared this disgrace, a large share of the credit will be due to Rev. Dr. Pierce, editor of the Texas Advocate, who has aroused public sentiment to a pitch of indignation which means something.

Dr. Andrew Hunter, of the Little Rock Conference, and one of the two surviving Southern delegates to the General Conference of 1844, has been spending the past month or more with his relatives in Pennsylvania. He holds up remarkably well for a man of his age. He still assists the brethren in revival meetings—sometimes doing most of the preaching. He went to Arkansas in 1836. He may well be called "a grand old man."

The Louisiana Baptist State Convention passed a resolution warmly applauding Gov. Culberson, of Texas, for his vigorous opposition to the proposed prize-fight at Dallas. Resolutions were adopted urging the organization of Woman's Missionary Societies and Young People's Societies in all local churches.

For some time past the whisky ring of Atlanta has been making a vigorous effort to secure from the city authorities the privilege of keeping their saloons open during the Exposition to a later hour than the law now allows. Their efforts have proved unavailing. We congratulate the Wesleyan Advocate upon having won in this fight.

We are pained to receive the following note from Rev. C. McDonald, presiding elder of the Brandon district, Mississippi Conference:

The goddess of fortune sometimes smiles even on members of the journalistic fraternity. E. E. The office of State Superintendent of Instruction is held by women in three States: Colorado, Mrs. A. J. Peavey; Wyoming, Miss Estella Reel; North Dakota, Elmira Bates. Nineteen women in Kansas are county superintendents of public schools; and Miss Mace King, a recent graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, is register of deeds at Abilene. Miss Mary Barker Bates is one of the school directors of Denver.—Exchange.

The St. Louis Advocate quotes an exchange as saying that Montana has eight saloons to every church. This is not a very wonderful record for a great city; but it strikes us as remarkable for a whole commonwealth and especially for one that is so sparsely populated as Montana. We do not agree with Dr. Palmore that any region where the devil has such a start as this needs help from without. Both the Mission Board and our Church Extension Board ought to make liberal appropriations to Montana; and our people ought to give as they have never given before for the spread of the Gospel in the far West. What would Mississippi and Louisiana be if they had eight saloons to every church?

The American Bible Society published during the month of July 60 Bibles. This is an average of more than 220 per day. And yet the Bible Society is only one of many agencies engaged in publishing the Word of God. The Oxford Bible and the Harriman Bible are at present in greater demand than are the publications of the American Bible Society. Then there are many publishers of Family Bibles whose sales aggregate an enormous sum. Add to this the Bibles sold by the various denominational publishing houses, and it will be seen that the Word of God is being circulated on a scale of vast magnitude. In our estimation this is a most favorable omen. We have great faith in the power of the divine Word.

The managers of the Atlanta Exposition having signified their intention to have a bull-fight as one of the attractions of the big show, an effort has been made to induce the United States government to prevent it. This has proved unavailing. It seems that the managers expect to have everything their own way. The Wesleyan Advocate is lifting up its voice in indignant protest. It serves notice upon the managers that they are pursuing a course which will cause a large percentage of the best citizenship of the State to let the Exposition severely alone. We congratulate the Wesleyan upon the stand it has taken. The time has come when all good citizens, and especially all Christians, should stand shoulder to shoulder in opposition to such exhibitions of brutality as the bull-fight and the prize-fight. If the Exposition managers think they can get along without the patronage of Christian people, or if they think that Christians are engaged only in a mild belief opposition to this infamy, let them carry out their programme. We predict that they will learn wisdom in the only way that some people ever learn it—by experience. Elsewhere will be found in this issue an article from the Central Advocate anent this medieval barbarism.

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes. W. C. BLACK,

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

The following will be read with pain by the numerous friends of Bro. and Sister Evans:

On Thursday, Aug. 8, at 2:30 P. M., the little angel that the wise Father had loaned to us was called home. He had been with us for 1 year 3 months and 24 days. We called him Charles Fort Evans; but now he has a new name. Heaven means more to us now than it ever did before. Pray for us that this affliction may be for God's glory. WM. G. EVANS.

Notes from the Arcadia District, Louisiana Conference.

Notwithstanding the excessive hot weather, this is the season of protracted meetings. The farmer can not spare the time before crops are laid by, and when harvesting time comes everything is engaged and all time economized to house and save what has been made. So our revival meetings must be crowded within the limits of two months—July and August. This applies especially to our country appointments. For the last month we have been engaged in helping our neighbors and conducting a meeting in our own work.

I assisted Bro. C. F. Staples, pastor on the Vernon circuit, in three protracted meetings at New Prospect, Oak Ridge and Longstraw. At all of these meetings the good Lord honored the Word preached and heard the prayers offered, and the Holy Ghost was manifest in convicting and converting power, especially was it so at Longstraw last Wednesday night. I don't think I ever saw a greater display of divine power. The Holy Ghost came down in the church and practically took charge of the meeting. At that service about twenty-five souls were converted. A professed infidel was present, and from the divine power manifest he was converted to the truth of Christianity. Bro. Staples is doing a fine work on the Vernon circuit, and is in great favor with his people. I left him last Friday at the close of his meeting. I learned Monday that he was sick in bed. I hope nothing serious.

My meeting at Douglas was a glorious success, assisted by Bros. Staples, Pipes and Pollard. On account of sickness in my family, I did not get there on Sunday; but Bro. S—— was present and opened the meeting in good order. The meeting lasted eight days and resulted in 25 or 30 conversions and 15 accessions to the church. The church was greatly strengthened. As a result of this meeting, an Epworth League has been organized at Douglas.

Bro. May, pastor on the Arcadia circuit, informs me that he had a very successful meeting on his work, at Payne's Chapel. About 21 were added to the church.

I learn that B. H. Sheppard, on the Ringgold circuit, assisted by J. B. Casity, has had a good revival at Dubelly.

The work on this district is on the up-grade, the preachers generally are in good health and fine spirits, and in good condition for the Summer and Fall campaign.

I neglected to state that Bro. Barr had enjoyed a gracious revival at Downsville.

Bro. J. D. Harper, our efficient presiding elder, has been greatly afflicted in the serious illness of his wife. He was forced to be absent from several of his quarterly meetings on account of said affliction. I am happy to state that she is now much better, and Bro. H—— has taken up his work again.

Our people are greatly revived in spirits; crop prospects are good—in fact, the corn is made, and the yield generally will be fine. We will have enough for home consumption and some to spare. We can tell but little about the yield of the cotton crop as yet. Yet the opinion of many farmers is, that the outlook was never better for a good crop. If this be realized, with a good price for cotton in the Fall and Winter, our people will be all right. There has been some sickness in this country; more than usual, doubtless caused by the excessive rains this Summer. We have lost valuable citizens. Dr. H. T. Smith, an old and highly esteemed physician of this place, was buried here last Sunday. I feel grateful to God that after an illness of four weeks my daughter is now much better, and we hope will soon be up.

Ruston, a beautiful country town, situated on the V., S. and P. railroad, about forty miles west of Monroe, has been for many years an educational center. Here the Louisiana Chautauqua is established, and now the State Legislature has established here the State Industrial College, which will give a new impulse to the educational interest of our town. The college building is now near its completion, and is quite an imposing brick structure, two stories high, with good capacity. They have a large mechanical work shop, built of wood. With Prof. A. T. Prescot as president, and an able and accomplished faculty, there will be good work done here in educating the youth of our State.

The Board of Trustees of our male and female college have made arrangements, I understand, to have their building, which was destroyed by fire, replaced by another new structure.

The session of the Louisiana Chautauqua this year is considered to have been the most successful of any previous year of its existence. It is a noble institution, well calculated to develop and elevate the intellectual, social, educational and moral character of the country; and if wisely and prudently managed, it will accomplish this end.

These notes are already too lengthy.

Epworth League Conference.

I see the Finance Committee are calling for $500 to meet the expenses of the Epworth League Conference, to meet in New Orleans in October. The object of that meeting is to organize a State Conference. Why all that outlay of money? Remember the Chattanooga Conference cost $7 500. I think such extravagancies unreasonable, and will hurt the cause. If New Orleans can't run a little State Conference on less than $500, send it out in the country. Will run it on less money. Send it to us at Jeanerette. We will run it for nothing. Let us hear from other pastors. Dr. Beard tells me that New Iberia will take it for nothing. We would be glad to have it up this way.

Topisaw Camp Meeting.

Our camp meeting at Topisaw this year proved to be one of the best we have had for years. Bro. C. L. Chilton, of Montgomery, Ala., did most of the preaching. He preaches plain, pointed and scriptural sermons. Why anyone should close the doors of their church against Chilton, Carradine and others is something I do not understand. God is certainly using them for his glory, and in spreading scriptural holiness over our land.

A very large number were saved and sanctified during our meeting. To God be all the glory.

I send herewith fourth round of quarterly meetings for Sardis district for publication. This, in many respects, is a good year. Meetings are being held throughout the district with varied success. Altogether this is, and promises to be, the best year of the four. Amen. Bro. Perkins has been transferred by Bishop Fitzgerald to West Texas Conference, and stationed at Sherman Street, San Antonio. Bro. Cunningham takes his place at Tyro, and not an appointment will be missed. Ours is a fine system.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

HOME CIRCLE.

OPPORTUNITY.

BY C. B. MORRELL.

A judgeship is vacant, the ermine awaits
The shoulders of youth, brave, honest and true,
Some one will be standing by fame's open gates,
I wonder, my boys—Will it be one of you?

The president's chair of a great railroad maze
Is empty to-day, for death claimed its due;
The directors are choosing a man for his place,
I wonder, my boys—Will it be one of you?

A pulpit is waiting for some one to fill—
Of eloquent men there are only a few;
The man who can fill it must have power to thrill;
The best will be chosen—Will it be one of you?

The great men about us will pass to their rest,
Their places be filled by the boys who pursue
The search for the highest, the noblest, the best,
I wonder who'll fill them: I hope 'twill be you.

—Ram's Horn.

Home's Far Reaching Influence.

A bank official, speaking of the defalcation of one of his clerks, recently made this suggestive remark: "Had I known he had not a happy home, I would not have kept him in so responsible a position." There is involved in the remark a truth of widest application. The home is the basis of all life. A happy home is essential to safety and success in every department of life. Occasionally a man or woman is strong enough to endure discord at home without flinching at any point of duty. But the majority are not so, they become discouraged, lose heart, and at last break down. Many of the sudden and surprising lapses are to be traced to this cause.

When one feels himself tied for life to a home, and has become convinced that there is no rest or happiness in it for him, it is not surprising that he becomes discouraged and gives up to some sudden temptation. On the other hand, a man is prepared to stand almost any storm, if he has a happy home, full of sympathy and love, into which he may retreat. He has something to fight for. The thought of his dear ones, in his absent hours, is an invisible yet ever-present force, helping to win his battles, adding strength to his arms, steadiness to nerve and fortitude to heart. Many a man's success is due largely to his happy home.

How much happier the world might be; how much better, how much more of success and virtue, if, with a little thoughtfulness and effort, the homes were made what they should be—centers of joy and loving confidence! How bitterly Carlyle bewailed his past thoughtlessness and want of delicate tenderness toward his wife. "God reward thee, dear one! now that I can not even own my debt! Oh, why do we delay so much till death makes it impossible? Fools! Fools! we forget that it has an end. Blind and deaf that we are! Oh, think, if thou yet love anybody living, wait not till death sweeps down the paltry little dust clouds and idle dissonances of the moment, and all be at last so mournfully clear and beautiful when it is too late."

Let us take the sad lesson to heart; for it is one that we all need. We have the power, by a little sympathy and forethought, to make the home the center of every radiant influence which is to sweeten the whole social lump. We can fill our homes with the warmth and sunshine of a strong and healthy affection, that shall make this one spot a bit of heaven on earth.—Selected.

The Moral Value of Neatness.

One of the serious mistakes made by mothers in training their children, is in supposing that careful habits can be cultivated in careless surroundings. A ragged or worn carpet, so little valued by the mother that grease or ink spots can be left on it without causing comment, may become a moral calamity. Tying the child up in a bib, and giving it the liberty to spill its food when eating, is responsible for bad table habits in the men and women whom we meet. A child who is made to eat its food carefully in a room where the furnishings are respected, where a penalty will follow carelessness, naturally acquires careful, refined manners. Many a mother spends more time repairing damages—the result of careless habits, due largely to the furnishings in the dining-room—than she would need to spend in setting a table carefully and keeping the room in order; so that its order and neatness commanded the respect of the children. The ounce of prevention is worth several pounds of cure in the training of children, and it is a pity that the ounce of prevention is not administered in infinitesimal doses necessary in early childhood rather than the radical doses necessary to overcome neglect in matters that are never minor—for manner and habits mark the person.—The Religious Herald.

Longfellow's Motto.

It is said that when Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was a professor in college, he gave as a motto to his pupils, "Live up to the best there is in you." We can not vouch for the anecdote, and do not know what is its authority, but the thought which it suggests is a noble one. There are two natures in every man: one looking down, the other looking up. One prompts the lower life, the other the higher. One says: "Have a good time, never mind to-morrow;" the other says: "Love not pleasures, love God; this is the everlasting yea." One seeks to know the right and the noble, that it may do it.

Every youth at every moment is living either for the better or for the worse that is in him. There are moments when even the commonest of us have aspirations and longings, there are moments when the best of us have temptations and impulses toward the baser life. We choose our own aims and ideas, and, consciously or unconsciously, we grow toward them. We can, if we choose, live down to the lowest that is in us and we need not look outside of ourselves to find that which is as low as hell itself. We can live up to the best that is in us, and we can find aspirations which do not stop short of heaven. Let us seek those things which are above, and live up to our best of thought and character and aim.—Exchange.

OUR TREASURE.

BY FRANCES MINOR MONTGOMERY.

"I will fill their treasures."—Prov. viii, 21.

In every heart there lies a treasure
Of gold, and frankincense, and myrrh,
So full no man its wealth can measure,
So deep no stranger's hand can stir.

The gold of love that, with its beauty,
Can gild what else were common things,
And spread o'er life, and work, and duty,
The glow of burning cherub's wings.

The frankincense of joy's completeness,
That sheds abroad its fragrant grace,
To fill, in rich, unstinted sweetness,
With incense all the holy place.

And myrrh of hope that lies unheeded
Beneath the gold and frankincense,
Content to wait, nor plead nor needed,
Till death or change have borne them hence.

Then with its tender fragrance stealing
It breathes a balm for every wound,
And wafts the soul to God for healing,
In heaven where love and joy abound.

Crystal Springs, Miss.

Good Advice.

In the pocketbook of Hon. Stephen Allen, who was drowned when the "Henry Clay" was burned on the Hudson, several years ago, was found a printed slip, apparently cut from a newspaper, of which the following is a copy. It is worthy to be engraved on every young man's heart.

Make few promises. Always speak the truth. Never speak evil of anyone. Keep good company, or none. Live up to your engagements. Never play a game of chance. Drink no kind of intoxicating liquors. (To which may be added: Use no tobacco.) Good character is above all things else. Keep your own secrets, if you have any. Never borrow, if you can possibly help it. Do not marry until you are able to support a wife. Keep yourself innocent, if you would be happy. When you speak to a person, look him in the face. Make no haste to be rich, if you would prosper. Ever live (misfortune excepted) within your income. Save when you are young to spend when you are old. Avoid temptation, through fear you may not withstand it. Never run into debt, unless you see a clear way to get out again. Small and steady gains gives competency with a tranquil mind. Good company and good conversation are the sinews of virtue. Your reputation can not be essentially injured except by your own acts. If anyone speak evil of you, let your life be so that no one will believe him. When you retire to bed, think over what you have been doing during the day. Never be idle; if your hands can't be employed usefully, attend to the cultivation of your mind. Read over the above maxims carefully and thoughtfully at least once a week.—Selected.

A Chance for Heroism.

"Oh, dear!" said Willie Gray, as he set down the saw block and looked on the kindling wood which he ought to have been splitting for his mother; "I do wish I could do something for the world; some great action that everyone could admire, that would make the country and the world better and happier. I wish I could be a hero like Washington, or a famous missionary like Judson; but I can't do anything or be anything."

"Why do you want to be a hero?" asked his cousin, Mary Maynard, who, coming up just then, happened to overhear his soliloquy.

"O," said Willie, coloring, "everyone admires a hero, and talks about him, and praises him after he is dead."

"That's the idea of it, is it?" said Polly. "You want to be a hero for the sake of being talked about?"

Willie did not like this way of putting it. "Not only that, but I want to do good to people, do something worth doing."

"That sounds better, but believe me, Willie, the greatest heroes have been men who thought least about themselves, and more about their work; and so far as I can recollect now, the great—I mean according to the Christian standard—have always begun by doing the duty nearest to them, however small."

Here he took up the ax and began to split the kindling wood, and when that was done, he set to work to pick up the sticks without a word; but though he said nothing, he thought the more. "I've wasted lots of time thinking what great things I might do if I only had the chance," he thought, "and I've neglected the thing I could and ought to do, and made a lot of trouble for mother. I think I'd better begin my heroism by fighting my own laziness."—Christian Observer.

Be Courteous.

If you wish to please, dear girls, cultivate the charming grace of courtesy. Do not let a false idea of dignity and good breeding seal your lips to such kindly words as shall brighten other lives. Thanks are due to the servant who conscientiously tries to follow your command, to the shopgirl who patiently endeavors to match your silk or wool, or to those who serve you in any capacity. You refuse alms to the beggar on the street whom your principles may not allow you to countenance; but you may do it in a way and with such fitting words as shall arouse any latent spark of manliness, and make him long to be worthy of respect.

Do not be afraid to speak to the one whom chance may have thrown by your side during an hour's travel. Help the tired mother to soothe her heavy baby; lend your book or paper to the poor girl who has perhaps had no money to buy one. So shall you one day hear the blessed words: "Ye have done it unto me."—Selected.

The Effect of Exercise on the Mind

But does the good effect of exercise end in the body? Is that simply larger and stronger? The mind, too, has its share of good. In the first place, the brain and nervous system are supplied with blood and more of it. The repair of the waste is more completely made. This of itself is one great gain. But in all use of the voluntary muscles there is, as the term implies, a necessary putting forth of will. The mind is exercised while the body works. And this is especially true in all exercises which require skill, in which the mind has an object to gain through the skillful use of the body. This mental element comes in very early in a child's life—as, for instance, in learning to walk, to swim, or to write. All through the years of childhood it accompanies motions in games, most mind being required in those games which require most skill. So those gymnastic exercises which call for combinations of muscles in action, and need quickness and exactness, are more useful for the majority of children and men than those requiring the use of strength alone. For, to attain success in games or exercises of skill, not only quickness of body is needed, but an alertness of mind, and often, too, quickness of the senses of sight and hearing. This mental element in certain athletic games explains, in a measure, their fascination. They furnish an exercise not for the body alone, but for the whole man—every part of his being, including his mind, his social nature, and even his moral nature, coming into play.—From The Physical Element in Education, by Prof. E. L. Richards, in The Popular Science Monthly, for August.

Keeping Cool.

It is very much as one looks at it whether one is to suffer or enjoy much during the Summer. Fretting and fidgeting and violent fanning add to one's discomfort. To go right on with one's work, and neither think nor care for the heat, often enables one to forget it; and if the mind be only held superior, the body does not so mind being too warm or too cold. Some foolish people actually fuss and fume themselves into fevers, when Summer is reigning in her bounty, ripening fruits and grains, and giving us her splendid skies and sunsets. To keep the house cool, air it thoroughly in the early morning, then close the windows and screen doors, and darken bedrooms and parlors. A dark closed room will be comfortable in mid-day. Select a cool window, or a corner of the veranda, and carry your books and sewing there, or establish yourself under a tree. Eat cold dishes and ripe fruit. Fan moderately. Do not drink quantities of iced water. Do not let yourself be annoyed or vexed with anyone. Bathe at least twice a day, and think pleasant thoughts. — Harper's Round Table.

The spirit which we manifest toward others naturally tends to excite the same spirit in them. Kindness begets kindness, while harshness ruffles the temper and excites resentment. Men often complain of the treatment which they have extended to them. You must treat others kindly, if you would receive kindness in return. Actions, like seeds, produce fruit of their own kind.—Methodist Recorder.

Massacre of Missionaries in China.

Dispatches reached us on the fifth instant, via London, that ten missionaries had been brutally murdered in Ku-cheng, China. On the following day a telegram was received at our Mission Rooms which reads:

Shanghai, Aug. 6, 1895.

Lambuth, Nashville, Tenn.:

Horrible massacre. More danger. Move Washington.

PARKER AND REID.

Upon receipt of this message from our missionaries in Shanghai, we immediately telegraphed Dr. S. L. Baldwin, one of the secretaries of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church in New York, pledging co-operation with other Boards in representation at Washington City. To lose no time, we united with Dr. Chester, secretary of the Southern Presbyterian Board in Nashville, in a communication to the Secretary of State, asking for vigorous measures for protection. The following reply was promptly returned from the State Department:

Washington, D. C., Aug. 7, 1895.

To Rev. W. R. Lambuth and Rev. S. H. Chester, Nashville, Tenn.:

Your telegram of to-day is believed to relate to the Ku-cheng murders of British subjects. No American injured. Department is in communication with minister and consuls and with navy. Would it be convenient for you to send me by mail a correct list of all Chinese stations maintained by your societies, with names of Americans thereat? ALVEY A. ADEE,

Acting Secretary of State.

In addition to the above the Associated Press telegrams report that Minister Charles Denby, our representative in Peking, has made "sweeping and peremptory demand" upon the Chinese government for the fullest protection of all Americans living in China.

We have felt these statements due the personal friends of our missionaries and of the cause. No American has been killed, and our own people are not in the area of disturbance. Chentu, where the riots occurred in May, is over one thousand miles up the Yangtze river; and Ku-cheng, the scene of the terrible tragedy of Aug. 5, is far to the south of Shanghai, and one hundred miles up the Min river. For special preservation thus far of our own workers we are humbly grateful; but the entire Empire being in a state of commotion, we know not what a day may bring forth. There is a general feeling of unrest. It naturally grows out of the war and China's humiliation. This ground-swell may result in local disturbances fomented by secret societies, or in a general upheaval widespread and resulting in a dynastic change.

We confidently believe that the final ontcome of the late war will be for the furtherance of the gospel. In the meantime it behooves us to be vigilant as well as prayerful. We have done all in our power to meet the emergency by prompt and vigorous representation; now let the whole church engage in prayer that divine protection and grace be vouchsafed all native Christians and missionaries in China, especially to those at points remote from the coast. We suggest that Sunday, Aug. 25, be observed as a day of prayer for China, and that especial supplication be made from our pulpits on that day. China must be won for Christ. God forbid that it should require the blood of more men and women than those who fell martyrs at Ku-cheng. But the truth will prevail, and heathen systems must go down, though an empire be rent in twain.

WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

Mission Rooms, Aug. 10, 1895.

Old habits of sin are hard to kill. We seem to have killed and buried them, but do you not sometimes hear a knocking beneath the ground? Do you not feel the dead thing turning in its coffin, and see the earth moving above its grave? This is the penalty of the days given to the flesh. Till his dying day the man who has been a drunkard or a fornicator, a liar or a swearer, will have to keep watch and ward over the graveyard in which he has buried the past.—James Stalker, D. D.

Senator Pat Walsh, of Georgia, is reported to have said a few days ago in a public address, substantially this: "I have seen go over our people the destructive wave of pestilence. I have seen them endure the horrors of war, but the most destructive wave I have known is that now on us—the wave of cupidity."

Nothing hurts a critic except indifference. He will die either of old age or of chagrin.—Baltimore Advocate.

One symptom of backsliding is a lack of thankfulness.

Culture.

This is an age of culture; but we must not forget that culture alone is only a refined name for selfishness. We too often hear its praises in the pulpit. We are told that we must develop our own powers, make the most of our talents, secure education, training, get a sense of beauty and propriety, follow art, secure polish; become as wise, as strong, as cultured, indeed, as we can. All very well; but that does not take the poison out of the soul. The poison is selfishness; and learning, manners, art, for selfish purposes, is no different in real character from strength or cunning used in a brutal instead of a cultivated way for one's own enrichment or pleasure. The poet who went to prison the other day for two years is no better than the murderer or ravisher with whom he looks alike, apostle of culture though he is.

There is only one way to get the ugly out of the soul, and that is by the method of grace, taught well by Moses and best by Jesus Christ. It is by killing selfishness with the principle of love. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself." Put that first in the soul, and it will cleanse it and make it fair and beautiful; nothing else can. The cure must be radical. Then add all the culture you will, the learning, the art, the grace, the polish; but direct them to the purposes of grace, not the purposes of selfishness.

Culture is good, is beautiful; but culture for its own sake is contemptible, because it is utterly selfish, and therefore unworthy. Never listen to the teacher who says, "Make the most of yourself," unless he adds, "for the good you can do to others." It is the object to which culture is applied that makes it worthy or unworthy. The fact that a man or woman is cultivated, can talk French, quote Goethe, discuss Watson's last poems or praise the last impressionist picture or realistic novel, is no proof that he is anything more than what our Lord was frank and true enough to call a whited sepulcher.

Nevertheless, cultured selfishness is pleasanter, more agreeable than uncultured selfishness. Let us try by education to polish our brutes if we can. But let us remember, after all, that polished Rome was worse than the rude Rome of the times of Tarquin's violence; and culture without grace only shuts its eyes against the hell to which it is rushing.

How Mrs. Wm. Henry Makes Money!

I have been so successful in the past few months that I feel it my duty to aid others by giving them my experience. I have not made less than $18 any day for the last five months, and have not canvassed any. I put a notice in the papers that I am selling the Iron City Dish Washer, and people send for them by the dozen. They give such good satisfaction that every family wants one. Dishes washed and dried in two minutes. I think any person can easily clear $10 a day, and double that after they get started good. I don't see why anyone should be destitute when they may just as well be making lots of money if they try. Address the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and they will give you all instructions and testimonials necessary to succeed.

SMITH—Mrs. NANCY A. SMITH (nee Hall) departed this life July 26, 1895, in Haynesville, Claiborne parish, La., aged sixty-five years two months and twenty-four days. She was the daughter of Morgan and Rebecca Hall, and born in Sumter county, Ga., May 2, 1830.

Sister Smith professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in the fourteenth year of her age. She was married to James R. Smith, Nov. 11, 1847. In 1850 her husband moved to Claiborne parish, La. Bro. Smith was many years a local preacher in our church, and labored in protracted meetings with this writer with great acceptability. I have often visited the family, was well acquainted with Sister Smith in her home life. She was always a faithful, consistent Christian. The salvation of her children was the great care and burden of her life. She was a good wife and mother, a kind and considerate neighbor. She was devoted to the church of her first love.

She died in the triumphs of a living faith, and has gone to meet and rejoice with loved ones gone before. God bless the bereaved ones! JNO. A. MILLER.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Rev. Dr. Edward Beecher, brother of the famous Henry Ward Beecher, is dead, at the age of ninety-two.

The Riverside Tube Works at Benwood, W. Va., has added 10 per cent. to the wages of its employees for the second time in three months.

The commission sent out to view the Nicaragua Canal reports that it will cost probably $110 000,000. The first estimate was $64 000 000.

W. W. Taylor, the South Dakota treasurer, who stole $367 000 got five years at hard labor. His services cost the State something over $200 a day.

Ex-Chief Justice Strong, of the United States Supreme Court, died on the nineteenth, at Minnewaska, N. Y. He will be buried at his home, Reading, Pa.

Hon. J. B. Grives, of Edwards, Miss., has been nominated by the Democratic party as a candidate for District Attorney. He is a man of ability, and will meet the responsibilities of the place with honor to himself and benefit to the State.

A company of capitalists has been organized in San Francisco, which hopes to supply some 20,000 horse-power of electric energy to that city, by damming a stream seventy five miles from the city, and building a power plant there.

The management of the Atlanta Fair expects to see 150,000 teachers and scholars from all parts of the United States at the Exposition. It is proposed to have a special "day" set apart for them, and to ask the schools and colleges in all parts of the country to give a special vacation of a week to facilitate their attendance.

There appears now to be a very good prospect of the successful organization in this city of a naval reserve battalion. The organization of such a force in accordance with the act of Congress creating a naval reserve militia in the seaboard States is authorized by an act of the State Legislature passed at its session of a year ago.

On Aug. 16 there took place at the Cotton Exchange a conference of gentlemen representing the various commercial bodies, with Governor Foster, from which it is probable there will result a determined effort to have Louisiana properly represented at the Atlanta Exposition. An association was formed and steps inaugurated looking to the providing of ways and means for securing a proper exhibit.

Chief Justice Fuller is protesting against the tendency of the day to crowd all sorts of cases upon the Supreme Court. He points out that while the Supreme Court has always taken cognizance of capital cases in which constitutional questions are involved, of late there has developed a tendency to invoke the highest court of the land on habeas corpus and similar writs.

The Gumry Hotel, in Denver, Col., was wrecked by a terrible explosion on Aug. 19. The rear half of the building, a five-story brick and stone structure, went down with a crash. The hotel was crowded with guests and some of them must have been killed, as well as the entire force of hotel employees, who were sleeping in the portion of the building that fell. By some estimates forty people were in the portion of the hotel destroyed, nearly all of whom must be dead.

On the ninth instant R. T. Dirkins of Madison county, was shot and killed by T. D. Marshall, H. Coleman and R. C. Fox, all of Vicksburg, Miss. They were immediately arrested and incarcerated. On the fifteenth the three appeared before the Circuit Court, Judge Mayers presiding, and pled guilty to the charge of murder in the first degree, and were sentenced to imprisonment for life. Less than a week intervened between the killing and the sentence. Mr. Dirkins was a relative of Bishop Galloway.

FOREIGN.

The Panama Canal Company has enough money raised, it is said, to keep 10 000 men at work for two years.

The foundation stone of the national mounment to the late Emperor William I. was laid in Berlin, on Aug. 18, by his grandson, William III.

An attack was made by 500 Bulgarians on the Mohammedan village of Despot, across the Turkish frontier. The later reports received showed that 300 houses were burned and 100 persons killed. A dynamite bomb was thrown from a mosque into a crowd of refugees.

The return of Lord Salisbury to power, with a certainty that Lord Rosebery's passive foreign policy will be replaced by aggressive and firm management of the external relations of the British Empire, causes the growing enmity of France towards England to attract considerable attention.

A census of the Parliament just assembled shows that only 190 out of 668 are new members. As to occupations, 150 are lawyers, 54 are manufacturers, 88 are merchants, 10 professors in universities, 31 journalists, 12 skilled laborers, 19 brewers, distillers and wine merchants, 46 army and navy officers in active service, 146 gentry, peers' sons and peers' brothers.

The recent visit of Emperor William to England, taken in connection with the return of Lord Salisbury to power in that country, has given rise to talk of a possible entente between Germany and Great Britain. It was commonly believed that during Lord Salisbury's former ministry a tacit understanding existed with Germany, whereby the two countries were to aid each other under certain contingencies.

The storm of indignation which the recent massacre of European missionaries in China has occasioned promises to put an end to the system of terrorizing foreigners which has prevailed with more or less regularity for years. A realization of the full facts in the case has made the powers determine that China must be taught to respect her obligations, or forfeit the right to be treated as a civilized power.

Gen. S. B. Maxey, of Paris, Texas, died at Eureka Springs, Ark., on the sixteenth. He was a man of first-class abilities and great force of character. He made a brilliant record in the Mexican War and also in the Confederate Army, in which he was a major-general. He was a graduate of West Point. After the war he served two terms in the United States Senate, making a record for statesmanship no less honorable than that which he had made as a soldier. He was about seventy years of age.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Spring No. 2, for the Gouty Diathesis, Bright's Disease, Etc.

Dr. Thomas H. Buckler, of Paris (formerly of Baltimore), Suggester of Lithia as a Solvent for Uric Acid, says:

"Nothing that I could say would add to the well-known reputation of the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER I have frequently used it with good results in Uric Acid Diathesis, Rheumatism and Gout, and with this object I have ordered it to Europe, from Coleman & Rogers, of Baltimore. Lithia is in no form so valuable as where it exists in the Carbonate, the form in which it is found in BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Nature's mode of solution and division in water which has passed through Lepidolite and Spodumene Mineral formations."

Dr. William B. Towles, Professor of Anatomy and Materia Medica in the Medical Department of the University of Virginia.

"I feel no hesitancy whatever in saying that in Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, Stone in the Bladder, and in all Diseases of Uric Acid Diathesis, I know of no remedy at all comparable to BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Its effects are marked in causing a disappearance of albumen from the urine. In a single case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys I witnessed decided beneficial results from its use, and from its action in this case I should have great confidence in it as a remedy in certain stages of this disease. In Dyspepsia, especially that form of it in which there is an excessive production of acid during the process of nutrition, in some of the peculiar affections of women, and in Chronic Malarial Poisoning, etc., I have found it highly efficacious."

Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, of New York, Professor of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital:

"In all cases of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, I have found BUFFALO LITHIA WATER greatest service in increasing the quantity of urine and in eliminating the albumen."

A Chance to Make Money.

It seems strange that people will not improve their opportunities; they all want to get rich, but have not enough enterprise to succeed. I believe any man or woman can clear $10 a day in the Dish Washer business, as it is just booming now; out not one in 500 has push enough to enter the field and reap the harvest. I have been in the business over a year, and have cleared over $20 a day, without canvassing any. I have examined all the Dish Washers, but none equal the Climax. Address the Climax Mfg Co., Columbus, Ohio, and they will tell you how to proceed and you can do well in city or country as every family wants a Climax Dish Washer. When we know of opportunities like this, I think it our duty to inform others, as this is a chance for all to make money honestly and easily.

THE DEMONIACS IN GADARA.

(Matt. viii, 28; Mark v, 1; Luke viii, 26.)

This narrative presents many difficulties. Have no space to explain them all. Will remain on surface.

1. Christianity has done much for the amelioration of suffering mankind.

(1) Insane asylums were not known of yore. Now they are found in every State.

(2) Of human ills, the loss of intellect is the greatest. Once intellectually bright, attractive, genial; now a brute. The light of intellect extinguished. Darkness.

(3) Insanity increases. Social complications, bodily and mental excesses, immorality, the cause. Beware!

2 Here we find one, St. Matthew says two, possessed with devils—insane, domiciled among the tombs.

(1) Ordinarily, possessed with devil is tantamount to being unconverted. In the spiritual, as in the physical realm, there is no vacuum. Where the Holy Spirit is not found, the devil is at home.

(2) But in the case of the party in our text his moral turpitude resulted in cranial derangement. He was cast out from society. Perhaps intemperance, lewdness, the cause.

(3) Here the devils were opposed to expulsion, just as men are unwilling to be converted.

(4) As a dernier resort, the devils ask the privilege of entering a herd of swine. Devils not omniscient, else they would have known that such occupancy would be brief. As expressed in Coleridge's "Job's Wife:"

"God, who brings good out of evil, Took pains to disappoint the devil."

Would that the devils had perished with the swine.

(5) The spokesman of the devils declared that his name was legion, because of numerousness. According to Milton:

"They fill the air, they darken heaven,
And rule this lower world."

3. The effects of the miracle here recorded are the same as those frequently witnessed at revivals.

(1) The liberated man sat, clothed and in his right mind, at the feet of Jesus. As in the case of the prodigal, of whom it is said, "When he came to himself." Indicating that he had been beside himself. Converted, we are in the right mind. Clear, serene, happy.

"O! my Savior possessed,
I was perfectly blessed,
As if filled with the fullness of God."

(2) The Gadarenes request the Master to depart out of their coast. The loss of their swine led them to fear other reverses. Many would be converted and become church members, but they fear possible loss of business, friends, pleasure, etc. Hence: Away with Christ; give us Barabbas.

Baldness is often preceded or accompanied by grayness of the hair. To prevent both baldness and grayness, use Hall's Hair Renewer, an honest remedy.

The Malone College,

Is situated in the city of Holly Springs, which is the highest point in the State; hence is free from malarial influences. Accessible from all points, as it is at the junction of the Illinois Central and Kansas City railways.

The boarding department is under the special control of the president and his wife, who, with the teachers, eat at the same table with the pupils—all faring alike.

While the property of the college does not belong to the church, which is the case with many of our Conference schools, it is under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and every teacher is a member of the M. E. Church, South; three of them Methodist preachers' daughters, and one a Methodist preacher's widow. The preachers of the North Mississippi Conference are charged only half price, including board.

Prices have been put down to correspond with the low prices of everything.

The fifth annual session will begin Sept. 17, 1895, and run nine months. No money spent or time lost for elaborate commencements.

Buy Gold Mine Stock?

No!!!

Why not?

Because some bad mines have been put on the market? Would you refuse to take a good $5 bill to-day because you got a counterfeit yesterday? Only good things are counterfeited. Millions have been made in gold mines. Millions will be. Watch the fortunes made in the next two years, and verify this prophecy. Investigate us thoroughly—the more the better. You will find that we have the intrinsic value—an ideal investment, because safe principal is combined with high rate of interest. We can prove the principal safe, because of natural conditions. No bond or mortgage on the property. Estimated annual dividends from ore in sight on capital stock, 16⅔ per cent., but to those who come in now on special offer, there is an opportunity to get 66 per cent. its for Charitable Uses—The Mississippi Constitution.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

No important decision has been re-tly delivered by the Supreme Court Mississippi, which gives a clear con-uction of two very objectionable ses in our new Constitution. The ions referred to put a limitation po testamentary power, and prohibit devise by will of any property to gious or ecclesiastical associations denominations for charitable uses. the time of their adoption by the stitutional Convention of 1890, I ught it a mistake, even to misfor-e, and from that day to this I have er ceased to regret the precipitate ion. Those two sections might perly be termed, "Dissuasives to rity," or, "Provisions for the Pre-tion of Benevolence." There has no such reckless expenditures for rity—no such impoverishment of mediate heirs-at-law by lavish de-s to benevolence—as to necessitate rigorous restraints here enthroned ur organic law. Indeed, our lam-tion has been, and is, that so little ven, by will or otherwise, to chari-e purposes. These prohibitions are e less than calamitous, and if the position to rescind them should be mitted to the people, with a proper ment therefor, it would be adopt-by an overwhelming majority. The ions, as they now stand in our Con-tion, are as follows:

c. 269. Every devise or bequest of , tenements, or hereditaments, or interest therein, of freehold or less freehold, either present or future, d or contingent, or of any money ted to be raised by the sale there-contained in any last will and tes-ent, or codicil, or other testament-writing, in favor of any religious ecclesiastical corporation, sole or regate, or any religious or ecclesi-al society, or to any religious de-lination or association of persons, c any person or body politic, in , either expressed or implied, se-or resulting, either for the use and fit of such religious corporation, ty, denomination, or association, r the purpose of being given or ropriated to charitable uses or pur-, shall be null and void, and the -at-law shall take the same prop-as devised or bequeathed, as gh no testamentary disposition been made.

c. 270. Every legacy, gift or be-t of money or personal property, any interest, benefit, or use there-either direct, implied, or otherwise, ained in any last will and testa-t or codicil, in favor of any relig-or ecclesiastical corporation, sole regate, or any religious or eccle-ical society, or to any religious de-lination or association, either for its e or benefit, or for the purpose ing given or appropriated to char-e uses, shall be null and void, and distributees shall take the same as gh no such testamentary disposi-had been made.

studying the probable reasons for legislation, I have been led to re-the interesting history of the le of mortmain. It first found e in the Magna Charta, forbidding of land to religious Houses. This done in order to arrest the grasp-greed of the Roman Church, which, said, in the latter part of the Mid-Ages, owned fully one-third of all English landed estate, and thus no revenue. This passed through ous modifications until the statute Mortmain was enacted under George entitled "An Act to Restrain the position of Lands, whereby the e became inalienable." The stat-recites that public mischief had atly increased by many large and rovident dispositions made by lan-ding sod dying persons to charita-uses, to take place after their hs, to the disinheritance of their ral heirs, and enacts that in future lands or sums of money to be laid out in lands shall be given to any per-son or body, unless such gift or con-veyance shall be made or executed in presence of two witnesses twelve months before the death of the donor or grantor. In favor of churches, col-leges and hospitals, there were impor-tant modifications.

With the exception of Pennsylvania, the English mortmain laws have not been adopted in the United States. In that State bequests, devises or convey-ances, for religious or charitable uses, may be valid if made by deed or will at least one calendar month before the death of the testator. In New York gifts to charitable corporations by will must be made two months before the testator's death; and in Georgia such a gift by will is void if the testator has a wife or issue living, unless made ninety days before his death. In other States the general laws, or the charters of corporate bodies, put a check upon their acquisition of real estate.

But it will be seen that the sections in the Mississippi Constitution are more sweeping than the old mortmain statute of George II., and more drastic than any enactments by any State in the Union. And this in view of the fact that the Roman Catholics—against which this prohibition was evidently aimed—are an inconsiderable portion of our population, and most of them poor. Whatever may have been the occasion for repressive legislation in England during the Middle Ages, or the necessity for confiscating the enor-mous estates of the church in Mexico when the republic was established, we have as yet no such danger from Ro-man Catholicism in this country. In Mississippi there is least cause for alarm. But here is a constitutional provision that seeks to shut out the possibility of allowing a citizen, under any safeguards, however much he may intelligently desire it, to leave one dol-lar of his estate to charitable uses.

I am glad to say, however, that by a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Mississippi this foolish provision is not absolutely prohibitory. In the case of Blackbourn vs. Tucker et al., on ap-peal from the Chancery Court of Tate county, Chief-Justice Cooper, deliver-ing the opinion of the court, the two sections passed under review. Al-though the great body of the elaborate opinion was directed to the question of "retroactive operation"—that is, whether the Constitution applied to wills executed before its adoption—the court went farther and construed Sec-tions 269 and 270. These are the con-cluding words of the court:

"We have sought in vain for some principle upon which the two sections might be brought into harmonious reading by construction, but we are constrained to recognize the fact that the subjects are controlled by diver-gent words, too clear to admit of the same construction. We are, therefore, of opinion that while, under Section 269 of the Constitution, the devise of lands by the testator is annulled, the be-quest of the personal estate is valid, because not prohibited by Section 270." Thus it will be seen that the prohibition of devises by will to relig-ions or charitable uses applies to realty and not to personal property.

In this connection I am glad to re-port two recent gifts by will to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Mississippi. The late Rev. Geo. T. Vickers bequeathed a sum of money to be divided equally between the Parent Board of Missions and the Conference Fund of the Mississippi Conference, and a lady in Wilkinson county, who died some weeks ago, left a legacy to the worn-out preachers of the Confer-ence. I am also informed that a gen-tleman of considerable means desires to bequeath quite a handsome sum to establish an educational institution un-der the auspices of the Presbyterian Church. These gifts should increase. Better give to God's church than squander estates on spendthrifts, though they be heirs-at-law.

Midsummer Reflections.

BY H. M. DU BOSE.

This is a world of commonplace. Current literature is a Sahara, with now and then an oasis of originality, a cassia clump of genuine sentiment, or a stray palm of variety to break the gen-eral dreariness. It is held to be half a crime to think, unless one should think in the wake of certain originals, cer-tain oracles, when and by whom con-stituted nobody knows, but oracles none the less. This writer has regard-ed with silent interest the results which have followed the announce-ment lately of two or three genuinely original ideas. The gyrations of the literati who hail from the cross-roads, and indite tremendously with the goose quill, have been something to see. From what I gather, the creed of this puissant cult is, for instance, that the duplicity, double dealing and polyga-mous life of a very venerable oriental sheik got an inviolate sanctity lent them because their possessor happened to be useful in the history of truth, and chanced to get a conspicuous place in that record. The greatness and virtue of such a man stood in the superlative degree as compared with those who moved in concourse about him; but if the outer life of a modern Christian should be found no more correct than that of most of the worthies of Old Testament biography, it would need serious attention; and there is no crime committed against either the truth or the Bible in saying so. The Old Tes-tament records serve to show how much better the Christian dispensa-tion and the characters which it pro-duces are than were the Jewish dis-pensation and its exponents. One thing which, in my mind, fixes the nature of scriptural sanctification is, that the sanctification generally realized under the Old Testament plan would be very unsanctified under the New. There has been progressive experience some-where.

Another thing has been suggested to me by these observations, and that is, that the theological exploitations of the past have brought to light all that could be desirable to know respecting the moral nature of primeval man, and especially that the categories expres-sing the moral nature of young children are written and settled beyond revisal. And a thoughtful and worthy man who has written a brochure, with an orig-inal idea or two in it, undertaking to harmonize the problem with the words of the great Teacher (it is not now so harmonized), has been set upon and furiously assaulted with a shower of quotations from the "Standards," which mention leads me to say that I have also learned that there is a vague-ly defined body of writings somewhere, so denominated, with which to differ is a crime. A man who is so unfortu-nately constituted that he occasionally thinks he has had the hardihood to re-spectfully dissent from a certain view supposed to be set forth in the "Stand-ards" (of the truth of which this depo-nent saith not), and has suffered the usual consequences. The dog-fennel rhetoricians and the pig-sty philoso-phers were on him directly. Method-ist theology is all right, but the theo-logians are in great need of a glossary or a lexicon. A thousand blessings light on the head of the man who shall prepare one—and get it accepted!

Lest I should be thought to lend as-sent to a rage for novelty, and unbri-dled departure from the established systems of thought and life, I will say that these observations in no way con-trovert the necessary and essential or-der and precedents of philosophy. There are certain laws of thought, and certain masters of these laws, which we can never set aside; but the laws of thought and the subject-matter of thought are very different things. Aristotle and the Eclectics devised and discovered a subtle and coherent sys-tem of reasoning and investigation which the world has found it difficult to improve upon at any point; but over the materials to which their system is to be applied they exercised no regn-ancy whatever. Wesley and his co-adjutors devised a very safe system of theological investigation; but they did not, as they had no patent to do so, pass absolutely on the materials of their theology. Only Roman Catholic Popes and Councils do that. The Methodist fathers applied and recom-mended a determinative principle in theology, and that principle was the final test of the written Word. To claim more for them is to dishonor their own loyalty to the finality of truth. Let us put less emphasis on the adjective "Wesleyan," and more on the substantive "gospel." The man who builds a railroad seldom enjoys the luxury of operating it and sharing its dividends; and observation shows this to be true of the promoters of most other enterprises. Even St. Paul found himself able to do little more than lay the foundations of the primitive church. Other men came along and reared thereon a superstructure, thus inheriting his labors. This is the true course of things. Nine generations of men toiled to build the temple of Diana, that the truth might worship at its shrines. There is scarcely a cathe-dral in Europe at whose altars its ar-chitect and builders ever knelt. These facts should lead us to greater patience in our work. When I read in the church papers after the Gehenazides, whose endless dole is the imperfection of the church and the degeneracy of faith, I wonder much if they have ever had in contemplation for a moment the patience of Him whose the church is. If we only knew the meaning of the words, "He who made the world had abundant leisure, and rested a cycle-long Sabbath, and still serenely watches through the fretful lives of men!" The time element is not suffi-ciently regarded in either the individ-ual or collective efforts of our day. To be sure, they are not the oldest civili-zations which are the best; neither are they the oldest theologies which are reckoned the purest; but, assuredly, the best civilizations, as also the purest theologies, embody the oldest and the best-finished ideals. The materials which entered into the construction of the latest iron-clad warship, just now swinging from her stocks, are chemi-cally older than those which were built into mediæval armadoes and argosies. The theorizings of the present day, in religion, in economics, and even in the solid matters of education and science, are too much of the "hot cake," or "hasty pudding," order. The injunc-tion of Mr. Mesgles is philosophically apposite, "Count five and twenty."

One of "the signs of the times" in Southern Methodism just now is the rapid organization of "Preachers' In-stitutes." One such body is now or-ganized in Texas, and is soon to hold its first meeting. The time for slip-shod preaching in Methodist pulpits is past. The "growing preacher" is the man who will find standing in the itin-erant ranks of the future. The "full-grown" preacher, like a "full-grown" theology, is to be relegated—to him-self, perhaps to become an "evangel-ist"—quoted, of course. Let those who have understanding read. New Testa-ment evangelism is likely to be greatly promoted by the departure embodied in the "Preachers' Institute."

Mr. Editor, it would seem that many —perhaps, on second thought, not so many, but not a few—have mistaken the action of the late General Confer-ence in establishing a Commission on Federation as a step toward organic union. Nothing, I am sure, could be further from the general purpose of the church; but I, for one, have never liked the term "federation." It means more than the General Conference en-actment contemplated. It does mean, as an abstract term, some sort of or-ganic union. The fact is, that it is part of a headline written some years ago over the draft of a somewhat chi-merical plan for a loose con-federation of American Methodisms on natural or physical lines of division, and was un-advisedly adopted by the General Con-ference as a name for something quite different. What is proposed by this "federation" movement is a treaty courtesy exactly similar to that main-tained in international ministerial and consular diplomacy. The nations are not "federated" because of this diplo-matic nexus, but are enabled to treat for peaceable cession and recession in matters of territory, or for the preven-tion of hurtful friction and crossing of interests. Moreover, the transfer of citizenship from one nation to another is thus regulated and protected. All of these points, but no more, are con-templated in our scheme of "federa-tion." In point of fact, then, the act of the General Conference looked to the establishment of a joint Commis-sion on Methodist Comity and Juris-dictional Relations.

In the Living Present.

The editor of Harper's Monthly la-ments the degeneracy of the American newspaper. Calls them gossip-mong-ers, etc. Of yore the news was sifted by the editorial department; now we are treated to a diluted miscellany, true or false, fact or fiction, leaving it to the reader to take his choice.

The Medical Times, in New York, declares that tea-drunkenness in-creases. One-tenth of the invalids in the public hospitals suffer from nerv-ous complications directly attributable to excessive use of tea.

The treatment of diphtheria by anti-toxin and use of serum in other mala-dies is assuredly on the homeopathic principle of similiar simil bus curantur—like cures like. This ought to unify the opposing medical schools. Man-kind suffers and patients die because of hostility between the disciples of Es-culap and Hahneman.

Dr. Joseph Parker, of the City Tem-ple, in London, attributes the British Liberal collapse to its attempted union of Radicalism, Socialism and Labor-ism. In other words, the result of demagogism. Honesty is the best pol-icy, not only in business, but also in politics.

The dispensary system of South Car-olina is certainly a failure in checking drunkenness. State agents sell a half pint of whisky for ten cents. The commonwealth does a fine business, but more people now see "snakes" than ever before.

Chicago has a reform city govern-ment. It is well. But that govern-ment appointed three preachers—none of them Methodists, we are glad to re-cord—as street commissioners. Are there no honest men to fill those offi-ces? Dragging the holy ministry into the dirt of politics may purify the lat-ter, but the attempt will soil the for-mer.

It is popular now to clamor for re-taliation because of massacre of English missionaries in China. Yes, that mas-sacre was satanic. But, please bear in mind that the Chinese government many years ago explicitly stated that it assumed no responsibility for safety of foreign missionaries beyond the treaty ports. Those going beyond these would go at their own responsibility.

Artificial ice, made of boiled water, is certainly less likely to be injurious to health than that imported from the North. Greedy vendors in that sec-tion take the ice from convenient res-ervoirs of stagnant water and ship the same to distant climes. Thus, year after year, poisonous bacteria were in-troduced into the human system in our Southern cities. IGH DIEN.

Millsaps College.

The fourth session of Millsaps Col-lege begins Sept. 25. First session the enrollment was 140, the second 160, and the third 205 students. Surely all Mississippians (especially Methodists) want three hundred students for the fourth. We have the boys and the agency for putting them in this rapidly growing, excellent school. In our State—of which we are proud—we have three hundred itinerant and as many local preachers, and not a few strong friends. These constitute the agency. Will everyone of us be a live, watchful, pushing agent in the agency? Nothing will bring our State to the front so permanently and beautifully as an industrious and liberal interest in Christian education. Nothing will advance Methodism so greatly as a united, strenuous effort of the six hun-dred preachers, eighty thousand mem-bers and three hundred thousand friends to send, and induce the sending, of girls and boys to colleges. It is not boasting to say that there is not a better college faculty than at Millsaps College. The curriculum stands with the best in the whole country. Christian institution, surroundings, moral influence consid-ered, it is the cheapest for the facili-ties in the land. It is the place for the rich, intermediate and poor to fit themselves nobly for life—for business, out of which they get much pleasure and ample success.

Now, all the agency act zealously for one month as agents in influencing boys and young men to go to Millsaps Col-lege this approaching session. Send all the names of boys and young men who might be persuaded to go off to college to Dr. I. W. Cooper or Dr. W. B. Murrah. See the boys and parents, and kinfolk often about it. Each one of us, preachers and friends, yearning for real prosperity, is willing to render this light, but important, service. Put these men of God in communication with the vast material for college. By doing this we help make "a man," aid in the flourishing and establishing of our church, and efficiently co-operate in the betterment of our State. This is auspicious time for each of us to dis-charge a clear duty and buoyantly share an exalted privilege in accom-plishing immeasurable good. Our God is blessing us wonderfully through human instrumentality.

Maj. Millsaps is deeply concerned for all the boys—particularly the poor—gives a dollar for every one we give for educating them. He, Dr. Murrah and Bishop Galloway are diligent and sa-gacious in keeping abreast with the best methods for teaching and develop-ing character. They, with others, are studiously contriving plans and means by which to encourage, increase ad-vantage and enlarge the opportunities of the boys. Let us all labor untiring-ly together in the blessed cause.

I am working to get three or four boys to be "ready" to "answer at roll call" Sept. 25. May we all take a pleasure in sending to Drs. Murrah and Cooper several hundred names, and also completely exhaust their stock of catalogues and circulars be-tween this and the middle of Septem-ber! J. M. WYATT.

Epworth League Conference.

MR. EDITOR: In your edition of Aug. 22 a communication from R. M. Blocker was published, stating that it is "extravagance" asking $500 to defray the expenses of the State Conference.

As it is to be a State Conference, and not a New Orleans affair, it is quite reasonable that we should ask our country Leagues to help. Although the Finance Committee have aimed high, nevertheless, after paying for letter-heads, envelopes, stamps, print-ing of programmes, badges, etc., what still remains will probably be turned over for future use in League Confer-ences.

When we consider this will be our first Conference, and the extra amount of correspondence that is necessary in order to awaken our leaguers' interest in the State Conference, we can see that $500 is not too much. New Or-leans will entertain all delegates free of charge. We hope all Leagues will send delegates, and know, if they come in the right spirit, we will return to our homes feeling that it was "good to have been there," and with a greater determination to do "all for Christ."

JOHN T. CRIBBIN.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jack-son, Tenn.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow me, through your columns, to call atten-tion to the opening of the M. C. F. I. on Wednesday, the twenty-eighth of August? Our prospects are good for an overflowing school. It would be well for those intending to enter to come on the twenty-sixth or twenty-seventh, so as to be certain of securing rooms in the institute. Those coming later may have to board out in the city.

We invite an examination of our course of study and the character of work at the institute. When this is done, our college will command even greater patronage at the hands of a discriminating public.

Respectfully, HOWARD W. KEY.

Selections.

A Typical Character.

Not long ago, traveling on a railway in the United States, a conversation with a gentleman, who occupied the next seat, impressed us very much. He was bright and clever, and on some lines very intelligent. He was strongly opposed to orthodoxy, and ardently in favor of free, advanced thought on all theological subjects. He was a warm admirer of Professor Briggs, and every-one who was reputed to be heterodox. He said Briggs was condemned by the Presbyterian Church because he would not say that Moses wrote the account of his own death. We learned that he was a judge who had a high reputation for ability, yet he showed a great ig-norance on subjects on which he deliv-ered himself confidently and dogmati-cally. He certainly would not accept as evidence such loose and incorrect statements as he expressed on great theological questions. We were deep-ly interested in this gentleman's talk. He was a type of a rather large class whose views on religious subjects are determined by their prejudices and partisan predispositions rather than by facts and arguments.—Christian Ob-server.

The world has no greater hero than the man who can open his Bible wide and ask for the whole will of God, de-termined to obey though the heavens fall.

Letter from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: I enclose you herewith a copy of a very interesting letter just received by Carondelet street Sunday-school from Dr. Watkins, of the missionary force of our church in Mexico. It is very interesting in itself, but I send it to you and ask you to publish it in the ADVOCATE in order to bring before the church the opportunity he mentions of opening up a school among the Indians on the Pacific coast, trusting that it may be the means of stirring up some heart, or hearts, to make this work possible.

Yours very truly,

ALLEN F. GODAT.

New Orleans, Aug. 18, 1895.

Mexico, Aug. 2, 1895.

Mr. Allen F. Godat, New Orleans.—

DEAR BROTHER: Your kind note, containing $25 was duly received, for which many thanks. I was about six hundred miles away from home when it arrived, hence my delay in answering your letter. Catholic children, as well as Protestant, will receive benefit from it. Every cent spent on the children of Mexico tells in favor of the good cause we represent. I wish I might have from some Sunday-school in the United States, or from some other source, ten dollars per month in American money (which is worth almost double in Mexican money). I would open up a school among some Indians upon the Pacific coast who are pleading with me for a teacher and books. They are nominally Catholics, but they told me when I was among them of their big man and big woman in the top of one of the high mountains near by, that gave food to the Indians in time of scarcity. I need not explain what they meant by these large people; however, a large beefsteak has been the means of awakening an interest in the hearts of these poor Indians, who live under the trees more than nine months in the year, in favor of the gospel. I am sure that the Sunday-school children will laugh when I say that a beefsteak has been such a great blessing; but I have read in a book that I have studied since I was a child, that not even a "cup of cold water" is too insignificant for the Lord to enter into his account book, and for which the giver can draw a large interest. It is too long a story to tell you the whole of it at present (I mean about the beefsteak), but the main facts are these: About four years ago I accidentally found the Indians on the Pijinto river, a stream that empties into the ocean a little below San Blas, on the Pacific coast. I knew that two foreigners who had ventured among them without the necessary precautions had been killed by them. I was surprised indeed when late one afternoon I found myself among these, and only about fifty yards, or so, from the spot where these engineers had been killed. After a fire was kindled, and I had taken a large beefsteak from my saddle-bags, and had placed it in a pan on the fire, and my empty stomach seemed to clap its hands for joy, on account of the fine meal I was in hopes soon to enjoy, I heard a woman, who had a little babe two or three days old, call to one of my companions from the bush under the large tree near by where she was lying. He went to her, and I overheard her ask him to bring her some meat, if we should return that way, as she was so weak and hungry. Of course, I gave the woman the best part of the meal, and I would have given her all I had to eat, and even the frying-pan that I always took with me, and would have gone a few days without food myself, if necessary, rather than let that poor woman in her neglected condition suffer the pangs of hunger. After she had enjoyed, perhaps, as never before, her meal, I began to tell the people that there was no need for them to sacrifice so much to pay the priest, who lived at a long distance from the place, for baptism; that the baby would surely go to heaven even if it should die without baptism. Besides, I told them that I hoped to be back that way some time, and that I would baptize the child free of charge. Singularly enough, the child has not yet been baptized, and they are waiting for me to fulfill my promise. I talked with them nearly all that night that I stayed with them of Christ, the Savior of men; distributed Gospels among them, and gave them a few books, pens and pencils, as if they were school children, although no one that I knew among them could read or write. I have never told this fact before to my friends in the United States, lest they should laugh at me for doing what must appear to them a very strange thing indeed; but I acted with them as I would with a child who had never seen a hammer; but when I gave it to him, he would soon find a way to use it.

Well, my visit has changed the temper of these poor people. As I said, they are pleading for a school for their children. They are willing to learn of the blessed Jesus, and for the lack of money that thousands in the United States could give them, if they were so inclined, they are left in their ignorance and in their deplorable condition, socially and religiously.

But, my dear brother, I did not intend to write you about these Indians, but about my visit to a distant point in the republic, where I was visiting when your letter arrived in Mexico. I wanted to tell you how hundreds of people came to hear me preach in the town where they killed my comrade, the Rev. J. L. Stephens, some twenty years ago; and one man who had killed a Protestant attended for the first time in his life one of the last gospel services that I held there; how this big man, more than six feet high, who had tried to shoot his son because he became a Protestant, fell on the floor of the church as if he had been shot, while I was preaching; how he looked up from between the benches, and unexpectedly saw four of his little grandchildren baptized by me, and how he left the church like a crazy man at the close of the service, having been, I trust, wounded by a gospel arrow. These and other incidentals I hope to write about more fully for Dr. Lambuth to publish in the Review of Missions, where you will be able to read them.

With Christian regards to yourself and to all who, with the Sunday-school, are helping Mexico,

Your brother in Christ,

(Signed) DAVID F. WATKINS.

A Call for Help from the Indian Territory.

Dear Brethren of North Mississippi Conference:

I am a missionary in the Indian Mission Conference, employed on a mission charge. Many of you may be acquainted with the life of a missionary. The time has come that we must build a parsonage on this charge, but we are not able to do it ourselves. I am pushing everything in sight to raise the money by Oct. 1, but I see we will not be able to raise it without some help. People have not been educated to support the church as you have been; therefore, it is a hard matter to get money when they have it. But they are gaining some knowledge on this subject. My wife and I suffered from cold last Winter, and without some help the preacher may have to do worse than we.

Brethren, help us a little in this great time of need. If this were not a time of need, I should not appeal to you for help. "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" (I. John iii, 17.)

Send all contributions by registered letter to Rev. John H. Bass, Johnson, Ind. Ter., by Oct. 1, 1895, and I will publish the names and amounts of each donor in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. Hoping to receive some help from you soon, I am,

Your humble servant in the ministry,

JNO. H. BASS.

Selections.

Religion is Business.

Religion is the art of being and doing, and the school for the learning of the art is not in the closet, but in the world. Not some hallowed spot where religion is taught, and where proficients, when duly trained, are sent forth into the world, but the world itself, the coarse, profane, common world, with its cares and temptations, its rivalries and competitions, its hourly, ever-recurring trials of temper and character. This is an art which all can practice, and for which every profession and calling, the busiest and most absorbing, affords scope and discipline. When a child is learning to write, it matters not of what words the copy set to him is composed, the thing desired being that, whatever he writes, he learn to write it well. When a man is learning to be a Christian, it matters not what his particular work in life may be, the work he does is but the copy lines set for him; the main thing to be considered is that he learn to live well. The form is nothing, the execution everything. It is true, indeed, that prayer, reading, meditation, the solemnities and services of the church are necessary to religion, and that these can be practiced only apart from secular life. But it is to be remembered that such exercises do not terminate in themselves. They are but steps in the ladder to heaven, good only as they help us to climb. They are but means to an end, and that end can be best obtained by him whose life is a busy one; whose vocations bear him daily into contact with his fellows, into the intercourse of society, into the heart of the world.

No one can be a thorough proficient at navigation who has never been at sea. No man has become a soldier by studying books on military tactics in his closet. He must in actual service acquire these habits of coolness, courage, discipline, address, and rapid combination, without which the most learned in the theory of strategy or engineering will be but a school-boy soldier after all. In the same way the man of solitary study may become a most learned theologian, or may train himself into the timid, effeminate piety of what is technically called the "religious life." But never, in the highest, holiest sense, can he become a religious man until he has acquired these habits of daily self-denial, of kindness, gentleness, humility, sympathy, active beneficence, which are to be acquired only in daily contact with mankind. Religion is not a perpetual moping over good books; is not even prayer, praise, holy ordinances. These are necessary to religion; no man can be religious without them; but I repeat, religion is mainly and chiefly the glorifying of God amid the duties and trials of the world, the guiding car amid the adverse winds and currents of temptations, by the starlight of duty, and the compass of divine truth, bearing us wisely, manfully, courageously for the honor of Christ, our leader, in the great conflict of life.—Rev. John Caird.

Our Sure Evidence.

Some people say, "Oh, we know we are saved because we are so happy." It is by no means a sure evidence, for joy may be carnal, unfounded, unspiritual. Certain Christians are afraid that they can not be in a saved state because they are not joyous; but we are saved by faith, and not by joy. The Word of God is a more sure testimony to the soul than all the raptures a man can feel. I would sooner hold to a promise of my God than trust in the light of the brightest day that ever dawned. Precious as the fruit is, do not put the fruit where the root should be. Please to recollect that. Joy is not the root of grace in the soul; it is the fruit, and must not be put out of its proper position.—Spurgeon.

What is Death?

Death is sunrise, not sunset. It is birth into a better state of being. It is not destruction, but transition. It is something to be hailed with joy, not shrunk from with horror. This is the gospel view of death. But the faith of the average Christian is so weak that these expressions seem strange to him; he regards them with amazement. Happy indeed is he who, like the apostle, looks upon death as gain, and walks at liberty all his days delivered from fear.—Zion's Herald.

The Lord never meant that we should make of our immediate and daily work prison walls to shut ourselves in, so as to take no part in the vast interests of humanity. Every man stands under an arch of heaven, infinite in extent, with the constellations of the universe lighting their solemn fires above him every night, and the unwearied sun marching over his head every day. We all belong to the whole of God's world, and nothing which concerns it ought to find us indifferent. When we walk in the woods, the sweet breath of the ferns takes us back to past geologic ages; the fragrance of the firs and pines recalls the Psalms of David and the hymns of the Vedas. "Over us soars the eternal sky, full of light and of Deity." It is not meant that we should live to ourselves; we are all called on to live for every truth, every human interest, every human need, as the Lord sends them to us or sends us to them.—James Freeman Clarke.

Talk about the questions of the day; there is but one question, and that is the gospel. I can and will correct everything needing correction. All men at the head of great movements are Christian men. During the many years I was in the Cabinet, I was brought into association with sixty master minds, and all but five of them were Christians. My only hope for the world is in bringing the human mind into contact with the divine revelation.—Gladstone.

A pet doctrine of Society is that sin is gilded by distance. When a fallen woman of the community appears on the street, Society draws her robes about her and passes by on the other side. When a confessedly fallen woman from abroad appears at the theatre, Society puts on her best gown and goes to worship the gilded image. Distance lends enchantment to the view, but it has never yet turned a black sin white.—Exchange.

Begin with small things. You can not enter the presence of another human being without finding there more to do than you or I, or any soul, will ever learn to do perfectly before we die. Let us be content to do little, if God sets us at little tasks. It is but pride and self-will that says, "Give me something huge to fight, and I should enjoy that, but why make me sweep the dust?"

A malignant and censorious spirit is not compatible with a holy life. No one will believe that a man who indulges in bitter and acrimonious speech concerning his brethren is a sanctified man, no matter how loud his profession.—Baltimore Advocate.

A life without a purpose is a languid, drifting thing.—Thomas a Kempis.

The out-and-out Christian is a joyful Christian. The half-and-half Christian is the kind of Christian that a great many of you are—little acquainted with the joy of the Lord. Why should we live half-way up the hill, and swathed in mists, when we might have an unclouded sky and a visible sun over our heads, if we would climb higher and walk in the light of His face?—Alexander MacLaren.

We have become terribly familiar with sin, and we are led to think of it as accidental, as the outcome of "environments," as a misfortune, and as a bad thing toward society. We do not think and speak of it, as we should, as rebellion against God, and its wages death eternal. The Spirit of God is needed to convince of sin.—Rev. John Hall, D. D.

Infidelity reproves nothing that is bad. It only ridicules and denounces all that is good. It tears down; it never constructs; it destroys; it never imparts life. It attacks religion, but offers no adequate substitute.—J. R. Paxton.

Humility was a virtue unknown in the ancient world, and even to-day it is not widely cultivated. And yet it was one of the most striking characteristics in the life of the Lord Jesus. "He humbled himself."

A white cravat and a straight-breasted coat do not make a preacher. And a rambling harangue of an hour does not make a sermon. The opinion of some people to the contrary notwithstanding.—Exchange.

The little vexations of every-day life fly close to the earth. When we stand erect, our heads are above them, and they do not keep our brains in a whirl.

(A part of the report of the editor of items, read before W. F. M. Society, Mississippi Conference, June 13, 1895, and sent to be published by order of said Conference.)

In the prayerful study of the work, we deemed it necessary to urge entire consecration as individuals, for one tendency of organization is to lose sight of individual responsibility—to pause occasionally and consider, "Am I doing what I can?" The great need of aid for our overtaxed sisters in the different fields suggested fasting and prayer, patiently and earnestly awaiting the response to the question, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Later we called attention to Dr. Mary Walter's grand work, and the rich harvesting from the labors of other medical missionaries, hoping that some of our sisters would make preparation for this beautiful work. And as the call "to go" comes not to all, we pointed out the different demands for financial help, feeling that surely choice can be made suited to each individual desire among the many pressing needy calls which appeal with such force. We have improved every opportunity of emphasizing the importance of cultivating the mind as well as the heart; that all avail themselves of every means of storing the mind with knowledge of the needs and work of missions; that we are left without excuse for ignorance, as so much is said and written on the subject. Let's displace the hurtful trashy literature, and use wholesome mind-food that is inspiriting, finding a richer and deeper meaning in life.

(Added since read: One woman, who had been a student at a convent, said recently one method of obtaining converts to the faith of the Roman Catholic Church was to have read to the pupils brilliantly colored novels, with Catholics as heroines. This excited and impressed them so forcibly that they repeatedly expressed the desire to be like those heroines. How necessary that we use all diligence to have the young people read our literature!)

The merits of the Woman's Missionary Advocate were repeatedly presented, not forgetting The Little Worker, Evangel, the list of books published in the Advocate, recommended by Miss Barnes, and "Mission Studies," by Mrs. Butler. We recommend Dr. Lambuth's books also. We called the attention of the members of the society to Dr. Black's kindness in publishing our items, requesting each one to work earnestly to obtain at least one subscriber to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, which would pay the debt we owe and be a blessing to the subscriber.

"Remembering sorrows are halved and blessings are doubled" by sharing with others, that on the eve of a rich harvesting that surely awaits us eleventh-hour laborers must be called in ere the gleaning-time be too far advanced and the door be closed to some. Possessing the pearl of great price which so many of our brothers and sisters of the human family so sorely need, we should feel constrained by the love of Christ to labor that they should obtain it, adopting for the year the watchword of the meeting, "Through Christ which strengtheneth me." The disciples, obedient to the mandate of the King of kings, tarried for the promise of the Father. Shall we delay too long the waiting for the endowment of power which insures divine help and guidance?—for these doors so suddenly and marvelously opened surely implies a hasty entrance. These tremendous opportunities bring with them awful responsibilities. Shall not the "high priestly prayer" which Bro. Watkins so impressively presented, that has been wafted adown the ages with accumulating force, nerve us to attempt great things for the Master?

Being pleased to note the appreciation of our work by the church, and the arrangement for a more vital union by the last General Conference, we requested the pastors to obtain reports from the auxiliaries for use at the Quarterly Conferences, saying great impetus could be given the work by the presiding elders at both Quarterly and District Conferences.

Whilst we still appreciate the widow's mite, we should tremble lest we allow the evil one to blind us, and it become only a subterfuge. We stressed the duty of lovingly entreating those who have the gold of Ophir to honor the "Giver of every good and every perfect gift" by giving cheerfully as "God hath prospered him."

The children being the storehouse from whence cometh replenishing for our depleting ranks—for one by one we pass away—we deemed it necessary to insist that intelligent conscience be cultivated in the tender, impressive age, producing startling facts and figures from what the Rosebuds of Virginia accomplished; proving what would result from earnest, persistent efforts among them; giving encouragement for more zealous work than ever before. It was said by an infidel that a nation of infidels can be made "by placing children for the first ten years of life under infidel teachers." In this new order of the nineteenth century, "in which God is fulfilling himself in movements for the young," is it not mainly woman's work to faithfully care for "these little shoots of God's planting?"

"Save the man in the boy,
In the thought save the deed.
Let the whirlwind uproot the grown tree if it can.
Save the seed from the north wind.
So let the grown man face out fate.
Save the man-seed in youth."

In the tender, clinging years of the holy innocence of childhood write the beautiful lesson upon the heart: "The fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man." Then let us "faithfully, patiently, enthusiastically, hopefully do this work among the young."

Let dainty fingers cull the flowers, that they may rejoice the weary ones faltering by the wayside, or the many "shut-ins," and by their fragrant breathings teach the beautiful lesson of the resurrection of all that are not dead, but silently reposing, awaiting the life-giving touch, bringing forth loving echoes from hearts made congenial by the angelic touch of Christian love. May the voice of sweet salvation awake slumbering souls to answer to the "come forth," for surely the harvest is great, but the laborers are few! What sweet evangels the young for uplifting fallen humanity and pointing them heavenward to the God of both Jew and Gentile! "In the morning sow thy seed; and in the evening withhold not thine hand: for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

"Oh, heart of mine, keep patience,
Looking forth as from the Mount of Vision to behold
Pure, just and free the church of Christ on earth,
The martyr's dream, the Golden Age foretold.
And over all the songs of angels hear
Songs of the love that casteth out all fear,
Songs of the gospel of humanity.
So, in the midst, with the same look he wore,
Healing and blessing on Gennesaret's shore,
Folding together with all tender might
Of his great love the dark hands and the white,
Stands the Counselor, soothing every pain,
Making all burdens light, and breaking every chain."

AN APPEAL.

To the Women of the Meridian, Jackson, Vicksburg, Natchez and Yazoo City Churches—

SISTERS: As it is impossible for me to visit you personally, I have decided to make an appeal to you through our W. P. and H. M. column, and sincerely trust that every worker in the five churches will read, ponder, and they lay the matter alongside heart and conscience. I am aware that this subject is a delicate one in some quarters, and has often caused dissension among the members of some churches; still, I feel it to be my duty to speak out plainly, and then leave the matter in your keeping, or, I hope, careful and prayerful consideration.

The Parsonage and Home Mission Society is an organized branch of church work, and so recognized by the General Conference, which is its head; all other aid societies are independent. Now, then, sisters, please take your Discipline and turn to page 163, ¶ 389, Art. xii., ¶ 390; Art. xiii., ¶ 392; Art. xiv., or, perhaps, it were better to make a study of the pages from 163 to 166. Then turn to page 211, ¶ 441, and you will read, "Will you be subject to the Discipline of the church, attend upon its ordinances, and support its institutions?" Now, when you continue to use your efforts and money in "Ladies' Aid" and "Wesleyan" Societies, you are plainly disregarding the solemn vows you took upon yourself when you united with the church, for you are not only not supporting this one of its institutions, but you are actually working against it by continuing the local society.

Old as the W. P. and H. M. Society now is, every local "Ladies' Aid," or "Wesleyan," or whatever name your society bears, should long since have been organized as a Parsonage and Home Mission Auxiliary. Remember, when I plead with you to do this, and thus fall in line, that you are only keeping your vows, aiding the church institutions, and, at the same time, doing your treasury no harm, for the monthly dues are all the funds the mother society asks of the auxiliaries. The remainder is at your disposal to do with as you will, no matter how large the amount may be.

Sisters, let me urge upon you, in the name of Him we all serve, to give up all these outside societies, and merge into the Parsonage and Home Mission Societies. Your usefulness will be increased, and you will have the pleasant and satisfactory sensation of duty well done, which is its own reward.

Mrs. Lillian Baker.

Mrs. Lillian Baker (nee Fowler) was born Oct. 23, 1873, and died at Church Hill, Miss., April 30, 1895, aged twenty-one years six months and seven days.

"Lillie," as she was familiarly known and loved, was reared chiefly by her fond and loving grandparents, Capt. W. L. and Mrs. Sarah Faulk, of Fayette, Miss.

The law of compensation is manifested wonderfully demonstrated to the observant mind as we pass along through the varied experiences of life. The young bride and wife of six months lies motionless on the death-bound verge of vast eternity. True, the life was short, but the opportunities and possibilities were great. Consecrated to God in early childhood, she grew up in harmonious adjustment to the demands upon her. The sunshine of gladness and joy in the home, the delight and charm of the social circle, the active, constant and faithful worker in the church which she loved with the wealth of high appreciation of benefits conferred, she developed a symmetrical Christian character rarely attained by one so young. That she was honored and loved was unmistakably by the gloom which overshadowed the community when it was made known that "Lillie" was dead. The tokens of affection were lavishly exhibited. The most impressive expression of love's last demonstration was made by the host of friends who, with tear-bedimmed eyes and tremulous hands, strewed with unstinted profusion rarest flowers on her grave, emblematic of their hopes bound up in the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead. The body moulders in the time-honored cemetery in old Fayette; the soul, liberated and free, dwells with the Savior above the stars. Happy thought!

And now, to the loved ones, these words are affectionately offered in condolence: No sorrow, however dark and shadowy, can long veil the face of our glorified Savior from the expectant gaze of a sincere and loving disciple. The tears may, unbidden, flow, but the cries of distress and desolation may be extended for a brief season, but the complaint, "Why hast thou forsaken me?" will catch the attention of the Blessed Comforter, speed his coming, and restore to the sorrow-stricken soul the joyful assurance, "All is well." May God's angels keep their watch and vigils over the young husband, whose heart has been bereft of its fondest anticipations, and whose home has been left desolate and drear!—and the little sisters and brother beloved, who had learned to look to sister as the representative of the long-lost mother, and to the aged grandpa and grandma bowed down under the double stroke whose tears have been their meat to drink, lo! these many days! May God speedily deliver them from this Gethsemane, in which they have been so long detained!

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. E. Rutledge, P. C., Barlow circuit, Aug. 17: "We closed a five-days' meeting yesterday at Brandywine, with good results. God's presence was felt in many hearts, 8 were converted, 7 joined the church and were baptized. The local brethren (Smith and Marble) gave us efficient help. Glory to God!"

Tangipahoa, La., Aug. 19: "Rev. J. J. Smylie having had to resign as pastor of Amite City charge on account of failure of health, Rev. J. M. Alford, formerly a student of Millsaps College, and who has been serving as assistant pastor on the charge, has been appointed by the presiding elder (P. A. Johnston) to serve the work till next Annual Conference."

Rev. Jno. A. Miller, Ruston, La., Aug. 17: "I returned this morning from Bro. Pollard's meeting on the Vienna circuit, held at Antioch. He has had a glorious meeting, almost without ministerial help. About fifty conversions and thirty accessions to the church. The meeting is still going on, and, doubtless, many more will be converted. About forty penitents at the altar last night. I go this evening to Woodville to help in a meeting."

Rev. J. F. Wynn, Baker, La.: "Am thankful to report two good meetings, both lasting little over a week. Bro. Hunt LeRoy did the preaching at Brookstown. Results: 13 members added, church revived, several converted, and a children's prayer meeting organized. Bro. W. W. Drake was with me three days and nights at Black Water. Meeting closed with seven members, quite a number converted and reclaimed, and the church gloriously revived."

Rev. R. H. Barr, P. C., Trenton, Miss., Aug. 16: "I have just closed out two protracted meetings with glorious results. Thirty additions to the church, and the spiritual status of the churches raised to a higher degree, for which I feel grateful to God. I was assisted by Bros. R. A. Sibley and C. C. Griffin, who preached with power, attended by the Spirit of God. Bro. Sibley has a vigorous mind for a man of his age. His memory is wonderful. He can quote his Scripture texts with ease correctly. I regard him as a fine theologian."

Rev. J. N. Tucker, P. C., Bewelcome, Miss., Aug. 20: "Our protracted meeting closed at Hamburg, Roxie circuit, Friday evening, Aug. 16, resulting in 19 accessions, about 6 regenerations, and the membership somewhat aroused. We have the material at this place out of which to develop a strong church in the near future. They have developed more within the last few years than any church in Franklin county. Rev. J. B. Lewis, of Natchez, and Rev. J. W. Crisler, of Martin circuit, did most of the preaching, greatly to our delight and edification."

Rev. W. L. Graves, P. C., Corinth, Miss., Aug. 17: "We have just closed our first meeting on Corinth circuit, North Mississippi Conference. It was held at Box's Chapel; continued twelve days. It was a great meeting. None of us had ever seen such manifestations of divine power. More than thirty conversions, several reclamations, the church on fire, many family altars, thirty-two additions, nearly any member of the church will pray in public. Rev. W. C. Harris, of Corinth, preached four most excellent sermons, and Rev. Wason, of the M. E. Church, preached four. It seems that God is going to take the whole country."

Rev. Thos. B. White, Ruston, La., Aug. 17: "It was a privilege and 'means of grace' to be present at Cottaville Camp Meeting this year. Preaching evangelical, in power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. Fire baptized preachers, and, as messengers of heaven, the Word was keen and searching and honored of the Lord. Many were converted and sanctified—perhaps 200. Attendance great. Fervor, Christian testimony and fellowship, a general toning up of spiritual life, congregational singing in the 'spirit and with the understanding,' all conspired to unify, strengthen, comfort, develop to the 'perfect man in Christ Jesus.' Oh, it was good to be there! Glory and hallelujah to his name! I praise God for tenderness and sweetness and love unspeakable. The appointments of the camp are excellent."

CHILDREN'S DAY AT CANE RIDGE.

Children's Day at Cane Ridge Methodist Church, of Harriston charge, Jefferson county, Miss., was celebrated on July 28. The day was beautiful. The azure hue of the sky and resplendence of the sun were in unison with the smiling faces and happy hearts of a large audience that had congregated to witness the exercises, which consisted of recitations and songs by the children, that was complete in point of excellence. The missionary speech rendered with fervent emphasis by Miss Maggie Dakin, in the combined interest of her church and the duty of all to contribute to the mission fund, did much credit to the speaker. Another pleasing feature was a song by a baby girl of two years, who was placed on a stool, and sweetly and distinctly sang, "I want to be an angel," which held the audience spell-bound until the conclusion.

The programme was well arranged and executed, for which a great tribute of praise can be sincerely given to Miss Anna Jones as originator of arrangement and instructress of pupils. Her assiduous work was crowned with success. As an exemplified Christian, may she ever promote happiness through life.

With great regard for the instructive remarks and manifold efforts of the much-beloved pastor, Mr. J. W. Crisler, to make the day conducive to the good of all, I earnestly pray that we may all meet at the same place of worship next Children's Day. C.

T. S. R.: "The second annual convention of the Lafayette Parish Sunday-school Association was held in the Presbyterian Church, Lafayette, La., Aug. 7, 1895. The convention was called to order by the president, Rev. T. F. Webb, at ten o'clock A. M. Religious services conducted by Rev. Geo. Frazer, of Crowley, La. Address of welcome by the president, and response by Rev. H. Armstrong, of Franklin, La. A very interesting programme was arranged and carried out, except in two instances. One, the young lady was sick; the other was an addition to the programme of a very interesting and profitable talk by Miss Lizzie Webb, a missionary from Turkey, who is visiting her parents, Bro. and Sister Webb, of Lafayette parish, La. There were several brethren from a distance who added much to the interest of the occasion by their well-timed addresses. Space will not allow mention of all who took part, but I will mention some. Bro. W. W. Drake, of Crowley, gave a fine address on 'The Study and Use of the Bible;' Bro. J. T. Barret, president of Acadia College, gave us a very earnest and eloquent address on 'The Influence of Sunday-school on the Family;' Miss Fannie Greig read an interesting paper, 'How to Conduct a Recitation;' Bro. Freddie Webb gave an instructive address on 'The Home-Class Department.' We consider this a good institution. Bro. C. A. Tichont, State Sunday-school Association Organizer, was with us, adding greatly to the interest of the convention by the assistance rendered. He said many good things, giving good and wholesome advice. His address on 'The Necessity of the Holy Spirit's Influence' was full of gospel truth, and spoken with power and in demonstration of the Holy Spirit, and, I trust, will result in great good to all Sunday-school workers who heard it. Upon the whole, the convention was a success, and conducive of great good, I am sure."

A GREAT REVIVAL AT ACONA.

We have had a great revival of religion at Acona, Miss. The main instrument in this work was Rev. W. M. McIntosh, vice-president of Grenada Collegiate Institute. He is a member of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, and is in the regular work. Bro. McIntosh is a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost, and he is a fiery, fervid, earnest preacher of the gospel of Christ. His themes are sin, conviction, repentance, faith in Christ, justification, regeneration, sanctification, holiness of heart and life, and the direct witness of the Spirit. These he presses home on the hearts and consciences of men with an unction and power that is almost irresistible. Every word of every sermon I could most heartily endorse, save one sermon on "Terminism"—the termination of personal probation while yet in a probationary state. This kind of "terminism," afterhand, is another form of "determinism" beforehand, and both tend to limit the work of the Holy Spirit—the prevenient gift of God to the whole human race. But this is a deep subject.

The meeting was the subject of earnest prayer for days and weeks before it began. The people strive hard to get ready for it. All the great revivals of New Testament times began in prayer meetings. Read the Acts of the Apostles and see. Some fears were felt in entertaining the great crowds. A big tent and an evangelist were new things in a country neighborhood; but the whole thing moved along just as well, or better, than in town. The people came prepared to take care of themselves. I was anxious to try this experiment in a country place as a stepping-stone to wider usefulness on the part of men endowed with such wonderful evangelistic gifts. The entire circuit was revived—Acona, Sweet Water, Emory, and Black Hawk. Results: Old feuds were settled, the love of many warmed up, many backsliders reclaimed, faith strengthened, hopes brightened, sinners convicted, mourners converted, and hundreds moved to a higher plane of living. There were forty-three additions to the Methodist Churches here, with some five or six to join on the adjoining pastoral charges, and fourteen others who gave their hands and promised to unite with sister denominations at their earliest opportunity. This was a great work, a blessed season of refreshing from the presence of God.

Bro. McIntosh is rapidly eliminating from his mission and ministry all those exceptional and objectionable features so characteristic of evangelists as a class—perhaps mistakes copied from one distinguished teacher in this special work. It is wonderful how men copy the faults, rather than the virtues, of their heroes. It is a blessed thing that Christ was absolutely faultless in every respect. Men may safely pattern after him and after others only as they follow Christ. The more prominent one is the more nearly faultless he ought to be—so many copy after him. The public is educative, and preachers are teachers; hence ministers should be careful how they educate and what they teach.

Bro. McIntosh is true to our Methodism in her doctrines and her polity. He fights sin, and not the church. He will be a help and blessing to any pastor and his charge. He is not a crank nor an enthusiast on any subject except on winning souls to Christ. His zeal for souls is a fire in his bones, and it literally eats him up. May God bless his ministry more and more! The good people of this charge will ever pray the blessings of God upon him. GILDEROY.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by

At Wesson.

Last week we took in the Brookhaven District Conference. The presiding elder, Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, occupied the chair until Friday evening, when Bishop Galloway arrived. Rev. M. L. Burton was at the secretary's table. He was assisted by Rev. W. T. Griffin. There were three sermons a day for the first two days. With the exception of a feeble effort by this editor, the preaching was good. The preaching was done by Dr. Murrah, Rev. M. G. Felder, Rev. J. M. Morse and Rev. E. F. Edgar. On Friday night Bishop Galloway gave one of his magnificent lectures on Mission Work in the Orient. It would be putting it very mildly to say that his auditors were delighted. The Bishop's mission talks growing out of his recent travels will do much towards quickening the conscience of the church on the subject of missions. The night audiences were large. Wesson can surpass almost any place we know of in this respect.

The reports to the Conference were inspiring. Revivals have been general, and many of them have been remarkable in extent and power. Though some of the charges are in arrears with their finances, yet the financial outlook is cheering. Dr. Murrah and Rev. J. W. Chambers represented their respective institutions, both of which give promise of a fine opening. Rev. W. D. Dominick, Conference colporteur, gave an encouraging account of his work. Miss Addie V. Marshall and Mrs. Emma Siebe were present, representing the Parsonage and Home Mission Society and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Their talks were listened to with great interest.

We were delightfully domiciled in the hospitable home of Bro. T. A. Lee, to whom and to his interesting family we are indebted for many courtesies. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of our old friends, Bro. and Sister J. H. Thompson, of Beauregard, and Sister A. Ferguson. Bro. Mellen has his work well in hand. His charge seems quite prosperous, spiritually, and, notwithstanding the general financial depression, the finances are well up. A number of licenses to preach were granted, and there were many renewals of license. We judge that there are few districts that can surpass the Brookhaven district in the number of its local preachers.

We came home on Saturday. We learn that the pulpit was occupied on Sunday by Bishop Galloway and R. W. Bailey to the delight and edification of the people.

A full report of the proceedings will appear in our next issue.

The Labor Problem.

The pulpit, as a rule, sides with the weak. Thus it champions the cause of the oppressed, the poor—the laborer included. It is well. The pulpit must be the friend of the friendless. Such was our Master.

But the true laborer asks not for sympathy. He spurns it. He is a nobleman. Able to pay as he goes. Submits to the Adamic curse of eating his bread in the sweat of his brow. Knows nothing of the harassing cares of the employer. He is aware, as Carlyle says, "Labor, wide as the earth, has its summit in heaven." Work becomes pleasure.

The intelligent laborer is aware that many in affluence work harder than himself, though not for bodily subsistence. Frequently the toil of the employer more onerous than that of the employee.

Hence the pulpit's championship of the so-called laboring man's cause may prove iniquitous. Said cause is not always founded in justice. No; the poor are not right because of poverty. Indigence does not constitute saintship, nor opulence wickedness. It is wicked in the pulpit habitually to denounce the socially and officially strong, the pecuniarily rich and the intellectually superior. Rightly says Pope:

"Honor and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part, there all the honor lies."

In great Britain and Germany, but especially in the United States, the labor question causes much trouble. Apprehensively many look to the near future. 'Tis universal suffrage which causes the difficulty. Workmen, so called, have discovered their strength. Have learned that their vote is equally decisive as that of the bank president or the minister of the gospel. Not a few employ their vote as capital in trade. Office seekers are aware of this. Resort to demagogism. Make unwarranted promises. Awaken undue expectation. Subsequent disappointment causes unrest, chagrin, malevolence.

Thus labor or trades unions sprang into existence, ostensively for mutual protection. No blame. But it was not long until said unions became iniquitous trusts — trusts compared with which the trusts in oil, whisky and sugar are insignificant. They even go so far as to dictate to the employer whom and whom not he shall employ as workman. They arrogate authority to fix wages and time of daily toil. All the employer would have to do is punctually and cheerfully to pay the exorbitant wages.

It is well known that said trades unions are managed by "horny-handed" men, with diamonds in shirt bosom and on fingers. Men who make agitation their business; who hold office because of skill in brewing turmoil. If turmoil would cease, their remunerative office would become extinct. They are called walking delegates; but when traveling, they occupy a Pullman palace car. Only the first-class hotels are good enough for them.

The daily press adds to the existing difficulty. The majority of their readers are so-called laborers. Pecuniary interest, but they say democracy, causes them to go with the majority. Pathetically the imaginary hardships of the employees, the cruelty of the employers, are published. Yes, the laborers, more numerous, buy more papers than the few employers.

Another cause of the existing unrest among laborers is the repeated introduction and improvement of labor-saving machines. Many trades have been abolished by said machines. Driven to other avocations, the laborers deem themselves wronged. They meditate vengeance.

Attempted social equality adds to the difficulty. Wife and daughters of workingmen deem themselves not inferior to those in affluence. Attempt to dress and live like the latter. But income insufficient. The wicked rich! Institute strike, revolution, anarchy!

What do under these circumstances? Be just to your employees, male or female. Give them fair wages; pay punctually. Dishonesty in an employer is specially damnable. Let your employees know that you do not deem honest work degrading. Do not look aristocratically and disdainfully down on the workman, though his garments be cheap and soiled. Honor the honest toiler. Being, perhaps, intellectually and educationally superior to your employees, apprise them of the danger of being made the foot-ball of the political demagogue. A.

The Family Altar.

Many families are a miniature heaven. Virtue and godly fear, industry and good-will abound. Husband and wife, parents and children, engaged in enhancing each other's happiness. Have been in such happy families. We inquired if it was the apparent common sense, the opulency, the manifest thrift in business enterprise, education or social influence which had brought about such happy result. In reply we were told that the family altar had wrought these charms. We concluded, that happy family life and family altar are inseparable.

If family altars were more numerous there would not be so many unhappy families.

The family altar sanctifies wedlock. Yes, husband and wife are two. Different opinions occur. But no wrangling ensues; acrimonious contention impossible. The family altar harmonizes all differences.

Training the children properly a most difficult task. Bodily, intellectually and temperamentally different from each other. Much wisdom required in their training. Will not success be problematical? No, not if the family altar is not neglected. If God discriminates between prayer, it is family prayer which he takes greatest pleasure in hearing and answering.

We find social and business complications labyrinthine. With most people life is a wild chase after lucre. But only few secure the game. Doomed to failure. Does not now despondency, desperation—yea, suicide follow? No. The family altar points to wealth other than pecuniary. Though we've lost much, the one thing needful is still in possession. Business reverses deprived not of the pearl of great price.

Children are born to us. They develop. Mature. They marry. One after the other leave the parental roof. Now, certainly, that home is deserted, desolate. No. The family altar remains. Besides, the sweet consciousness transfuses the bosom that our children will not neglect to erect such altar in their new home. When we are no more, the family altar will stand erect.

With rapture we think of the family altar in our father's house.

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood
When fond recollection presents them to view."

But no memory in that connection sweeter than that parents and children at stated times gathered around the family altar.

But the erection and maintenance of the family altar beset with many difficulties. But these we must overcome, the same as Abraham who watchfully drove away the vultures from the meditated sacrifice.

The greatest difficulty is, as we ween, that it is designed to institute a course too elaborate. Long chapters, long meters and long prayers will break down any family altar. Rather one verse of the Holy Bible expressively read, one verse of a familiar hymn sung with animation, a prayer of a minute's duration, but pregnant with holy ardor, than a tedious service requiring an hour's time. Work is pressing. Time is precious. Boys and girls become impatient. The shops, the school awaits them. If you persist in your course, they will be filled with disgust.

Meaning less routine also militates against desired success. Family prayer as a mechanical process is a body without soul. Thus benighted Roman Catholics pray their pater nosters, as often as are beads in their rosary.

Leadership also causes difficulty. Perhaps the father deaf or dead. The mother sickly. In such case a child should conduct the services.

Lack of order, of system, irregularity has wrecked many a family altar. Parents and children not rising and appearing at the breakfast table at the same time. The rule of regular attendance must be as unalterable as those of the Medes and Persians. Insist on order. The servants must participate.

Pious men and women of all time neglected not the family altar. In Isaac's piety we see the success of Abraham's family altar. Timothy was aware of its vast benefit. It was found in the parental home of Luther and Wesley. What of the heroes of faith in our day? Our sainted Bishops and our fathers in the gospel held the family altar in high esteem.

Is a family altar found in your home? Are holy fires burning on same? Take heed, lest it suffer injury. A.

Millsaps College.

To the Presiding Elders, Pastors, Sunday-school Superintendents, and Presidents of the Epworth Leagues of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences:

One more month and the fourth session of Millsaps College will open. You can help us secure 300 students. How? By speaking kind words for us, and by sending Dr. Murrah the names of every young man who is contemplating going to college.

We need your influence for your college. Help us just now. When you read this put on your "thinking cap" and write a postal card to Dr. Murrah, giving him the names of young men whom we ought to have. This is no idle request. I wish I could visit every place. I have traveled 1,250 miles this month. Prospects very fine, and if you will help us just now, we will open Sept. 25, 1895, with 300 students.

What do you say? Every man to his work! Let three hundred be the "watchword" of the eighty thousand Methodists of Mississippi. Amen!

Yours for three hundred,

I. W. COOPER.

A great tidal wave of salvation is rolling over this circuit. Providence Camp Meeting closed on the twenty-second. Results: 100 conversions and reclamations, and fifty sanctifications. This is a low estimate of the figures. The power of God's Spirit swept the congregations. God has put the seal of his Spirit on the preaching of the old Methodist, scriptural doctrine of entire sanctification.

The Board of Managers of the Atlanta Exposition have abandoned the bull-fight. Corporations may be conscienceless, but they have nerves—one set at least: pocket nerves. Good citizens everywhere will rejoice that this heaven-favored land is not to be disgraced with such an exhibition of medieval barbarism as a Spanish bull-fight. Crime-schools are sufficiently numerous of our own origination. No importations are needed in that line.

Bishop Dunoan and Dr. David Morton have made a strong appeal in behalf of the Cubans in Florida. That is eminently right and proper. The Cubans need the gospel, and we ought to give it to them. But we hear no appeal from any connectional officer in behalf of the French in Louisiana. We will give a year's subscription to the ADVOCATE, and a chromo besides, to any man who will show one good reason for doing mission work among the Cubans in Florida that does not apply with equal force in favor of doing mission work among the French-speaking population of Louisiana.

The large and constantly growing membership of a total abstinence society in the Roman Catholic Church is an encouraging omen. The time is coming when even Romanism will be compelled to join the great temperance procession. Even now she is debating the question whether those who minister at her altars should be allowed to engage in the manufacture of intoxicants. At Beatty, Pa., a brewery owned and operated by some Benedictine monks. A number of Catholics believing this to be an improper thing for ecclesiastics of the Holy Roman Church to engage in, have petitioned Mgr. Satolli for the suppression of these holy drunkard-factories. Satolli has not yet promulgated his decision. It is hardly to be expected that the petition will be granted. Rome is not that near the front on this question. But the very fact that such a petition has been presented is proof that a strong and healthful temperance sentiment is being created in one of the places where one would expect to find it—the Catholic Church.

This city has a temperance society which is built on a different plan from any with which we have heretofore come in contact. Its members pledge themselves to abstain from the use, not from the sale of intoxicants. Brewers, distillers, wholesale dealers and retailers may belong to it; and, as a matter of fact, it has several members who are engaged in the traffic. It has a membership of more than two hundred and owns a handsome building worth not less than $25,000. While this is very far from our ideal of what a temperance society should be, yet its existence in a city like this furnishes food for reflection. Such an organization is an ocular demonstration of the extent to which public sentiment has been leavened by temperance principles. The basal principle of temperance reform is that alcohol is a poison. The existence of such a society as this shows that this scientific truth (biblical as well as scientific) is beginning to be recognized even by men who are engaged in the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages. The example of these men is good as regards personal abstinence. There are many church members who might profit by their example at this point. Every Methodist takes a solemn vow when he unites with the church that he will not use intoxicants except in case of necessity; and yet who needs to be told that there are legions of Methodists with whom this vow is "more honored in the breach than in the observance."

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each, and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes. W. C. BLACK,

P. S.—Should you fail to get the full quota of subscribers, you will get a good cash commission. W. C. B.

Delays are dangerous. A dollar now for Hood's Sarsaparilla now may prevent illness which will be expensive and hard to bear. Now is the time to take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

HEALING OF THE DAUGHTER OF THE SYROPHENICIAN WOMAN.
(Matt. xv, 28; Mark vii, 24.)

Though retired to a place in the borders of Tyre and Sidon, the Master, St. Mark assures, could not be hid. Even in ashes fire will assert its presence by smoke. Neither opposition nor calumny can check the cause of Christ.

1. The Syrophenician woman cried unto the Lord. Cried. Intense distress filled her bosom.

(1) The reason why so many professed conversions are superficial—if there can be such conversions—is because of superficial repentance. This superficiality has caused many ills in our Zion.

(2) The disciples disliked the woman's boisterousness. Deemed her a nuisance. Entreat the Master to interfere. Many of our members are aristocratically stiff and formal. Fastidiously ape the dull routine of other denominations.

2. Jesus declares that he had been sent to the lost, primarily though to those of the house of Israel. Helped this woman.

(1) To the lost—hence to all sinners. To sinners who are condemned already. Condemned. The execution of the sentence only a question of time.

(2) Lost. But as careless children we gather pebbles on the grass-covered crater of a threatening volcano.

(3) Are sick, sorely in need of a physician. But neglect to call him in. Are in prison, but careless about liberation. Christ is the great physician and liberator.

3. The woman's astonishing perseverance.

(1) Well knowing that Jewish arrogance had created the linguistic idiom of calling all people not Israelites dogs, she did not feel insulted, but readily understood the Master's figurative language.

(2) She ingeniously employs the same figure in pressing her suit: "Truth, Lord, yet the dogs eat of the crumbs," etc. In seeking religion perseverance indispensable.

4. Jesus grants the woman's request and commends her faith.

(1) According to her faith came relief. If we open our mouth wide, the Lord will fill it. Abraham might have saved Sodom if he had insisted that on account of one righteous the place be spared.

(2) Great is thy faith. The seedling should not remain such. Should become a tree. Grow in grace.

3) The adjective "great" admits of significant comparison. Even great faith may be greater, the greater greatest. And your faith?

A Miserable Taste.

That which hangs about most medicines is what we refer to. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC is an exception. It has a taste as pleasant as cordial, as comforting as wine, as sparkling and refreshing as spring water. Cures all diseases and irregularities of the uterine system, and brings the bloom of health to the cheeks.

Some people never think about religion until they come in sight of a graveyard.

Do You Know?

That when your bowels are disordered, and irregularities caused by change of diet or location exist,

No!!!

Why not?

Because some bad mines have been put on the market? Would you refuse to take a good $5 bill to-day because you got a counterfeit yesterday? Only good things are counterfeited. Millions have been made in gold mines. Millions will be. Watch the fortunes made in the next two years, and verify this prophecy. Investigate us thoroughly—the more the better. You will find that we have the intrinsic value—an ideal investment, because safe principal is combined with high rate of interest. We can prove the principal safe, because of natural conditions. No bond or mortgage on the property. Estimated annual dividends from ore in sight, on capital stock, 16½ per cent.; but to those who come in now on special offer, there is an opportunity to get 66 per cent. PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

HOME CIRCLE.

IF WE COULD KNOW.

If we could know
Which of us, darling, would be first to go,
Who would be first to breast the swelling tide,
And step alone upon the other side—
If we could know!

If it were you!
Should I walk coldly, keeping death in view?
Should I my love to you more oft express?
Or should I grieve you, darling, any less—
If it were you?

If it were I?
Should I improve the moments slipping by?
Should I more closely follow God's great plan,
Be filled with sweeter charity to man—
If it were I?

If we could know!
We can not, darling, and 'tis better so.
I should forget, just as I do to-day,
And walk along the same old stumbling way—
If I could know!

I would not know
Which of us, darling, will be the first to go,
I only wish the space may not be long
Between the parting and the greeting song;
But when, or where, or how we're called to go—
I would not know.

The Reading Habit.

The reading habit, when properly directed, is a boon simply priceless; and proper direction means careful selection as well as thoughtful attention. When there is so much inviting us, what are we to take, what will best nourish us in our growth toward perfection? "Do you not know," asks Ruskin, "that what you lose to-day you can not gain to-morrow? Will you go and gossip with your housemaid, or your stable-boy, when you may talk with kings and queens; or jostle with the common crowd, when all the while this eternal court is open to you, with its society wide as the world, multitudinous as the days, the chosen and mighty of every place and time? In that you may always enter and take rank and fellowship according to your own wish." "Go with mean people," says Emerson, "and you think life is mean: be sure to read no mean books;" and Browning asks,

"Shall I sit beside
Their dry wells with a white lip and filmed eye,
While in the distance heaven is blue above,
Mountains where sleep the unsunned tarns?"

Persons of the reading habit are liable to another malady of the brain, no less fell than the bleaching. It is congestion, strangulation, intellectual gluttony, and takes place, as Emerson says, whenever our accumulation overruns our power to use. During the reign of Louis Philippe, one of the secret agents of the French police rendered most important service. Having read Cooper's "Spy," he aspired to the sort of ambition which distinguished the hero of that work, and was desirous of playing, in France, the part which Cooper assigned to Harvey Birch during the War of Independence. Harvey Birch, for he adopted this name in all his reports, never belied his professions of fidelity. He rendered services which would have merited a fortune; but, when the term of them ended, he contented himself with asking for a humble employment, barely enough to supply his daily necessities.

In some such practical way will the quality and manner of our reading make itself visible. Ethics no longer sanctions self-cultivation purely for the benefit of self, and we must ever remember the poet's warning:

"Know not for knowing's sake,
But to become a star to men forever."
—Lucy Elliott Keeler.

A Boy's Manner.

"His manner is worth a hundred thousand dollars to him!" That is what one of the chief men of the nation lately said about a boy. "It wouldn't be worth so much to one who meant to be a farmer, or who had no opportunities, but to a young college student with ambitions it is worth at least a hundred thousand."

The boy was a distant relative of the man, and had been brought up by careful parents in a far-off city. Among other things he had been taught to be friendly and to think of other persons before himself. The boy was on a visit in the town where the man lived. They met on the street, and the younger, recognizing the elder, promptly went to his side and spoke to him in his cordial, happy, yet respectful way. Of course the man was pleased, and knew that anybody would have been pleased. The sentence above was the outcome of it. A little later the boy came in the room just as the man was struggling into his overcoat. The boy buried to him, pulled it up by the collar, and drew down the wrinkled coat beneath. He would have done it for any man, the haughtiest or the poorest.

The boy has not been in society a great deal. He has not learned orthodox selfishness. He positively can't be easy at the table until his neighbors are waited on; a chair is torture if he thinks anyone else is less comfortably seated. He wouldn't interrupt to let loose the wittiest or most timely remark ever thought of. He may learn to do so some day—after he has earned his hundred thousand—but it is doubtful. The expression of his kindness may become conformed to popular usage, modified, refined, but the spirit which prompts the expression will only grow with his years.

Do not misunderstand, boys. You may be truly unselfish, and yet not have this boy's prize. You may wish to do things for others, and yet feel that you do not know how. The only way to learn is to try; to hesitate for no feeling of bashfulness or awkwardness; but to put into direct and instantaneous practice whatever kind, helpful thoughts occur to you.—Congregationalist.

What School?

There is no question of more vital importance to both parents and child than the selection of a school; here thousands have started upon the road to a higher and better life, while thousands, upon the other hand, date the commencement of their ruin at this critical point. The moral and religious atmosphere and influence are of the first importance; everything else is secondary; a mistake here is the most awful, as it is in so many instances fatal. The State must teach the heart as well as the head, or the system of secular education will be the means of its own destruction. The world will come to it sooner or later. The education of the heart is of more importance, a thousandfold, than that of the head. The State claims to educate in order to make intelligent voters and citizens. It must be remembered in this connection that the corrupt party leaders are educated men, and thousands of the honest poor are uneducated. Education does not remove the temptation of bribe, but intensifies it by intelligently making merchandise of liberty and evading the law. It were better for the State that the voter remain ignorant if he were disposed to either give or receive a bribe. Education is a power which is always viewed in the light of the heart. The head and heart go together, and when one is wrong the other is wrong, and vice versa. This does not have reference to error in judgment and reason, but to premeditation and purpose influenced by the heart. The nation would be better off in the hands of honest uneducated men than in the hands of dishonest educated men; to the first there might be a debit to blunder, to the second there is a debit to plunder. We do not believe that the first would balance the latter. It is an erroneous idea that secular education prepares boys and girls for the duties of life. Obligations are moral, not intellectual, and the education that does not recognize this fact is a stupendous failure at its very best. The heart is to the life what the foundation is to the temple; after all, it is the heart and not the head that makes the man.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

Good Humor in the Family.

Good humor is rightly reckoned a most valuable aid to a happy home life. An equally good and useful faculty is a sense of humor or the capacity to have a little fun along with the humdrum cares and works of life. We all know how it brightens up things generally to have a lively, witty companion who sees the ridiculous points of things and can turn an annoyance into an occasion for laughter. It does a great deal better to laugh over some domestic mishap than to cry or scold over it. Many homes and lives are dull because they are allowed to become too deeply impressed with a sense of the cares and responsibilities of life to recognize its bright and especially its mirthful side. Into such a household, good but dull, the advent of a witty, humorous friend is like sunshine on a cloudy day.

While it is always oppressive to hear persons constantly striving to say witty or funny things, it is worth while seeing what a brightener a little fun is, to make an effort to have some at home. It is well to turn off an impatient question sometimes, and to regard it from a humorous point of view, instead of being irritated about it. "Wife, what is the reason I can never find a clean shirt?" exclaimed a good, but rather impatient husband, after rummaging all through the wrong drawer. His wife looked at him steadily a moment, half inclined to be provoked; then, with a comical look, she said: "I never guess conundrums; I give it up." Then he laughed, and they both laughed, and she went and got his shirt, and he felt ashamed of himself and kissed her; and then she felt happy, and so what might have been an occasion for hard words and unkind feelings became just the contrary, all through the little vein of humor that cropped out to the surface.

Some people have a peculiar faculty for giving a humorous turn to things when they are reproved. It does just as well oftentimes to laugh things off as to scold them off. Laughter is better than tears. Let us have a little more of it at home.—Religious Herald.

Winsome People.

They are the people who love to diffuse happiness. They are happy themselves because they have made others so. They are thoughtful, considerate, and courteous—ever seeking to provide joy and peace for others, ever striving to avoid and remove anything and everything that wounds unnecessarily. It is an unspeakable delight to be near such people.

"Why are you always thinking of others?" asked a friend of a winsome lady beloved by everybody. "I wouldn't wear my life out bearing other people's burdens." "Wouldn't you?" came the questioning answer, with a sweet, but reproving smile. "I could not wear it out doing better work than helping the weary and heavy-laden."

"To do God's will—that's all
That need concern us; not to carp or ask
The meaning of it, but to ply our task,
Whatever may befall;
Accepting good or ill as he shall send,
And wait until the end."

It is a great mistake to think any kindly act too insignificant to be noticed by our Father in heaven. Faber says: "Every solitary kind action that is done, the world over, is working briskly in its own sphere to restore the balance between right and wrong. Kindness has converted more sinners than either zeal, eloquence, or learning; and these three never converted anyone unless they were kind also. The continual sense, which a kind heart has of its need of kindness, keeps it humble. Perhaps an act of kindness never dies, but extends the invisible undulations of its influence over the breadth of centuries.—Christian Work.

Sunday-school Teacher—"If you had your choice, Willie, would you rather be as wise as Solomon, as great as Julius Cæsar, as rich as Croesus, as eloquent as Demosthenes, as tall as Goliath, or as good as the prophet Elijah?" Willie—"I'd rather be a drummer in a brass band."—Chicago Tribune.

The Doctor's Story.

We commend the following words from the Toledo Blade to the consideration of the people who believe in alcohol "only as a medicine": "There is a grave responsibility resting on the physician who prescribes alcoholic liquor. It may arouse in a susceptible patient a dormant inherited tendency to drink. He may, by authorizing its use during the period of convalescence, fix a habit upon a patient of feeble will which the latter will never be able to shake off. No physician who realizes this great moral responsibility will be willing to accept it habitually. He certainly knows that the best medical authorities agree that alcoholic intoxicants are rarely used as a medicine; and at best they are dangerous remedies; and that the less they are resorted to, the better for both the brain and body, the better for his well-being, physical and moral. Furthermore, every physician owes it to his profession to teach his patients the utter fallacy of the common belief that alcohol is an article of food value. It has none whatever.

The use of intoxicants in any quantity whatever, and at any time, is entirely useless and unnecessary. Furthermore, the continued use of them gradually induces structural degradations and functional derangements of the great bodily organs, thus leading to the gravest physical disorders. Alcohol is a poison, and nothing more; a poison which exercises its paralyzing, narcotizing influence in exact proportion to the quantity consumed and the power of the consumer's physical system to resist its poisonous action. If every intelligent physician would thus correct old errors and disseminate a knowledge of the truth, there would be a great impetus given to the effort to pulverize the rum power."

The Medicinal Value of Water.

The human body is constantly undergoing tissue change. Worn-out particulars are cast aside and eliminated from the system, while new are being formed, from the inception of life to its close.

Water has the power of increasing these tissue changes, which multiply the waste products, but at the same time they are renewed by its agency, giving rise to increased appetite, which in turn provides fresh nutriment. Persons but little accustomed to drinking water are liable to have the waste products formed faster than they are removed. Any obstruction to the free working of natural laws at once produces disease, which, if once firmly seated, requires both time and money to cure.

People accustomed to rise in the morning weak and languid will find the cause in the imperfect secretion of wastes, which many times may be remedied by drinking a tumblerful of water before retiring. This very materially assists in the process during the night, and leaves the tissues fresh and strong, ready for the active work of the day.

Hot water is one of our best remedial agents.

A hot bath on going to bed, even in the hot nights of Summer, is a better reliever of insomnia than many drugs.

Inflamed parts will subside under the continual poulticing of hot water.

Very hot water, as we all know, is a prompt checker of bleeding, and besides, if it is clean, as it should be, it aids in sterilizing wounds.—Hall's Journal of Health.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

To make cookies, take nine tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and four of butter, and cream them well together. Add four well-beaten eggs, one cup of milk, a little grated nutmeg, one ounce of caraway seeds, or, if preferred, one cup of currants, two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a pinch of salt, and enough flour to make a dough that will roll out easily. Cut out with a round biscuit-cutter, and bake in a moderate oven about twenty minutes. This quantity will make about fifty cookies. Keep a stone jar.—Selected.

Why is it that so many who favor the home missionary work, but oppose the foreign work, never pay anything for the support of either?

Centenary College

Makes the broad claim that it more nearly furnishes the school patron what is desired in the way of a Literary, Musical and Art Education, together with the necessary conditions for healthy development of mind and body, than most schools. Would it not be well to investigate this claim before deciding where the daughters shall be entered?

Special Features.

The little city of Cleveland is noted for its beautiful streets, elegant homes, good churches, and its refined, cultured people. Our location in the great valley between the Cumberland and Great Smoky Mountains, eleven hundred feet above sea level, gives us pure, invigorating air, long and delightful Autumns, mild, short Winters, and Spring-times beyond comparison. We are in the midst of mountains, forests and lakes; and our girls get pleasure and health in rambles through the cool forests and rowing on the lakes. We are in the suburbs of Cleveland; and while it furnishes us delightful social functions, concerts and lectures in the opera house, and excellent shopping facilities, it does not shut us out from the pure air and glorious freedom of the country.

THE BUILDING is three and four stories high, and is designed to place the young ladies as near the ground as possible. There are no long series of stairs to climb; and fifteen ways of escape have been provided in case of fire. The rooms are comfortable and well furnished, warmed by open grates and lighted with electricity. Long hall ways extend through the entire length of the building, giving excellent ventilation. To walk over the balconies and through the halls three times gives nearly a mile of exercise.

We Have Not Sufficient Space

To tell about our Music, Art, Elocution, Literary Work, etc., etc. Our Catalogue tells all about these departments. A careful investigation will show that we are not surpassed by other schools along these lines. Our Director of Music, Prof. Freidaric Agthe, was educated in the Royal School of Music, Berlin, Germany; our Elocutionist in the Boston School of Oratory; our Artist in the Art Schools of New York. These are some of the ablest teachers to be found. The literary course is broad and full. The scientific equipment is quite complete. Chemical and Physical Laboratories are in first-class working order.

BETTER THAN ALL—The religious influences of this school are all that a parent could wish for a daughter. The whole atmosphere of the school is conducive to piety. Very nearly every young lady who comes to us becomes religious while here. Last year five young ladies gave their names as candidates for missionary work in foreign fields. This experience is repeated year after year. One of the greatest shools of life is the choice of a school. While looking for literary advantages, let the parent not overlook the religious influences.

Our Patrons Give Us Our Best Advertising Matter.

WILLIAM J. WILLIAMS, Soddy, Tenn.—"It is the most desirable school in the South for young ladies."

JOHN B. BOYD, Sonoraville, Ga.—"Indeed, it is the ideal college within the range of my observation."

W. O. PEEPLES, Chattanooga, Tenn.—"I regard the school as one of the best female colleges in the South in all particulars."

A. L. BARTLETT, Esq., Brownsville, Ga.—"I regard the school as equal to any, and, after strict trial, I decide there is no better place for girls."

T. T. FISHBURNE, Roanoke, Va.—"In Centenary our daughters of the South will find one of the best colleges in America. I have been among you and remained with you, and I know whereof I affirm."

JUDGE D. K. YOUNG, Clinton, Tenn.—"The building is grand, elegant and spacious, being a product of the most beautiful modern architecture, and has within it all the various appliances for doing thorough and efficient work. The faculty is large and well qualified by learning and experience for the work assigned each, and seems to have infused among the students a spirit of generous emulation. Nothing will strike a visitor more forcibly than the beautiful home comforts that are found in every part of the building."

REV. SAM P. JONES, Cartersville, Ga.—"As one of the patrons of the Centenary College, you will permit me to say to the public that you offer to the daughters of the South and West comfortable quarters, a good table, a fatherly oversight, a splendid faculty, faithful and thorough work, and a most gracious religious influence to all the girls who come under the roof of your spacious buildings. There is no college to which I would commit my daughter with more confidence than to Centenary. Your curriculum is thorough, your faculty complete, among which you have some of the best teachers on this continent, and, above all, the home comforts given our daughters there, commend the college to the young ladies themselves."

MRS. M. C. D. THOMAS, Long Beach, Miss.—"I have been a patron of Centenary College for two years, and it affords me real pleasure to show some appreciation of the work you have done for me in the training and education of my daughter. The lessons not found in the text-books were taught her there, in the pure lives and the lovely manners of her Christian teachers and president. Instead of being home sick at Centenary, she is longing to return. The educational advantages of the school are unsurpassed, and more important than this, the perfect home life, the Christian influences, the firm government and development of the physical woman, without which the best education can not be utilized. Parents have no cause for anxiety with their daughters in your care."

MR. and MRS. W. S. McLELLAN, Durant, Miss.—"We entered our daughters in Centenary College, at Cleveland, Tenn., for the scholastic year of 1893-4, and wish to say we are highly pleased with their advancement in their studies, the moral training, the kind parental care bestowed upon them. It is with pleasure that we take this opportunity to thank the entire faculty for their faithful work. We can most cordially recommend the college to persons having daughters to educate."

J. H. MADDOX, Perthshire, Miss.—"I have been a patron of Centenary College for two years, and wish to say that for thoroughness of work in every department, careful parental oversight, elevating Christian influences and pleasant home life for girls, it can not, in my judgment, be excelled. If I had a dozen girls to educate, I would send them all to your care."

(Dr. and Mrs. Maddox each have visited the college, spending several days, thus having abundant opportunity to know of what they speak.)

MAJ. D. A. CARPENTER, U. S. Pension Agency, Knoxville, Tenn.—"I have been a patron of Centenary Female College for two years, and have watched, with much interest, the progress of the pupils, and have been pleased with the thorough work done. Everything seems to be in complete harmony throughout the whole college; and then, when we realize the parental oversight that every young lady receives at the hands of this college, it does away, in a large measure, with one of the greatest anxieties that parents have in sending their daughters from home to be educated; and last, but not by any means least, are the Christian influences which are brought to bear on every pupil. I know of no better place to send a young lady than Centenary Female College."

REV. C. T. CARROLL, Presiding Elder, Morristown District.—"Having been for several years intimately associated with this college, as presiding elder of the Chattanooga District, and having been a patron of the school for several years, and having frequently visited it during these years, I am in condition to know the value of its work and of its moral and religious influences upon the young ladies, and can speak from personal knowledge of the excellent character of the teachers, the quality of the work done by them, of the comfortable rooms for the girls, the careful attention given them, and the sufficiency of the fare. In fact, our daughters have here all the advantages necessary to enable them to obtain a first-class education if they only apply themselves diligently to the task."

It is a pleasure to commend so excellent a school as the "Centenary Female College," presided over by the Rev. D. Sullins, M. A., D. D.

This institution easily takes rank with the best of our schools for the education of young ladies. Ably officered, with needed supplies and facilities, there is a guarantee of faithful work given to parents, anxious for the intellectual training of their daughters. And better than that—the pupils have a Christian home with most gracious influences for the wise development of Christian character. Rarely does an unconverted woman go from this college to her life work.

"Beautiful for situation" is the college building, the joy of that section of the State. May prosperity continue to bless the school, and thus bless the church. BISHOP W. W. DUNCAN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A fire in Milwaukee, on Aug. 22, burned nearly a thousand freight cars, loaded and empty. Loss, $400,000.

About half the money collected under the unconstitutional income tax law has been refunded. The whole amount collected was but $77,000.

Librarian Spofford, of the Congressional Library, says that the shortage of $35,000 in his accounts is only apparent and due to bad bookkeeping; but for all that he has offered to put up $22,000 to call it square.

Three hundred persons were poisoned at a German Lutheran picnic in a grove at Tracy, Ill., on last Sunday. It is thought the water or potatoes of the dinner was poisoned. As yet none have died, but many are very ill.

The Orleans Parish Medical Society, a body composed of the greater number of the allopathic physicians of New Orleans, in a regular meeting, held on Aug. 24, adopted a resolution to the effect that the sense of the association is unfavorable to the use of Paquin's serum for the treatment of consumption.

It is announced from Washington that the government is about to make a demand upon France for the immediate release of Ex-Consul Waller, the American who was arrested and tried by court-martial in Madagascar, and afterwards transported to France to serve a twenty years' sentence in a fortress on a conviction for treason. The charge against Mr. Waller was that he had communicated with the enemies of France and gave them valuable information concerning the movements of French troops.

The convention of Knights Templar will be held in Boston this week.

The Falson Nail and Iron Works of Niles, Ohio, employing about 1,500 people, have notified their employees that those who have no connection with any association will receive an increase in their wages of ten per cent., taking effect on the first of September next.

The success of the American ship building firms in building warships for the United States government has induced them to extend the field of their operations and seek to secure contracts with foreign governments for the construction of ships. The recent achievements of the "Columbia" and other American ships have turned the attension of these foreign purchasers of warships to American shipyards, and Japan has invite American shipbuilders to bid for the construction of several warships she desires to build abroad.

FOREIGN.

The gendarmes and police surrounded the village of Favara, near Girgenti, Italy, and arrested forty-two members of Mafia societies on charges of murder and other outrages.

The semi-official El Nacional says that the Spanish government has decided to dispatch 100,000 men and all the ships necessary to blockade the island of Cuba and crush the rebellion during the first months of 1896.

The final programme for the visit to Germany of the German-American veterans has been drawn up. On their arrival at Bremen they will be the guests of the Veterans' Association of that city, and fetes there will include a march through the town to the War monument, which will be decorated with floral wreaths.

Col. Romero, who killed a man in a duel in Mexico, was sentenced to three years and four months at hard labor and to pay a fine of $1,600.

It is now estimated that 25,000 mill workers at Dundee, Scotland, are out on strike. The manufacturers met and signed an agreement not to advance wages, under the penalty of £500 for a violation of this agreement.

General Diaz is being boomed for another term as President of Mexico. It is a foregone conclusion that he will be re-elected pretty well unanimously, for nothing but a revolution brings about a change in the Mexican presidency.

The French are incensed at the commander of an American cruiser for refusing to salute the garrison at Tamatave, Madagascar, and to accord other customary courtesies, on the ground that America has not recognized the French protectorate.

Firmness has brought the Chinese to terms. Foreigners are now present at the trials of natives implicated in the attacks upon missionaries. The Chinese officials afford every facility to the foreign commissioners of inquiry. Six of the Chinese who had a hand in the massacre at Hwa Sang have been convicted of murder. New arrests are made daily. Foo Chow is quiet. What was reported abroad as a new massacre was only a local riot.

A Chance for Women to Make Money.

I saw one of your subscribers tell in your columns a few weeks ago how she made money selling Dish Washers. I wrote to the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and obtained one of their Dish Washers and tried it myself first. It is just lovely; you can wash and dry the dishes for a family in two minutes, without touching your hands to a dish or putting them in hot water. I made the first day, $5, and everybody wanted a Dish Washer just as soon as they saw me wash their dishes. Since then I have made as high as $18 a day, and I believe that I can get enough money to keep my brother at school next Winter and have money in the bank too. Any lady or gentleman can do as well as I am doing, I am sure, as I had no experience. When everybody wants to buy, it is not hard to sell. Anyone can get information by writing the above firm, and I am glad to add my experience, because I think it is my duty to others to help them over the hard times.

TWO SONGS.

A singer sang a song of tears,
And the great world heard and wept,
For he sang of the sorrows of fleeting years
And the hopes which the dead past kept;
And souls in anguish their burdens bore,
And the world was sadder than before.

A singer sang a song of cheer,
And the great world listened and smiled,
For he sang of the love of a Father dear
And the trust of a little child;
And souls that before had forgotten to pray
Looked up and went singing along the way.

Campaign Closing.

MR. EDITOR: This writing finds me rapidly nearing the close of the Summer campaign. An almost constant absence from home, many deprivations of comfort, many sacrifices of other hopes and purposes, and many, many miles of travel, have made up our days and weeks. During all this we have shaken hands with scores of old friends, and made, we trust, as many new ones. Have enjoyed the kindest hospitality at every point, such as we shall never forget; have been welcomed at gatherings of all kinds; have been permitted to talk for our school, and occupy the pulpits of the brethren. For these courtesies from laymen and ministers I feel profoundly grateful.

In these travels up and down in the earth, presenting the claims of East Mississippi Female College, we have come upon the industrious agent everywhere. Agents, agents, agents for everything, and especially for books and schools. Every man has the very best book in the world—just the thing that you need, indispensable; and every man is representing the very best institution of learning in the land—none superior. The little cross-roads high school confers its A. B. and M. E. L. degrees with just as much gusto and claim for recognition as Yale or Vassar. A course in Latin or Greek can be so arranged and taught that the young man or woman comes out almost an expert in a ten-months' session. Well, why not? It is true it required, a few years ago, from four to six years in these branches to obtain anything like a possible knowledge of them; but this is a day of intensiveness, a day of electricity, which seems to indicate rapidity in everything. Why not the mental keep pace with the physical? It took an ox-cart in the days of our fathers four days to travel a hundred miles. The steam engine now will transport you the same distance in less than as many hours. Why not the average boy, under the improved methods, master an ordinary course in as many months as it took his father years? Ten weeks to geometry, ten weeks to trigonometry, ten weeks to calculus, and ten weeks to mechanics—within forty weeks the feat is accomplished. The hop, skip, jump method has accomplished the whole, and Aleck is ready for the presidency of a college, civil engineer, or governor of his State. Every institution does nothing but first-class and classic work, and, of course, turns out nothing but the finest, best-equipped graduates. How could it be otherwise?—first-class institution, first-class curriculum, first-class advantages, first-class teachers in every department. How could it be possible for any other than first-class scholars should he the result? However, I heard one of these first-class graduates say—horrors to repeat it!—"I taken," and "Him and I." This, too, with diploma in hand on her way home—a "sweet girl graduate." While all claim first-class, one thing is certain: this is an age of education, and every man can be united.

Again: We have the idea of over-production. Over-production of cotton (which I doubt), we are told, has brought to us the exceedingly low prices of the past years; and so over-production of schools have brought the sharp competition in prices which almost makes a thoughtful man hesitate to quote terms, lest he be looked upon as a fraud. Some figures that I have seen in catalogues would indicate uncomfortable surroundings and hard living; and when I expressed such to a father who was quoting these figures to me, his reply was, "That makes no difference to me, so my daughter gets through." "Sic semper tyrannis." Another thought the survival of the fittest will be the finale of the whole matter. Mr. Lincoln's adage concerning the fooling of the people will be vindicated.

From positive promises made and encouraging words given us, we now have prospects of a considerable increase over the past session, but we shall not count the fish until we have strung them. "There's many a slip betwixt the cup and the lip," is especially applicable to this work.

When the carpenters and plumbers finish the work now in hand, we will have our buildings complete for convenience, safety, and comfort. Absolutely no necessity to leave the buildings for any purpose. No exposure; no risk of health by going from warmer to colder apartments. Music, art and elocution teachers all graduates of conservatories and of experience. Literary teachers chosen from among the best. If your readers are looking for a first-class school for their girls, we insist that they give us a trial, for, of course, we can claim to nothing less than first-class at East Mississippi.

Next session begins Sept. 11. We will meet girls from the west at Jackson on Tuesday, the tenth.

Campaign ended.

The Brookhaven District Conference.

Wesson proved to be a delightful place for the session. There was overflowing hospitality. The large and live church gave excellent congregations, the evening attendance filling the house and sometimes packing it to its utmost capacity. The preaching was, on the whole, the best your correspondent ever heard at a District Conference. Among our distinguished visitors who filled the pulpit and aided in our counsels were Bishop Galloway, Dr. Murrah, and Dr. Black. Dr. Murrah represented Millsaps College. He made a brief address on education Thursday morning, and preached at eleven o'clock. Dr. Black preached Thursday evening, and addressed the Conference in the interest of the ADVOCATE on Saturday. Adjectives are superfluous in connection with the sermons of Dr. Black and Dr. Murrah. They are our two great Mississippi preachers, and measured up to the high standard of their own excellence.

Friday night an immense throng assembled to listen to a missionary address by Bishop Galloway. The congregation followed intently the Bishop in his tour around the world, sundying the missionary situation, with its problems and prospects. An adequate report of the address is beyond the limits of this letter. The substantial result was a collection of about $50 for a new mission in China.

Rev. J. W. Chambers addressed the Conference, Friday, in the interest of Whitworth College. "There have been grave difficulties. They are being met and overcome. The curriculum is beyond that of most other girls' schools, and compares favorably with that of the very best in the Union. The musical department is especially excellent. The prospects are favorable for next session. A larger attendance is assured. Enough girls are expected to guarantee grand success. Preachers are urged to send one girl from every charge on the proposition of free tuition."

The operation of the new law concerning licensing and renewing license to preach furnished a couple of interesting hours Saturday morning. The Conference showed a disposition to deal rather vigorously with questionable cases. It will be no easy thing to get license from this district in the future. A strong resolution, demanding the attendance of candidates at the Conference session, was adopted. Two young men were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection.

The reports of the preachers indicated the district in good condition. Finances are bad, of course; they are everywhere and in everything this year. But most of the charges are ahead of last year in this respect. In revival power this has been a great year. Conversions were reported from nearly every charge, and in some instances meetings of tremendous power. Two or three of the preachers were absent because engaged in important revivals.

The ADVOCATE readers will be especially interested in the report on publishing interests. Many of them will think it unwise. We append the essential part of the report:

"It is unnecessary for us at this time to enter into a review of our general publishing interests. We note improvements in the Sunday-school literature, in the Review, and in the other periodical literature issued from Nashville.

"We are more directly and vitally interested in our own Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

"We think that the usefulness of the paper would be increased through a wider circulation, which would result from a lower subscription price. We recommend to the management the lowest possible rate consistent with the business prosperity of the paper.

"We suggest to the Publishing Committee, composed of representatives from the Mississippi, the Louisiana, and the North Mississippi Conferences, the propriety of considering, in the interest of the larger usefulness and prosperity of the paper, the advisability of moving the office of publication from New Orleans to Jackson, Miss.

"Pending such consideration, we recommend the establishment of a Mississippi bureau."

The Conference was, on the whole, a very live affair. There were some animated discussions, with bright speeches. Our meetings certainly did not drag, and we all enjoyed the session, whether or not we were in all things wise. We hope another year to attract yet more dignitaries by the brilliant way we do things.

Farewell Service.

On Wednesday evening, Sept. 28, at 8:30 o'clock, in the Sunday-school room of the Methodist Church at Columbus, Miss., a farewell service was held in honor of Rev. B. W. Waters and his wife, Mrs. Lula Lipscomb Waters, who, with their two interesting little children, born in Japan, were to start next day on their return to their distant field of labor and home in Hiroshima, Japan. They had been spending about a year among kindred and friends in their native land, taking needed rest, and stimulating, by their visitations and labors, the missionary spirit of the church at home. Columbus was the childhood home of Sister Waters, and a large audience was assembled to witness and participate in the farewell service. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. M. Standefer, in an impressive manner, consisting of Scripture reading, songs, prayers, and appropriate talks. A short, but excellent, opening address was made by Bro. Standefer. This was followed by remarks from the writer, Bro. J. W. Dorman, of Starkville, and brief, touching addresses from Bro. and Sister Waters. The father of Sister Waters and other members of her immediate family were present, and many members of other churches in the city were there to offer their tribute of sympathy and prayers in behalf of these devoted servants of our Lord. The occasion was interesting and impressive, and will, doubtless, tend to increase and stir up the missionary zeal of the church in Columbus.

Bro. Waters has made a very favorable impression upon the people of Columbus and other places during his stay among us. He returns by way of Baltimore, where he will spend a few days with his father, and on the sixteenth of September will take a steamer at Vancouver for Japan.

The prayers of the church will follow Bro. Waters, his wife and two little children in their weary travel overland and their long ocean voyage. May our heavenly Father grant them "journeying mercies" and safe arrival at their distant home!

Revival Wave at Long Beach.

A wave of salvation is sweeping over this place. My heart is too full for utterance or writing. Souls are being born into the kingdom of God. The power of the eternal Spirit is with Sister Snell. Her words at times sparkle like diamonds and pearls, then they burn like living coals, and at the last soothe like the touch of a mother. The thought of my precious, sainted mother was with me so much while I listened to her preach. The hush of God is on my soul while I write these words. Under this last sentence the names of many men, women and children at Long Beach could be signed, for the peace of God is resting with the people.

The last scene was touching, indeed. When she announced to the people, who were crowding the house, that it was her last service, they began pleading, "Do not go." Then, turning to me, she said, "What shall I do?" I said, "I can not see how you can leave." Tired, worn, her brain weary, and her body tired from much serving, she said: "Brethren, please do not urge me. Let me go! Let me go to my children! Let me turn aside to rest awhile!"

An estimate of the actual fruits is made at 25 reclamations, 20 conversions, and a large number to be received in the church. Old feuds and difficulties have been settled, and the church moves forward with a shout of victory.

One brother offers half the lumber and another half the carpenter's work to build her a home at Long Beach, to secure her services every year two or three weeks on the Gulf coast. A prophetess with a message from God is among us. Praise the Lord!

NOLAN B. HARMON.

Long Beach, Miss., Aug. 30, 1895.

Mansfield Female College.

This well-known institution of the Louisiana Conference will open its doors for another session, Sept. 4, 1895.

Its past history shows how useful has been its career, and the noble women who have gone out from its walls to adorn society constitute the true evidences of the great work accomplished. No better place can be found to which to send Southern girls. The health of the locality is unquestioned. The expenses of the course have been greatly reduced, so as to bring the choicest advantages within the reach of everyone of moderate means, and can only be maintained by a greatly increased patronage.

The prospects for the coming session are very encouraging. Every Methodist girl in the State ought to be sent here, where she will be educated in harmony with her home surroundings and amid the best influences that can prevail anywhere. The faculty, well selected, have won the confidence of all patrons. Those who send abroad obtain no better facilities, and lose the advantage accruing to their daughters by college acquaintance with girls of their own State, so available and useful to them in after life, and fail to economize the money needlessly spent in going and coming from distant schools. More thorough and conscientious work is not found elsewhere. Everything that can be desired in a school can be secured here.

Louisiana Methodists ought to take pride in their own Conference schools, especially as they are the equals of others and better suited to them, being established for their benefit. Every Conference must sustain its own schools. We want a grand rally for Mansfield. Those who send here this year will be fortunate in placing their daughters in one of the best schools of the country, where every protection and comfort will be secured, and where the welfare and highest interest of their daughters will be promoted. Stand by your own school and make it the great school of the State. Write at once and secure a room.

Statistics.

A correspondent writes: "I am desirous of knowing which is the strongest religious body in the States. I had always thought that the Roman Catholics were the most numerous, but I have found some one who seriously disagrees."

An answer appears in our exchanges. Dr. Carroll has been investigating a census of the churches. The table of communicants is as follows:

Catholics	6,257,671
Methodists	4,589,284
Baptists	3,712,468
Lutherans	1,231,332
Presbyterians	1,278,332
Disciples of Christ, or "Christians"	744,773
Episcopalians	540,509
Congregationalists	512,771
Reformed	309,438
United Brethren	225,241
Mormons	166,125
Jews	150,313
Friends	107,208
All Others	812,582
Total	20,618,307

Catholic "communicants," however, include all members of families over thirteen years of age. If the Methodist or Baptist "communicants" were taken on the same basis, they would largely outnumber the Catholics. The Outlook says: "There is no occasion in any section for either Catholic hopes or American Protective Association fears of Catholic political ascendancy. So far as the number of voters is concerned, there are two Protestant denominations outranking the Catholics."—Christian Guardian.

The School Question in Ontario.

A commission appointed by the Minister of Ontario, Canada, has just made a report in regard to the separate schools maintained at Ottawa by the Christian Brothers, under Roman Catholic auspices. The report is the result of careful examination into the whole question relating to the methods used respectively by the public schools and those under Catholic control. The arrangement of the parochial schools is searching and severe, the report declaring that many of the teachers are incapable of teaching the English language or even of using it correctly; that the methods employed are antique; and that the whole process used in the schools is a repetition-by-rote system in which the memory alone is trained, and the reasoning powers are undisciplined. To quote from the report, "the whole work is largely a mechanical repetition of words." It would be a very dangerous piece of business for Roman Catholic children to be taught to use their reasoning powers. Is not the whole scheme of the papal hierarchy based upon the suppression of the human reason? Its pupils and subjects are taught to receive "the truth" by priestly authority, to believe and accept the utterances of the church, and to hold their reasoning powers and processes in complete abnegation.—Central Advocate.

A Suggestive Fact.

It is a suggestive fact that the date of the awakening of Japan, and the remarkable development which has lifted it up to an honorable place among the civilized nations of the earth, is contemporaneous with the introduction of Christianity and the ideas of Christian countries into "The Land of the Rising Sun." In one generation it has become completely transformed. Is not the superiority which Japan has evinced over China in the recent war a result of the same cause? But in nothing is there more striking evidence of this transformation than in the more humane conduct towards the Chinese. An exchange says: "Three centuries ago, when the Japanese had won a victory in Corea, they sent home the ears of 3 600 victims of the war as a trophy of their success. Now the best steamers of the Japanese government are put at the service of the Red Cross Society, and as much care is taken of the Chinese sick and wounded as of the Japanese. What has caused the change? Surely nothing else than the gospel of Christ. The result is due to the civilizing power of the Cross, the mightiest force in all human history."—Exchange.

A New Era in China.

Among the changes included in the new epoch inaugurated in China by the settlement with Japan is one which the United States are especially interested in, namely: the opening up of a new market for modern machinery. Hitherto the inventions and appliances of the nineteenth century have been sparsely admitted into the Chinese Empire, but under the treaty of peace it has been agreed that the country shall be open for the introduction of modern machinery, and that no duty shall be chargeable thereon. In view of this revolutionary policy, whereby 400,000,000 people are in due time to be supplied with occidental devices, machines, inventions and discoveries, an amazing opportunity will be offered to American manufactures and commerce. In such a case, also, the amenities and appliances of civilization will go hand in hand with the gospel.—Central Advocate.

One of the "Americanisms" which astonishes the dwellers of the old world is American gifts to educational institutions. The record is a notable one. In the last twenty-five years $75,000,000 of money made in America has been given to help in the cause of education. George Peabody left $6,000,000 of his estate to the cause of education; Isaac Rich, $2,000,000 to Boston University; Johns Hopkins, $3 140,000 to found a university in Baltimore which bears his name; Asa Packard gave $3,000,000 to Lehigh University; D. B. Faverweather left a bequest of nearly $3,000,000 to various colleges; Cornelius Vanderbilt gave $1,000,000 to the Vanderbilt University; John C. Green gave $1 500,000 to Princeton College; Asa Stone, $600,000 to Adelbert College; G. I. Seney, $450 000 to Wesleyan University; Matthew Vassar, $300,000 to Vassar College for Women; J. D. Rockefeller's gifts to the Chicago University aggregate $4 500,000; and Leland Stanford's estate will yield from $5,000,000 to $20,000 000 for the university that bears his name on the Pacific coast. Dr. Pearsons, of Chicago, has given away vast sums during the past six years in helping weak institutions. It is a roll of honor indeed.—Mid-Continent.

It is a very curious question, now coming up apparently, whether the relations of the sexes are becoming so changed as that the young woman is to be, at least in indirect ways, the suitor, instead of the young man. Mrs. Potter Palmer, a society leader in Chicago, after much opportunity of observation at watering-places this Summer, alludes to signs of coming change in this regard, and adds: "These are the things which makes me sigh for the good old days in which women waited confidently to be conquered, and did not have to go telephoning from cottage to cottage and from hotel to hotel to secure escort or companion of the male sex." This necessity she seems to regard as symptomatic, and as indicating a disposition on the part of young men to shirk those duties of polite attendance which were once their delight, and which so often ended in more intimate relations. It is suggested, upon the other hand, that young men in these times find themselves so much engrossed with their athletic sports that they become neglectful of their duties in the matter considered. Whether those who feel themselves thus neglected act wisely in undertaking that initiative which once belonged so entirely to the other party, is a question for "the new woman," as she comes to the front, seriously to consider.—The Standard.

In the Living Present.

The radical and idiosyncratic Prof. E. W. Bemis, who for the last five years was engaged as teacher of political economy by the Chicago (Baptist) University, has not been re-elected. It is well known that the professor has of late been teaching rank socialism, not to say anarchism. The friends of social upheaval now say that Rockefeller's and other capitalistic influence had brought about the dismissal. 'Tis silly. The professor's so-called advanced thought was but loose and extravagant nonsense.

W. J. H. Traynor, in the North American Review, insists, we think rightly, that our free institutions are being undermined by Roman Catholicism. That the pretended "liberal Catholicism" was but a term for a policy and signified no concession or amendment. A Roman Catholic owes obedience to the Pope first. To the laws of the government under which he lives, if agreeable to papal decree.

A writer in The Century laments the apparent degeneracy of the American stage. That the classic-tragedy, high comedy, the historic and romantic drama have been banished and replaced by worthless melodramas, extravagant buffoonery and "society" plays. Thus the lead has become worse. The worst is in sight.

Said a conservative candidate to a socialistic elector during recent English parliamentary election: "Notwithstanding contrary views, I hope you will vote for me." "No," said the enraged elector, "I rather vote for the devil." Promptly the conservative replied: "Indeed, sir! But your friend, the devil, stands a very poor chance in the present election."

Undertaker Stillwell, of New York, is about to introduce phonographic funeral service. Lachrymal dirges, the usual laudation, called sermon, and pathetic prayer, all furnished by the telephone. He has on hand various collections and combinations, suiting all possible conditions. Sorry he can not provide phonographically the expensive carriages. That would deprive, though, the habitual attendant of all funerals of the usual pleasure-ride, furnished gratis. ICH DIEN.

OUT OF, AND INTO.

BY ALICE HAMILTON RICH.

Out of a habit of doubting,
Into a life of trust
In Him who is full of mercy,
Yet the holy and the just.

Out of ambitious longing
To do a world of good,
Into content in doing
The little that I could.

Believing that the Master
Has counted up the will,
Willing'ring to another
The place I hoped to fill

Out of the dreams of morning,
Into the reals of noon;
With knowledge that the evening
Is coming to me soon.

An Ecclesiastical Situation.

BY JULIEN C. BROWN, D D.

NO III.

As showing a deep yearning, not often expressed, but common to a multitude of Christian hearts, we give herewith a quotation from Bishop Galloway in a recent speech at Nashville, Tenn. He said: "A thing which impressed the observer was the spirit of Christian unity which everywhere prevailed. In the presence of a common foe there is no ecclesiastical opponent in the strife; but if in China and Japan and in India we can be one in heart and purpose—can clasp hands and lock shields and move upon a common foe—why not in America?" (Applause.)

That the condition here indicated is desirable in America admits of no question—whether possible is the matter to be canvassed. Scores of mission leaders are pleading for some sort of union or federation in foreign lands for economic, religious, and other reasons, and applied common sense must some time bring it about. If there should be, then there can be, a unification of interests and a forgetting of denominational shibboleths, as devoted men and women confront the monsters of Paganism and false religions. In all humility, we ask if the same principles and arguments which apply for a unification of work in foreign fields are not also applicable in home work. If a federation of all moral, intellectual and spiritual forces is needed to conquer the distant places, is it not as needful here, where the enemies of man are more deadly, because more subtle, wily, and strongly entrenched?

Take but a passing glance at the situation. Evil is a unit. The black battalions of the pit move at the signal of command with the rapidity of light and as orderly as the stars. There is never a division in the camp of the devil. Where humanity and souls are at stake there is never dissension in hell. Every evil and sin that festers under the heavens is co-operative and sympathetic with every other evil and sin. Every moral wrong locks hand and heart with every other wrong, and, without murmur of dissent or suspicion of defection, moves toward the overthrow of the church and annulment of the government of God. Every evil that is known to men and Satan has aggressive alliance with the gigantic octopus of intemperance and saloons. By its cohesiveness, its unity, its loyalty to self and leaders, sin has reached the very acme of method for the attainment of its purpose. Its heart is pitiless and its unity unbroken.

In painful contrast another condition is noted. The good is divided. Perpetual conflict is waged among the "hosts of Israel." Inter-ecclesiastic strife is carried on with a rancor that appalls and a hate that is terrible. The army of the good struggles through the years in detached battalions and unheroic squads. When not fighting each other—which sometimes seems their most pleasant employment—they engage in a separate guerrilla warfare against the power of Satan. More than two hundred sects and denominations, each with its peculiar little rag of doctrine mounted on a pole for a flag, and vociferating its private, if not puerile, shibboleth, goes forth to fight for—itself. In thousands of small towns and villages one can find the population of from five hundred to two thousand divided up into four or five struggling, jealous, rival church organizations, each seeking the ascendancy, often by dubious methods, and emphasizing some patented right of non-essential truth or doctrine. The rivalry engenders quite often animosities that are never healed, strifes that are never ended, and acrimonious conduct that is never forgiven. There is continuous and petty war among garrulous old ladies and half-informed men, while children even are drawn into the toils of the abominable clash. If one organization climbs to the top in point of social or financial recognition, it is to the detriment of the others and the increase of dissatisfaction. The question comes to be in the last analysis, What will this community do to save our church from failure and defeat?—not, What will our church do to save this community from perdition? It is eagerly enquired if the people will save the church; not, Will the church save the people? Thus the divine order of things is reversed; the purpose and object of an ordained church is frustrated; and, as the result of multifarious teaching, instead of a stalwart, consecrated and devoted body of men and women, true to Christ and positive in hostility against evil in all its forms, we have reared and developed a community of lean, hungry, lantern-jawed ecclesiastical bigots and denominational zealots. Moreover, it is hardly to be questioned but that in some degree the tone of the pulpit will be modified by such conditions. Obeisance must be done to the money-bags and a very tender respect paid to the social elite. The organization has but a precarious foothold on public patronage and popular sympathy, and so resolves that a preacher is wanted who can steer between Scylla and Charybdis.

"A minister that's wise and modern and fast,
To teach that men may live as they list,
And still go to heaven at last."

Our assertion is not meant to be sweeping. In the main, however, it corresponds to absolute facts. There are thousands of places where one solid, substantial and evangelical church, based on the fundamentals of Christ's religion, intent solely on the extirpation of sin, the education of the masses and the salvation of souls, would be infinitely more productive of good than the present effort of handicapped, diverse, quadrangular and warring sects in the same community.

As specific illustration of Protestant and evangelical loss of power, and as showing the need for a more common-sense adjustment of relations among religious people, suppose we look for a moment at the status of our Methodism, North and South. Here we stand, our two vast armies representing the largest Protestant Church of America. (We have some seventeen little sisters called Methodists.) Our doctrines are identical; our polity nearly the same. In our methods of work, our auxiliary systems, and in our policies, we copy each the other. All real reason for antagonism and estrangement between the bodies has long since disappeared. Every reason for closer unity and a federation of forces grows into enlarging proportions and clearer light with each succeeding hour. The interests of humanity, the calls of the Holy Spirit, the almost dying prayer of our ascended Lord, and the sacred memories connected with our sainted and illustrious dead—all adjure us to let common sense come in and right the wrongs which prejudice alone has made. We present the pitiful spectacle of opposing each other in hundreds of towns and cities where the shadows of our buildings almost over-lap, and where to the one or the other, as sure as the stars rise and set, there will come some time the curse of God and the doom of complete overthrow. The foundation is stubble and hay and rottenness. It is true that the masses of men and women are swayed by personal likes and dislikes, by political bias, by sectional feelings and various extraneous influences; it is true that throngs live in our churches to-day who feed on memories of the past that are bitter and stained with blood, and who cherish, maybe, but half-consciously, a feeling of repugnance and hate towards their enemies of thirty years ago; but there are hosts of men and women of another sort. They love truth for its own sake, and do not care to search for it through distorted mediums; they love consistency because it is consistent, and are not inclined to clear away whole mountains of trash to find one nugget of gold. An educated, a cultivated, influential and moral class of irreligious people dwell in these towns and cities where our two Methodisms are now planted and struggling for dear life. These two Methodist forces are antagonistic, and it is specious falsity, or ignorant folly, to say they are not. Their antagonisms may be secret, and held in abeyance, but there is deadly enmity nevertheless. A tiger's eye glitters through the skin of the fraternal sheep, and sheathed in the yielding wool are his sharpened claws. This intelligent, but irreligious, class referred to will look on. If they do not openly sneer, they will grimly smile, and that is an undisguised disgust. They see the irreligion of such religion—the sham and the semblance of the whole miserable thing; they are repulsed by it. It presents to them a phase of so-called religion totally at variance with every preconceived notion of the teaching of Christ, and one which finds no justification in the commonest order of common sense. To their minds it travesties the gospel of the Master; is an open caricature of the Christian spirit it professes to hold, and a visible contradiction of the principles it assumes to teach. A shrewd lawyer remarked in the hearing of your scribe: "The two wine-skins of Methodism in this city have no new wine of the gospel to give. They hold only the poisonous lees of party rancors, deep-seated dislikes, unwise divisions, and unholy rivalries. They are no good. I am a Know-nothing." He could have been a Methodist but for the realistic spectacle before his eyes.

The self-respecting pastor in any section of our common country—one who wants to live to-day, meeting the exigencies of the present and immediately future years—dislikes the odious task of burrowing among the rotten tombs of decayed and settled issues to find justification for the present attitude of these two Methodisms. If an honest man, not blinded by party spirit nor biased by sectional prejudice, he must hang his head and submit that the ruling policy is indefensible.

A search for the causes which have made possible our unfederated condition involves a re-raking among the charnel-houses of bellum and ante-bellum passions and prejudices—a disobliging, if not profitless, task. To the antiquarian and historian belong of right those shady precincts. For children of the light—those with faces turned to sun-rising, and those called to do present work by personal effort in saving the world—the ghoulish crypts have no attraction, but only repulsion.

The editor of the old reliable NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is generous in giving us space. The scribe does not mean to draw out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument; so the readers will be relieved next week.

Unused Powers.

In most cases, the chief regret of an old person is that life's opportunities were not more wisely used. Whether the sense of moral blame is less keen than that of failure to accomplish the most of which one is capable, or whether, after all, the highest degree of moral blame does not attach to a wasted life, certain it is that age is more apt to lament the good thing left undone than the evil thing done. It is rarely that you find an old man bemoaning his sins. But how often you hear him lamenting his wasted opportunities! It seems to him an unpardonable sin that any of his powers should have gone to waste.

Here is a suggestion and a warning for youth. Make the most of all your powers and opportunities! Do not lay up for yourselves burdens of remorse by neglecting to use and develop the faculties with which you have been endowed. The time to begin is always now. There can be but one now for the present opportunity. There will be another now to-morrow, but it will be for another opportunity. The chance you have to-day will never come back.

There are few sadder sights than a young man or young woman of rare promise squandering time, talent and opportunity in indolent unconcern, or in the pursuit of something utterly unworthy of themselves. One feels that they are capable of such noble things!—and yet they are selling themselves so cheaply to mere pleasure or dull-sensed ease. Little do they dream of the ever-increasing regret which is destined to pursue them like Nemesis as they enter upon the serious years of life. That irreparable past, with the opportunities that can never return—how the memory will haunt them!

"Make the most of your time, my boy!" were the parting words of a good old minister, who was sending his son away to a distant college, not to see him again, perhaps, until the boy's preparation for life had been completed. It was an injunction into which was packed the wisdom of a life of godly experience; and if the boy followed it, he could not have gone far wrong. Make the most of yourself, young man, young woman, whoever and wherever you are! Lay up no regrets for unused powers. Be a Christian; be honorable; be good. But with all your being, be faithful to the power that in you lies.—Zion's Herald.

A careful study of the world as it is will satisfy anyone of these two facts: First, the best people are, as a rule, the least known. Those who are quietly building up the Christian civilization of the ages are like the coral insects in the Pacific. The reef rises year after year, but the builders do not grave their names upon it. They build not for themselves, but for humanity and for God. Second, the best part of human life does not get into history. History is a record of wars and catastrophes, of vices and crimes, rather than of the real progress of the race. And since this is so, why should any of us care about being famous in our day and generation? Is it not enough for us to do our daily duty in the fear of God, and trust in him for the record and the reward? If we are his, our names are written in heaven. If we give even a cup of cold water in his name, he will report it to the universe in the great day. If we are faithful unto death, no matter how lowly our sphere, he will give us a crown of life, and we shall reign with him for ever and ever.—The Interior.

Fine Clothes at Church.

"I believe many poor girls are kept away from church because of the showy and expensive clothes we wear on Sunday; for my part I am going to dress more plainly for church." So said a Christian girl in our hearing recently. Did she not make a point which our women would do well to think about? The excuse may not be a reasonable one. No matter about that. Does it hinder church going on the part of the poor?—Epworth Herald.

"It's not so much where you are, as what you are that makes your heaven." The bright cheery soul who lives the life of trust only sees the sunny side of everything; she has learned to endure cheerfully, and wear a bright face when everything looks dark; to her it is not all dark, there is a light from the face of our Father, and she rests assured that all is well.

We suffer even in our spiritual life when we confine our thoughts to the narrow horizon of our individual welfare. . . . Nothing is more pitiful than a life spent in thinking of nothing but self. Yes; even in thinking of nothing but one's own soul.—Canon Farrar.

It is possible for us to be so deeply interested in getting other people to give up their bad habits as to forget to give up our own. One of the greatest preachers we ever knew so far lost sight of himself that he became utterly wanting in common courtesy.

There is a deal of dying to be done still by those who cherish lofty thoughts of their own attainments. The holiest man will ever be he who thinks least of his own holiness.—Rev. W. H. Aitken.

There is only one thing in the world greater than Christ's Sermon on the Mount, and that is Christ's life in the plain.

It is a great deal easier for some people to pray for the preacher than it is to do their part toward his support.

Faith furnishes prayer with wings, without which it can not soar to heaven.—John Climacus.

Programme for the Week of Prayer for W. F. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference.

As the time appointed by the Woman's Board of Missions for holding the annual Week of Prayer conflicts with the time the Bishop has appointed for holding the North Mississippi Annual Conference—viz., the last week in November—it was resolved by the W. F. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference, in annual session in Columbus, to change the time for the Week of Prayer in our Conference to the last week in September—Sept. 22-27. This change necessitates the making of our own programme, as the regular programme prepared by the editor of Leaflets will not be out until October.

Let this week be observed by every Auxiliary in our Conference wherever possible. Let it be a week of self-denial as well as thanksgiving, and may our gifts, as well as our prayers, witness to our love for Christ and the cause of missions!

SUNDAY, SEPT. 22.

If possible, secure the services of the pastor for a sermon on Missions and Woman's Responsibility in the Work, at 11 A. M. If preferred, a public missionary meeting, in which the young people and juveniles should take part, may be held on Sunday night.

MONDAY, SEPT. 23.

Topic: United Prayer. II. Chron. vii, 15, 16; Isa. lvii, 7; Matt. xviii, 19, 20; I. Tim. ii, 8-10; Ps. lxv, 2; Acts xii, 5; Rev. viii, 3.

Let these commands and invitations encourage our hearts, and let the prayers that ascend from our societies be as from one heart and one voice, crying mightily unto the Lord, especially for the church at home.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 24.

Topic: Confession. Neh. i, 5-11; Dan. ix, 17-19; I. John i, 9.

We have all sinned before God in this great cause of missions, in that we have failed to do our whole duty. We have not worked and prayed and given according to our several ability.

Field for the day: China.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 25.

Topic: Self-denial. Luke ix, 23; Luke iii, 11; John xii, 25; Phil. ii, 4-6; Mark xii, 41-44.

Let this topic secure earnest attention and full discussion. Pray that God may open our eyes to see our duty and opportunities in this line of self-denial, and help us to realize that here is Woman's Bank, and by this means is our work for the heathen to be carried on.

Field for the day: Brazil.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 26.

Topic: Paying Our Debts. Rom. i, 14; II. Cor. ix, 6; I. Cor. xvi, 2; Matt. iii, 8-12; Prov. iii, 9, 10.

Pray that all may realize more deeply their obligation to God and to the heathen souls for whom he shed his blood.

Field for the day: Mexico.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 27.

Topic: Thanksgiving. Ps. cxvi; Ps. cxviii.

Let the service be one of thanksgiving for personal blessings, and also praise for what God has wrought through our weak efforts in heathen lands. Thanks for the past and fuller consecration for the future.

Field for the day: Indian Territory.

During the week let each society see to it that every lady member of the church is invited—yea, urged—to join the W. F. M. S.

MRS. T. B. HARGROVE, Pres.
MRS. H. A. DEAN, Cor. Sec.

North Mississippi Conference W. F. M. S.

The following extracts from Archdeacon Farrar's address before the Church Missionary Society, which is published in the August number of the Review of Missions, must appeal to the earnest consideration of every child of God, and be an inspiration to Christians of every nation to more diligent service for, and liberal giving to, this great cause. This article would make a profitable selection for a monthly meeting of the Auxiliary.

"The uniqueness and the universality of Christ's claim to the allegiance of all mankind is illustrated most of all by the spread of missions. Meeting the needs of all, and alone able to meet their needs; healing the sorrows of all, and alone able to heal their sorrows; forgiving the sins of all, and alone able to forgive their sins—he proclaims himself, by that mighty power, not only the Son of man, but also the Son of God. And he has, as it were, ascended to heaven, and taken his seat at the right hand of God, not only in the presence of his few poor Galilean disciples, but before the face of all the world.

"Millions at this moment are ready to die for Christ. A dead Socrates, a dead Marcus Aurelius, a dead Francis of Assisi can do nothing for the world; but though Christ died—yea, rather, he rose again, and he has proclaimed his universal dominion. Confucius owns many followers over a vast space of the world's surface, but he appeals to the Chinese alone; Mohammed has many adherents, but he appeals only to Turks and Arabians and certain Eastern people; but Christ appeals to every man who is born into the world. The old man dies in the peace of Christ, and the little Christian child on its death-bed whispers the same holy name. If we take the very foremost men in genius whom this world has ever produced—a Dante, a Milton, a Newton—we find them weeping over the records of that life which was given for man. But none the less, when that story of Christ's love is told to the very humblest and meanest of mankind, it comes home to their hearts; and I was told by the late saintly Bishop of Moosonee, who was my friend and my guest, that if at this day you were to go down the bleak shores of Hudson's Bay, there—among those poor, I had almost said degraded—at any rate, those poor, once savage Indians and Eskimo—you would find the Bible in almost every wigwam, and you would find in many of those poor, converted savages a humble student of the life of Christ in the Word of God. Therefore, our commission is plain, and our duty is positive—to obey that last divine command by extending the area of Christianity, by carrying further the victories of Christianity, and by proclaiming to the remotest nations of the world the name of their Savior Christ.

"Now, what is the history of missions? First of all, you have one hundred and twenty poor, despised, persecuted Galileans, meeting secretly in an upper room, to proclaim the Messiah whom all the Jews and all the Gentiles had combined to crucify (as a malefactor between two robbers. And yet now, all these long series of ages afterwards, you have certainly not less than five hundred millions of the professors of Christianity, and worshipers of the name of Christ among the very greatest and very noblest representatives of mankind. Christianity conquered the Roman, it civilized the barbarian, it prevailed over all the greatest part of the civilized world, and the total result is this: that whereas at the end of three centuries after Christ, if the whole human race had passed in their long procession before you—that interminable procession between the two eternities—then only one out of every hundred and fifty of the human race would have been a Christian; but now, after the fierce light of criticism and of civilization has been burning for nearly nineteen centuries upon the records of the Gospels, if the whole human race were now to pass before us in that interminable procession, one, perhaps, in every three, would own and proclaim the name of Christ. Is it not then perfectly erroneous to talk of the failure of missions when they started with one hundred and twenty despised Galileans, and when now—taking the number of Protestants in the world alone, and not taking the number of other divisions of Christians—there are at least one hundred and twenty millions of Protestants, and they have in their power almost all the wealth and almost all the resources of the world? And I say that this immense success is still going on increasing."

* * * * * *

Then, after showing how much is still to be done, he says:

"When we consider the state of a vast a portion of the world, and see that the work before us must still be a stupendous work, who is to do it if the English nation is not to do it? Only consider our imperial position, and the illimitable prospects which God has spread out before us. If the original preachers of Christianity, contending against so many difficulties, won a conspicuous a victory over the art, and the genius, and the civilization, and the sneers, and the wit, and the philosophy of the world—if they conquered the diadem of the all-powerful Cæsars and the swords of thirty legions, what might not we, in our present position, accomplish? If they, by the irresistible might of weakness, shook the world; if by the force of martyrdom they prevailed over the nations; if by the spreading of the two dove-like wings of purity and of kindness they winnowed out all the wretched elements which have infested the world, then surely we, in the plenitude of our material resources and at the zenith of our power, might, if we were truly faithful, produce such a result as is at present not even dreamed of by us. I say that if impotence, armed with truth, produced upon the world so tremendous an impression, what will not be achieved by Empire, armed with truth? Is that to be helpless when the other was so strong?"

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the North Mississippi Conference Society will be held at Greenwood early in October. Due notice will be given when the exact date is fixed. It is greatly desired that every Auxiliary shall promptly elect a delegate, who may be depended on to attend. That this may be an occasion of great spiritual profit, that every member pray often and earnestly for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the society and upon the town where we meet; and let us go to the meeting emptied of self, and desiring only to do God's work in God's way.

Corinth District Meeting.

Our first meeting of the W. P. and H. M. Society of the Corinth district met at New Albany, Aug. 16 to 18, in connection with the Foreign Missionary Society. "In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths." Realizing the need of divine guidance, our first service was one of preparation. An interesting program was prepared of articles on home and foreign work; and the harmony of these two daughters of Methodism was the theme of a stirring paper read by Mrs. E. D. Rollins. Mrs. Sadler, of Corinth, gave us a forceful and earnest paper on "Information Is Necessary to Successful Work," urging us to equip ourselves with knowledge, and be well posted on our work by careful and prayerful study of our literature. Mrs. H. R. Tucker, in a clear and well-written article, showed clearly to all unconvinced "The Advantages of the W. P. and H. M. Society over the Aid Society." Loving greetings from Mrs. Foote, our president, were read, inspiring us to redouble our zeal in the grand cause of the W. P. and H. M. Society. Mrs. J. R. Thrasher gave an article on "The Work of the W. P. and H. M. Society," setting forth its aim and object, its work already accomplished, and its ambitions for the future, urging us to strong, united effort to advance this great cause which we have espoused. Rev. H. R. Tucker preached us a soul-stirring sermon Sunday, on "Missions at Home and in Foreign Fields." Bro. Bell gave us "Words of Encouragement," Sunday afternoon, and Sunday night Rev. C. Park discoursed on the important theme of tithe-paying. Copies of the Homes were distributed, and New Albany Aid Society donned the Methodist uniform and turned W. P. and H. M. Society. Our work is growing in the Corinth district; three auxiliaries added in the last three months. May it grow and spread until all our Methodist women fall into line!

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, P. C., Gunnison, Miss., Aug. 22: "For the past two weeks we have enjoyed the most wonderful meeting on this charge I have been in for years. I did most of the preaching, the people sung and prayed, and the Holy Ghost came in power. Bro. E. S. Lewis gave us three sermons that were much appreciated. Seven joined the church, and all the people revived."

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, P. C., Dry Creek, La., Aug. 22: "I have had two revivals (not protracted meetings) on my work the last week. On last Thursday, at the Mt. Fair School-house, there were 11 accessions on profession of faith, and many more were stirred deep in their hearts and manifested a desire to lead a better life. Last Tuesday at Pearl I received 8 members on profession of faith, and baptized 4 children, making a total of 35 accessions this year, and have baptized 20 adults and 16 infants. Praise the Lord for salvation."

Rev. J. E. Buck, P. C., Amory, Miss., Aug. 26: "Am through with my protracted meetings (four in all); 19 accessions to the church, Six infants baptized, church quickened. Third Quarterly Conference held last Saturday and Sunday. Pastor's salary up to date. Conference collection three-fourths paid and secured. New stove in the parsonage. Heavy pounding recently. People good and preacher and family happy. Thanks to Bros. Lewis and Dorsey, traveling preachers, and Threadgill, Durrett and Sullivan, local preachers, for help in my meetings."

Rev. R. S. Isbell, P. C., Calhoun, La., Aug. 21: "Have just closed a most glorious meeting of seven days' duration at Indian Village, ably assisted by Bros. Griggs and Crocker, local preachers. The people say one of the best meetings ever held there. On last Thursday night the Holy Ghost descended with great power, and everybody seemed to be shouting at one time. Congregations increased from start to finish, and the meeting closed gloriously. Scores of conversions and several additions to the church. To God be all the glory! Hope to organize an Epworth League soon. Will advance on Cadeville, Saturday. Will begin a meeting in Calhoun on Saturday before the fourth Sunday of September, assisted by Rev. M. M. Morphis, of Tehuacana, Texas. Let all come."

Rev. C. McDonald, Forest, Miss., Aug. 28: "Last night we closed the Lake Camp Meeting. We had a pleasant time, and report thirty to forty conversions and reclamations. Nearly every tent was occupied. Rev. T. B. Malone, of North Mississippi Conference, was with us, and did a liberal share of the preaching. He is a very successful preacher. Besides, we had Witt, Barr, Sullivan, Caldwell, Holloman, Chambers, Penn, Dr. Miller, Hines, Weems (J. S.), Burton (R. W.), Blackwell and Harrod. Only part of these preached, yet all were useful in the meeting. The services on the last afternoon, for the negroes, was an interesting and profitable one. Only one secession to the church. This territory has been well cultivated for nineteen years, or since the camp ground was established; so there are very few to join, only as the children grow up."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., Aug. 24: "We have just closed our meeting at Wesley Chapel, Phœnix, Warren circuit, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference, and we had a very good and profitable meeting, although we were interfered with, with sickness and rain all the week; yet the good Lord was with us, and hence the church was lifted to a higher plane, and sinners were converted and converted or regenerated. Eight joined the church, so we are encouraged to go forward in the Master's work. We had the service of Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, of Yazoo City, all the week or until the close. He did all the preaching, and it was certainly well done. I do not know when I ever heard a better series of sermons. They were all of the highest order. Dr. Featherstun is one of our strongest men, and will make his mark very high upon the scroll of fame as a strong preacher and theologian. May God graciously bless him and his work, and may God graciously bless the good people of Wesley Chapel, and help them to work to keep up the interest of the church and save sinners. God bless them all!"

Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan, Pleasanton, La., Aug. 17: "I have just closed a glorious revival at Pleasant Valley Church, on Valley circuit (Bro. Parvin's work). Hardened sinners broke down and gave their lives to Christ, and are now singing the praises of a blessed Redeemer; old gray-haired men, that have spent their lives in the service of Satan, are now rejoicing in the wonderous love of a Savior. Thank God! Christian professors have been made stronger in the faith, and backslidden church members reclaimed. Glory to God! We received sixteen members for the church. Our congregations large (for a country place), and very attentive. Bro. Bingett preached three sermons, and gave me valued assistance. Bro. Davis (a local preacher from Ringgold circuit) preached two stirring sermons. We closed with a large number still at the mourner's bench seeking Christ. May God bless them all! Bro. Parvin sowed seed, during his short stay on this circuit, that are reaping a bountiful harvest for the kingdom of God. This is my third meeting on the work. Have received twenty-four members in all. I have four other meetings to hold. Pray for me and my people. May God bless you and your labors. Let God have all the glory!"

Rev. J. A. Poe, P. C., Ethel, Miss., Aug. 24: "We have many things on Ethel circuit to encourage us and make us feel very grateful to our heavenly Father. We have held four meetings up to date. In two of these meetings we have received valuable aid by Bros. A. W. Langley, who assisted me at Ethel, and P. B. Fullilove, who was with me at Marion, his old home church. We had a glorious revival at Marion, resulting in 20 accessions to the church. We have received 35 into the church during this year, and we expect fifteen or twenty more before the revival season is over. I have my heart set on fifty souls for Christ during the year. Don't think I will be disappointed. We are doing some valuable repairing on our churches. We expect to repair nearly every church on the charge, for they all need it. One of the greatest barriers that stands athwart our pathway, as a church, is the need of more respectable and comfortable churches. We have organized four prayer meetings and two Sunday-schools. We have a membership of about five hundred and about two hundred and seventy-five Sunday-school scholars. We have moved up along all lines this year except finance. We have had a good increase in the circulation of our literature. To God be the glory."

Rev. T. S. West, Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., Aug. 21: "We are passing along smoothly, at peace with each other and the world around us. Now and than a baby is baptized, a member received on profession or by certificate. Congregations good, but slightly less during this hot and showery weather. Sunday-school as large as ever. Prayer meeting, perhaps, a little less; prayers as earnest, but the attention fewer. Pastoral visiting kept up at the usual rate, except when I am a little feeble. I don't feel that I am completely over the severe attack I had in the Spring, but I feel sure I will be in the very best of health by Conference. The great missionary enterprise is kept before the minds of the people. By the way, I was at a new sort of tea not long ago. I have been at pink teas, and violet teas, where the fragrant flowers figured largely on the table, and at the high tea that came at the low midnight hour, when all nature is presumed to be at rest. You are invited into the dining-room about 12 o'clock. Then to deal with baked turkey, roast mutton, salads, sauces, cakes, pies, etc.; an hour and a half or two hours later you are back in the parlor, gathering up wraps, hats, gloves, etc., ready for departure. But this new tea, to me different from all these: It was called a Brazilian tea. The members of the Woman's Missionary Society, Capitol Street Church, were there in force, each one posted on some feature of the work in Brazil. One outlined briefly the condition of the country, one told of the beginning of the work; another, its progress; one, the present condition, its needs, etc.; then the collection, then refreshments. I was there by accident, and just in time for the last two services, to give and take. Our assessment for foreign missions has been paid in full; about half the domestic paid; the Conference claimants have received a part of their allowance."

A NOTE FROM GREENWOOD, MISS.

We are having too much rain in this part of the Delta for cotton—so the planters say; but we have a great corn crop, and a large hog crop for this country; and if we get 7 cents or 8 cents for cotton, this county (Leflore) will be in fine condition. I think the spiritual progress of the county has been equal to its temperal development. For nine years in this section I have watched the power and progress of the gospel with very great pleasure. Certainly the gospel has been the power of God unto the salvation of this people.

We are now on the short end of the third year of our stay in Greenwood, and hope to have a glorious ending. I can truly say this is an enterprising, working and spiritual congregation; love their preacher and family, and treat them well. Hardly a day has passed since we have been here that they have not given us some substantial evidence of their love; and the climax was reached the first of July, when they moved us into a magnificent new parsonage. I tell you, Doctor, a hall 12 feet wide, 36 feet long, and with a ceiling 13 feet above your head is a very great pleasure these hot days. We have had no protracted meeting yet, but hope to have a great meeting in October. We have received some this year on profession of faith. I believe we have all the societies organized that the law provides for. But, perhaps, no meeting we have is more enjoyed or better attended than our quarterly love-feast, led by our good presiding elder, J. B. Stone, and I'm glad to say as the weather grows warmer he grows stronger. W. S., Jr., wife and myself are just home from a tour of meetings. Pope's station, a small village north of Grenada, about thirty miles, was where we held our first meeting. Rev. T. B. Clifford, the faithful pastor for the second year, had so thoroughly done his work that but three persons could be found out of the church in that community, and they were hid out—would not come to church. It was a great pleasure to preach to so many Christian people. Clifford is a great worker (and so is his wife), and has almost worked his little self into a shadow on this big circuit.

From Pope's we went to Hernando; then six miles into the country to old Baker's Chapel, where my only brother lives, and where I was raised and was converted. A. J. Jones is the pastor. He and his noble wife are hard at work for the Lord. We had a good meeting. But many of those elect ladies that I used to see working in meetings are lying in the ground just behind the old church; their spirits might have been present, anxiously watching the movements of loved ones—who knows?

After Scarlet Fever, Diphtheria, Pneumonia and similar diseases, Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled to thoroughly purify the blood and give needed strength. Read this:

You do not need eyesight to inform you when you are in close proximity to a goose; your ears are sufficient. Some geese wear feathers, and some do not.

Some dogs are very brave when they are on the other side of the fence. They have kinfolks that belong to the genus homo.

Whither Are We Drifting?

A genuine Spanish bull-fight took place a few days ago at Gillette, Col. As would be the case anywhere, a number of toughs were on hand, glad to pay fifty cents apiece for the privilege of witnessing the brutalizing spectacle. A bull-fight, did we say? That is not a correct statement of the facts in the case. There were two fights on two successive days. In the first fight one bull was killed, and another was most mercilessly gored by sharp iron spikes—all to afford amusement to brutes in human shape.

What are we coming to? Have the wheels of time rolled backward two thousand years? Is this Heaven-favored land destined to enter into competition with Pagan Rome for the palm of brutality? What is to become of the rising generation if they are to be trained under such a regime as this? These, our first bull-fights, ought to raise a storm of indignation from one end of the continent to the other. We can not afford to dally with such monstrosities, etc. If the bull-fight is tolerated in one State, it will soon make its way to others. Let no one doubt that.

Woman's F. and H. M. Soc'ety Conference.

The Conference of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, at Asheville, N. C., adjourned Tuesday, the twenty-seventh, after a session of nearly a week. The official reports show that much good work has been done. The "mountain work," under the leadership of Miss Belle Bennett, has been vigorously prosecuted with gratifying results. A number of Christian schools have been founded in the mountainous regions of Georgia, Virginia, Kentucky, and the Carolinas. Through the agency of these schools many children and young people are receiving Christian education who otherwise would have grown up in ignorance. Besides these primary schools scattered about in the wild mountainous districts, there are to be industrial schools, which, in addition to a literary course, will give instruction in the various industrial arts, with special emphasis upon the arts connected with home-keeping. One of these, as our readers know, has been established at London, Ky. Another is to be founded at Waynesville, N. C.

Most gratifying reports were made concerning the mission work among the Cubans in the coast cities of Florida, especially Tampa and Key West. The results have been very remarkable, considering the brief period since the commencement of this work. Measures were adopted looking to increased facilities in this department.

Good work has been done among neglected native population in our large cities. The great need in this department is an increase of trained workers. As a means of supplying this desideratum in part, it is recommended that training classes be formed wherever practicable. These classes are to receive instruction in the form of lectures. It is suggested that there be at least ten lectures on each of the following subjects, viz., the Bible, Church History, Sunday-school Work, Methods of Mission Work, Nursing the Sick.

Concerning mission work in this city, we quote as follows from an able paper written by Mrs. Linns Parker:

The Methodist Church, South, has five mission schools in the city, well officered and well attended. They are also suitably located for the needs of the population, but their quarters are rented houses, insufficient as to capacity, and otherwise unsuited to their purposes. The greatest need of these missions is to own their places of work. The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society is now earnestly working with this end in view. This society employs a city missionary, a young woman, who is the exponent of all that a consecrated Christian woman should be. The results of her labors are not only always encouraging, but often marvelous. The delicate, tender, little brown-eyed creature goes forth daily into homes of poverty, filth and sin, and often into places dangerous for any woman to go, unless she be surrounded, as this one is, by a guard of angel forces. The fallen little street gamins know her by name and follow her in all sorts of garbs and conditions to the school-room, and soon, by their clean faces and gentle behavior, show what her influence has accomplished. "When he cometh to make up his jewels," the crown which Susie Burbank shall inherit will be full of gems of brightest radiance. There are many other earnest women working in our missions who spare not any efforts or self-denial which may promote their interests.

The Methodist Church, South, has also a City Church Extension Society, which promises to do much for the cause it represents.

Of other denominations, there are three missions for Chinese carried on by the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches with much success. The Presbyterian and Northern Methodist Churches have missions for the Italians.

The North Mississippi Conference, it seems, takes the banner for the largest percentage of Parsonage and Home Mission Societies, there being only sixteen charges without a society.

The president, Mrs. E. E. Wiley, tendered her resignation, with a view of giving her entire time to the orphanage at Knoxville, Tenn. The resignation was not accepted, but the Central Committee was empowered to accept it, and elect her successor, provided she can not be prevailed upon to reconsider. The ladies of the Conference were the recipients of many social attentions. A grand reception was given them by Central Church in the parlors of Asheville Female College. They were given a drive to the Vanderbilt mansion, which has been in process of construction five years and is still unfinished. It is said that this structure when completed will be by far the most magnificent private residence, not only in America, but in the world.

Among the distinguished visitors to the Conference were Drs. Lambuth and Morton and Bishop Hargrove.

Systematic Study.

One of our prominent divines is reported to have said that most of our preachers accomplish their life-work before they attain to the age of forty years. That thereafter they simply live off the interest of former achievements. Are merely tolerated. We doubt the correctness of the statement. If correct, it reveals a humiliating state of things. Cavour, Thiers, Bismarck and Gladstone were more than sixty years of age before they displayed the greatest genius and achieved greatest success.

To charge the intimated early decay to our itinerancy is wrong. Though some may look upon youthful crudities and incipidities as vigorous thought, the majority of our congregation understand properly to measure a man. It is true, old men are not wanted among us. In India, of yore, the aged were carried to a near jungle to be mercifully destroyed by wild beasts. Not a few look upon old preachers as an encumbrance.

But are not the old preachers—say those more than forty years of age—partly responsible for this state of things. Do not many of about that age abandon former habits of industry and submit to the ruinous embrace of beguiling laziness? If we mistake not, many are not given to habitual research, seek not for the truth for the truth's sake. Are not diligent students. Permit intellectual dissipation.

Two causes, principally, bring about this sad state of things. The first one is, that many preachers, at the meridian of life, discover that their aspirations are doomed to blight. Much lauded while young, they began to overestimate themselves. They expected speedy promotion, elevation, eminence. This ambition is perfectly compatible with piety. Now their hope of life's ideal disappointed. Hence, away books and rehash of former intellectual products.

Another fruitful cause of neglect of habitual study is found in the lack of appreciative audiences. Discover that the superficialities of the unlettered, but united to imposing bodily appearance and unbounded pretension, carry the day. The product of their research worse than wasted, suffer loss because of research.

The trouble with the latter results from lack of adaptation. No, sir; education should not do away with common sense. Those congregations are rare which can properly appreciate an elaborate theological treatise. What our thought can scarcely grasp would illy suit a congregation not given to research. But all the same, we must study. Study for self-gratification and, if you please, for preservation of necessary freshness of mind. Lack of study will superinduce dullness. But it is the height of folly to present to our hearers the height and depth of our cogitations. We must learn to present only what is intellectually easily digestible. Must leave off what transcends ordinary conception.

But while we denounce constant reproduction of old sermons, we do not recommend their destruction. Reconstruction, though, is necessary. Bishop Bascom is reported to have preached the same sermon twelve times in rapid succession, though to different audiences. It was found, however, that he improved on said sermon every time by judicious elimination and addition. An old sermon may contain valuable thought. Preserve it; but add thereto. Strange that a suit of clothes which fit a boy of fifteen should also fit the man at twenty-five!

At the General Conference, in Atlanta, our present Missionary Secretary—then a city pastor—Dr. Morrison, inveighed against the presiding eldership. We remember that, as point seventeenth, he spoke of the elders' insufferable rehash of old sermons, the manuscript being yellow and soiled because of long use.

It is habitual study which will prevent intellectual petrification. Without such study the mind will move in certain grooves. Are threadbare and dull. If given to habitual study, the aged will not have to grace the convenient shelf; congregations will gladly receive them. We could mention names for illustration; but we forbear. Habitual study will keep us in touch with the rising generation, will make us seem young in old age, will still sharpen our intellectual acumen, will enrich our knowledge with data for delectation. A.

Mirabile dictu! The Sunday law is actually enforced in New York City. Hon. Emory Speer, of Macon, Ga., judge of the United States Court, has been selected to deliver the oration at the opening of the Atlanta Exposition. This is an honor wisely bestowed. For the past two months I. W. Cooper has been at work diligently and successfully in behalf of Millsaps College. He has been canvassing not so much for money as for pupils. The State of Illinois has a law requiring that the star-spangled banner shall be kept afloat for a certain number of hours every day over all courthouses, school-houses and other public buildings. The great West has its eye upon the South. We have given notice from time to time of colonies from the West settling in different sections of the South. The following from the Nashville Advocate is decidedly refreshing:

The Epworth League now has in the city of Nashville 29 active Leagues, 1,500 members, and an employed general secretary. Mississippi Methodism suffers a severe loss in the death of Judge James T. Fant, of Holly Springs. As a steward and as a delegate to the District, the Annual and General Conference, he was eminently serviceable to the church. He was a man of culture and refinement—a polished Christian gentleman. He was a lawyer of fine abilities and had made an admirable reputation as a jurist. Earth is poorer, but heaven is richer.

Bishop Thoburn, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is an ardent advocate of diocesan episcopacy. He thinks the interests of the church, especially in mission fields, could be much better served by having the same Bishop to preside over a Conference year after year instead of the present system of continual change. He argues that an occasional visit does not give an Episcopos sufficient knowledge of the needs of the work and the qualifications of men.

The will of the late Moses U. Payne has been filed for probate. Besides making liberal provisions for his family and a number of other persons, including his servants, he donates twenty thousand dollars to the Church Extension Board of the M. E. This fund will aid in building churches year after year as long as time lasts, or at least as long as the Southern Methodist Church lasts.

In Indiana, not long since, a lady suddenly disappeared, and was supposed to be dead. Some of her friends, being ardent spiritualists, went to a medium in order to open up communications with her in the spirit-world. She was readily accessible, and communicated freely with the loved ones on mundane shores, much to their comfort. Not long afterwards, however, the lady appeared in the flesh, and declared that she had never been out of it. So it seems that there is at least one point of similarity between this world and the spirit-world—i. e., both have citizens who answer to names other than their own.

Hon. W. E. Gladstone has retired from public life, but he has not ceased to take an interest in public affairs; neither has the world ceased to take an interest in his utterances. He came forward recently at a public meeting to champion the cause of the suffering Armenians. His speech was a severe arraignment of the Turkish government, which, in his estimation, is responsible for the horrid butcheries of Christians in Armenia. Private citizen though he is, his words may well make the Sultan tremble in his palace. A day of reckoning is surely coming for the wretched travesty upon government enthroned on the Bosphorus.

The Chautauqua movement has found its way into the Catholic Church. Though the word "Chautauqua" is not used by them, the Catholics are establishing here and there institutions similar to the Chautauqua, which have become one of the characteristic features of nineteenth century civilization. One of these has been domiciled in this city. It is called the "Catholic Winter School of America." Its first session will begin Feb. 16, 1896. Cardinal Gibbons and the Apostolic Delegate, Satolli, will be present at the opening session. The programme is not yet complete. Arrangements have been made, however, for lectures as follows: English Literature 5 lectures; American Literature, 5 lectures; Louisiana History, 5; Science and Religion, 5; Physical Science, 5; Italian Poets, 3; Botany, 2. The president of the organization is Archbishop Janssens.

The commission appointed by Congress to inquire into the feasibility of the construction of the Nicaragua Canal has been for some time industriously at work. Its report is not yet ready for publication, but it has given the public through the press some of the chief items which will be embraced in the report. First and foremost, it says that the construction of the canal is feasible. Its estimate of the cost, however, is enormously in excess of the estimate presented to Congress by the Canal Company. One hundred and fifteen millions of dollars is the estimated cost. The labor of twenty thousand men will be required for six years. It is now evident that Congress did well to appoint a commission to investigate and report instead of making an appropriation on the dictum of the Canal Company. Congress can now proceed intelligently in the matter of making appropriations.

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take 6 months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes.

W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

P. S.—Should you fail to get the full number of subscribers, you will get a good cash commission. W. C. B.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you can in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once. We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

OPENING DAY.

I desire to call the attention of our friends and patrons to our opening, Sept. 11. Pupils are urged to come on the tenth, so that they may be settled in their rooms in due time. Let all who want further information or desire to engage rooms write me at once. Sincere thanks are hereby given to the brethren and friends of the college for their sympathy and help in our difficult, delicate and responsible work for the church.

I am depending on the preachers to hold the Methodist girls in their charges for our own school and to see that they come in time for the opening if possible. I hope as many of the brethren and trustees as can will honor us with their presence. Our prospects for a large opening are very fine. We are expecting every room filled.

Money for Women!

In these hard times ladies as well as men should improve every opportunity to increase their bank accounts; and any man or woman can make from $10 to $20 a day, if they will only try. I have not made less than $20 clear, any day the past year, and I had no experience and not very good health. My husband assisted me evenings. I put notices of the Dish Washer in the papers, but do not canvass any. I have examined particularly all the Dish Washers made, and find the Climax decidedly the best. Address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, and they will tell you just how to run the business. Every family wants a Climax Dish Washer, and will buy as soon as they get a chance, as you can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes without wetting the hands.

A READER.

A Tribute in Song.

From Virginia to Georgia, A Tribute in Song by Virginia Women, is the title of a beautiful little booklet published under the auspices of the Virginia Department of Woman Workers for the United States and International Exposition at Atlanta, Ga.

This booklet contains poems by Miss M. G. McClelland, Mrs. Margaret J. Preston, Annie Steger Winston, Amelie Rives, Annie Fitzhugh Wilmer, and a number of other talented Virginia writers.

Some of the poems are bright and beautiful. They go from grave to gay, and will touch tender chords in every heart.

The net proceeds of the book are to be used in paying the expenses of an exhibit by the women of Virginia in the Woman's Building at the Atlanta Exposition.

Handsomely bound in vegetable parchment; beautiful emblematic gold stamp, and tied with silk cord, enclosed in a neat box. Price, 50 cents.

For sale by the booksellers, or may be ordered from the publishers, B. F. Johnson Publishing Company, Richmond, Va.

Notice.

Although I am in charge of the Lower Coast Mission, I am still carrying on my colportage work. I write this to correct the error into which some have fallen. I have a little money out which I would be glad to receive. My business is cash, and I do not want my brethren to think that I have changed to the credit system.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. ARRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

OPENING THE EYES OF ONE BORN BLIND.

(John ix, 1-7.)

Our vision a source of perpetual enjoyment and information. Bless the Lord for eyesight. Asylums and schools for the blind proper.

1. The question of the disciples, Who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind? not uncommon in our day.

(1) Not all afflictions are divine punitions, but are rather corrective, preventive, etc.

(2) If God afflicts the progeny because of sins of ancestors, he assuredly, substitutionally, makes good the loss in some other way. God would not unjustly punish the innocent for the guilty.

(3) If the salvation in Christ has been accepted, there can be no possible individual punishment of our sin. It would be exacting payment twice for the same debt. Christ paid it all.

(4) It is latent envy and hatred which always sees connection between the afflictions of others and their sins. Beware!

2. Christ cured the blind man miraculously. The employment of means, manifestly inadequate, teaches an important lesson.

(1) The application of clay, made of earth and spittle, did not cure. It was Christ's temporary unhinging of the laws of nature.

(2) Washing in Siloam did not give vision. But it demonstrated the man's implicit confidence in Christ. Had faith in him.

(3) Thus it is not the sermon which leads to repentance, etc., but the accompanying Holy Spirit. Praise the Spirit!

(4) Thus it is also very erroneous to say that prayer helps. No. Not prayer, but God. 'Tis prayer, however, which moves God to action.

3. Incidentally Christ sets forth an important lesson. "Work while it is day. The night cometh when no man can work."

(1) Work! So many trifle away their time. Novel-reading, gossiping, etc.

(2) So much to do. Opportunities right and left. Ignorant to instruct, unconverted to be led to Christ, hungry to be fed, etc.

(3) Have but a short time in accomplishing this important work. The night cometh. Old age and death will terminate our opportunities. Then be up and doing.

Almost anyone can make money more or less rapidly for himself; somehow that isn't exactly what the generality of humanity is searching to discover. HOME CIRCLE.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

BY MAE M. WIKRMAN.

Stealthily the black-robed angel
In the shadow hovered nigh,
And a little soul has vanished
To its home beyond the sky.
Now, the tender bud, transplanted,
Blooms in heaven's purer air,
But our tears will spring, unbidden,
O'er the little vacant chair.

In the circle round the hearthstone
There's a gap that can't be filled,
And we miss the lisping sweetness
Of the voice forever stilled.
Now the little form lies tranquil,
And the cheeks are waxen fair,
And we turn away in anguish
From the little vacant chair.

Going to College.

A college education is very important. We do not mean to say that a boy who can not go to college need despair of learning. With the start that he gets in the common school and the high school, he may go ahead and win distinction. But the advantages of college training are manifold, and we urge every man and woman to avail themselves of them if possible. And it is possible. If we have a right to speak on any subject at all, we have a right to speak on that. We were too late to get the full advantages of college training, and feel the limitation of it to this day. There is a certain drill in the rudiments of knowledge in early youth which is essential to collegiate work. This the war prevented us from having, and we entered college at last without that previous training in the school which must be the foundation of the best work. But we know that where there is a will to go to college there is a way; and we know, too, that the advantages of the college will justify the sacrifices that may be necessary to gain them. Plan to go to college next autumn. If necessary, work your way. People as good as you have had to do it. The waiters at a certain Chautauqua hotel we visited this Summer were students of a noted Methodist college—theologues, preparing for the ministry. They earned their board, and had the privilege of attending lectures. We had them serve us politely at breakfast, and two hours after saw them with pencil and note-book taking down the lecture. Boys of that ilk will make the trip. Yes, go to college if you have to foot it a hundred miles and live on roasted potatoes. Twenty years from now you will consider it about the wisest thing you ever did. And if these lines fall under the eye of a father or mother able to give their boy or girl a college course, we hope it will help them instantly to decide to do so. Better spend a thousand dollars on a boy's education, and let him start in business on five dollars, than to start him in business without the college training on five thousand dollars. Give your children an education, whatever you have to sacrifice to do it.—Dr. Steele, in Epworth Era.

Talking Slang.

This "sermonette" is especially for you, dear girls. The advice could be put in three words—Don't do it. Possibly they might come an occasion—say once in a life-time—when a good round bit of the genuine article "slang" would prove funny. But to hear vulgar words used by a gentle girl is almost invariably shocking. I remember passing two girls in the street, and hearing one of them say, "I'll bet you a quarter." It gave me a shiver. And when a group of school-girls fill their conversation—as, alas; they often do—with one slang phrase after another, the effect on an outsider is painfully disagreeable.

The habit of talking slang grows rapidly. It is like reporting a bit of scandal. Have you never noticed if you say an unkind word against a neighbor, how quickly a chance comes to say another? And with just that same appalling ease a habit of using careless coarse words increases. Weeds grow rapidly.

There is plenty of good strong English to give expression to wit, drollery, indignation or sympathy without recourse to the phrases which belong to horse-jockeys, gamblers, tipplers and vagabonds. The street arab picks up slang as he does the ends of old cigars from the gutter. Surely a well-bred girl is not on the same level in her speech and manner. Why should she use vulgar words any more than she would stain her hands?

There ought to be something akin to flowers in a fresh young girl. She need not be prudish nor priggish. No one wishes her to say "prunes and prisms" to coax her lips into the proper curves. But refined and dainty in speech as well as in dress she surely ought to be. Won't you please think about it for five minutes, and see if you do not agree with me?—Mary S. McCobb, in Harper's Young People.

"Let Us Quarrel To Morrow."

My wife is one of the sweetest little women in the world, and I am not considered peculiarly cranky, but sometimes differences would arise, beginning with the most trivial things, which, however, being duly nursed, became of monumental proportions, and often threatened the peace of the family. Of course, I was commonly the one to blame; in fact, as I look back on it now, I am sure I was always to blame, for I should have had the wisdom to give way on the non-essentials, and by a little restraint and gentle talk win my little wife over to my way of thinking. But, instead of that, I feared I should sacrifice my dignity as head of the family, by yielding. So sometimes I went to business without my good-bye kiss, and two people were miserable all day.

But my little wife had an inspiration—most women have when things come to the breaking point—and the next time our argument was drifting near the danger line, she turned aside the collision by this womanly suggestion, "Howard, dear, let's quarrel to-morrow!" This was a proposal for an armistice. What husband could refuse? "All right," I said, "we will put it off till to-morrow," and we laughed and talked of other things. But to-morrow did not come. Indeed to-morrow never comes; it's always a day ahead; and if we can only keep our quarrels till then, there will be no more heart-broken little wives at home and fewer "blue" husbands at the store or office. "Let's quarrel to-morrow!"—Selected.

The Secret of Her Power.

Dr. F. W. Robertson, in speaking of a Christian woman who was much beloved, when asked what he thought was the secret of her divine power in the home, said:

What was the secret of her heavenly power in the home? Nothing but radiant smiles, beaming good humor, the tact of divining what everyone wanted, told that she had got out of self and learned to think of others; so that at one time it showed itself in deprecating the quarrel which lowered brows and raised tones already showed to be impending, by sweet words; at another, by soothing a sobbing child; at another, by humoring and softening a father who had returned weary and ill-tempered from the irritating cares of business. None but she saw those things; none but a loving heart could see them. That was the secret of her power. The only charm she employed was the talisman of a heavenly spirit and abiding good humor.

Cheerful Old Age.

Is there anything more beautiful than a bright and cheerful old age? To see an old man as he nears the grave gradually growing irritable and peevish and fretful is a sight as sad as it is common. But there are those who seem to get brighter and happier as age and infirmities increase. "At evening time it shall be light." How we love these bright and cheerful old Christians. How delightful to bask in their sunny smiles and to receive their fatherly benedictions. May their path be as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.—Standard.

Learn to Work.

No young man can make a success in life unless he works. He can not loaf around street-corners and saloons without deteriorating. He must learn a trade or do some honest work; or, before he knows it, he will be a chronic loafer, despised by all with whom he comes in contact.

Do something, no matter how small, and do it well, and you will eventually find yourself climbing the ladder of success. There are many obstacles to overcome, but toil, grit and endurance will overcome them all. Help yourself, and God and good men will help you.—Farm and Fireside.

The following very interesting account of the way in which Lady Somerset was drawn into the temperance work is given in the press:

She had seen two children, a boy and a girl, sip wine at their father's table, and often heard the guests laugh at the precocious little ones. She had seen the boy go to a drunkard's grave when only twenty-four years of age. "But what of the girl?" she went on. "The girl was happily married, and became the mother of lovely children. The fatal seed had been sown, however. The young mother became a slave to strong drink. I prayed with her and wept with her. She asked me one day whether I would be a total abstainer if she renounced liquor forever. The proposition was a strange one, and I asked twenty-four hours for consideration. When I saw her again, she said it was too late. I felt that if I had given her promptly the answer she would have received, she might have been saved. To-day her home is shattered, but I resolved to do in future all I could for God and humanity."

It is urged as a serious objection to prohibition that it causes the loss of public revenue. But Mr. Gladstone, unrivalled as Chancellor of the British Exchequer, said once: "Give me a sober nation and I will take care of the revenue." To talk of the loss of revenue through the abolition of the drink traffic is not evidence of highest statesmanship, nor has it any redeeming quality of moral principle, for even the priests that crucified Jesus had conscience enough to declare it unlawful to put the thirty pieces of silver into the public treasury, because the price of blood. Canada does not need blood-money to enrich her treasury.—Onward (Toronto, Can.).

Need I say that a wise choice of one's profession is essential to high success? As a plant can not flourish in a temperature contrary to its nature, as an Aretic animal droops and dies in a tropical climate, so is it with mental and moral qualities; they require a suitable atmosphere for a vigorous growth. The man who would thrive in his calling must choose one which will enable him to follow the natural bent of his mind, in which nature will second effort.—Mathews.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. You may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment you are crossed and you give way to your temper, the clean feeling vanishes, and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon the heart, and you go through the rest of the day feeling like a culprit. And anyone who has experienced this feeling knows that it can not be shaken off, but must be prayed off.

What you keep by you, you may change and mend, but words once spoken can never be recalled.—Roscommon.

Intoxicating Drinks.

BY DR. DIO LEWIS.

I shall not in this place undertake to consider at length the subject of alcoholic drinks. Their prescription as medicines, by intelligent physicians, will no doubt continue until we have some substitute for it; but with me it is a settled conviction that every form of alcoholic stimulus, though it be that of the light French wines, is injurious. The most overwhelming proofs were produced before the British Parliament, that the use of even moderate quantities of alcoholic stimulus helps to freeze men in the Arctic regions, and to produce various fatal diseases in hot climates; that in a single word, they are, without qualification, bad.

Those who would investigate this subject further, I take the liberty to refer to Dr. Carpenter's remarkable prize essay, "The Physiology of Temperance and Total Abstinence." No more remarkable book has yet appeared on this subject. Dr. Carpenter leaves us not a peg on which to hang an apology for the use of alcohol. He overwhelms us with facts showing that it is an unmitigated curse to British sailors and soldiers, in all climates and under all circumstances.

Alcohol is such a deadly enemy to the body, that no ambitious trainer of a prize-fighter would think of advising it to those under his care. A good trainer will instantly dismiss from a crew a member who stays up late at night, smokes cigars, or drinks any intoxicating drink. He knows such men can not be depended on. A man with a little liquor in his blood may for a moment make a short spurt, but he has no staying power, and, worse than all, his judgment is sure to be at fault. Alcohol demoralizes the judgment in a most remarkable manner. Shakespeare put it in a correct form when he said, "it steals away the brains." Many a battle has been lost because the commander was under liquor, many an accident has happened for the same reason.

The use of alcohol when weary is a mistake; then is the time for rest, for sleep, for food. It is true it paralyzes the nerve centres, benumbs them so the weariness may not be felt, but it does not remove the cause which may be either exhaustion, or the accumulation of poisonous products of broken-down tissue in the blood which will by rest and sleep be removed. This whole subject of weariness is one of great interest and will some day be thoroughly understood. I predict the causes will be found to be those I have already named. With these views on this subject, it seems to me the duty of men and women of influence not only to cease the use of strong drinks, but do all in their power to keep the young from forming habits of drinking.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

There are few rechaufes harder to make palatable than cold roast lamb or mutton, and yet with the ever-welcome chafing-dish all things are possible and appetizing. Have your cold meat cut into attractive slices, and placed prettily on a platter. Then make a sauce by putting some butter in your chafing-dish, having ready beside you half of a red onion finely grated. When the butter is slightly brown, put in your onions, and let them fry until thoroughly cooked and browned; add flour, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. When mixed, add a pint of good beef-stock and a couple of tablespoonfuls of canned tomatoes well blended. Let the sauce simmer for about ten minutes, and then put in your meat, which will only require to be thoroughly heated in the sauce, when it will be ready to serve.—Godey's Magazine.

TOMATO BISQUE SOUP.—Tomato bisque soup is easily made in a saucepan over an alcohol lamp or a gas stove. Cook the tomatoes, whether fresh or canned, until thoroughly done; then strain through a colander. Place over the fire again, adding a lump of butter. Salt and pepper to taste; put in a pinch of soda and pour in gradually a quart of boiling milk thickened with two tablespoonfuls of arrowroot or corn-starch; stir constantly until sufficiently thick and serve.—Godey's Magazine.

In Memoriam.

Ewell L. Singletary was born in Livingston parish, La., of Methodist parents, Nov. 3, 1862, where he continued to live till he joined the Louisiana Conference. He was converted at Port Vincent under the pastorate of Rev. J. D. Jackson, of the Mississippi Conference, in 1881. He was licensed to preach the same year, and faithfully did the work of a local preacher for four years. He was admitted on trial at Baton Rouge in 1890. He served Sabine mission in 1891, Caddo in 1892, Sabine in 1893, Delhi in 1894, and Pattersonville in 1895. His health failed at the last-named work; was unable for active service, and asked for superannuated relations. He was married to Miss Susan E. Rames, of Vicksburg, to whom he was very much devoted.

Bro. Singletary was an obedient and affectionate son, a model young man, whose society was sought after by all young people. His conversion was to clear, and his call to the ministry so plain, he never hesitated for a moment; hence his consecration was entire.

He was confined at his mother's home in Port Vincent the first part of this year, unable to attend church. As his pastor, we visited him as often as our round of duty permitted, and found him cheerful and hopeful. One thing troubled him very much—the separation from his wife, caused by failing of both.

Everyone loved Bro. Singletary, and, therefore, everything was done to relieve his suffering and smooth his path to the "other world."

He died June 20, 1895, and was buried at Felder Cemetery on the evening of June 21, 1895.

The Louisiana Conference has lost a good man, and Bro. Singletary has gained a crown. God bless and console the loving mother and relatives!

W. L. HAMIL.

It is a sin to be a discourager. The ten spies who brought back the unbelieving report about the giants, and thus spread disheartenment and dismay, wrought a great crime against the people. Their discouraging words led to most calamitous consequences—the doom of death on a whole generation, and the shutting of the nation out of the promised land for forty years. Yet like wrongs are being committed continually right in our own Christian days. Discouragers are going about among men, and by their gloomy, pessimistic words are making life inconsolably harder for them. They put out the lamps of cheer and hope that shine in men's homes. They quench the very stars that burn in the sky above men's heads. They take the gladness out of hearts. They see only the dark shadows of life, never the sunshine. One is never stronger, braver, happier, for meeting them.

There should be nothing but condemnation for the discourager. He is an enemy of his fellows. He is a misanthrope. It is a sore sin against humanity to make life harder for men. Our great Teacher spoke burning words against those who put stumbling-blocks in the paths of God's little ones. This censure falls upon all who in any way lay hindrances in the paths of others.—The Sunday-School Times.

"Study to be quiet," that is, study to dismiss all bustle and worry out of your inward life. Study also to "do your own business," and do not try to do the business of other people. A great deal of "creaturely activity" is expended in trying to do other people's business. It is often very hard to "sit still" when we see our friends, according to our ideas, mismanaging matters, and making such dreadful blunders. But the divine order, as it is also the best human order as well, is for each one of us to do our own business, and to refrain from meddling with the business of anyone else.—Hannah Whitall Smith, in "Every Day Religion."

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Every faithful pastor makes his calls as frequently as his other duty will permit, and as the best interests of each parishioner, in his judgment, require, and it is very disheartening to be greeted on entering any door with the words, "What a stranger; we were beginning to think we should not see you again." How much better to say, "We are very glad to see you, for we were longing for the time when you would have an opportunity of calling." Such a welcome opens the heart's door for any gospel message the pastor may see fit to utter.—Pulpit Treasury.

THOMSON—Mrs. MARY SUSAN THOMSON (nee Edwards) departed this life July 21, 1895, at Ilessemer, Ala., aged forty-eight years eleven months and twenty-two days. She was the daughter of J. B. and M. E. Edwards, and was born in Uniontown, Ala., July 29, 1846.

Sister Thomson professed religion and united with the M. E. Church, South, at Delhi, La., in May, 1877, of which church she remained a member until taken to the church above. She was married to Bro. E. W. Thomson, Nov. 25, 1865. In 1875 Bro. Thomson and family moved to Richland parish, La., locating at Delhi.

Sister Thomson was a devotedly pious woman, ruling her family in the love and spirit of her Lord. I was frequently a guest at her home, and it was always a pleasure to be in her company.

The last two years of her life she was a sufferer, never being at any time entirely well, and consequently could not attend upon the church services as she would have liked; however, whenever she was with us the pastor felt strengthened by her presence. She was a good listener, and one of whose presence I was always glad. I well remember how she enjoyed the revival services last Fall, and how I was pleased that she could be with us. In sickness she was patient, being supported and strengthened by her faith. Her death was as her life—peaceful and calm. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn her loss. May God watch over the orphans and uphold the husband! HER PASTOR.

LANGSTON—Rev. JAMES R. LANGSTON was born in Georgia, April 19, 1816, and died "in perfect peace with God" in Claiborne parish, La., July 26, 1895. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church at about eight years of age, and continued in its communion till his death. On April 24, 1836, he was married to Miss Mary C. Robinson, with whom he lived for more than fifty years, and until "God took her." And in November, 1893, he was again married to Mrs. Ann L. Gayle, of Monroe, La., who still remains.

Bro. Langston was licensed to preach in 1845, and continued to preach the gospel as long as his physical strength would permit. He lived near the cross, and died as he had lived, and in death "his feet were firmly set on the Rock of a living faith." "He rests from his labors, and his works follow him."

Bro. Langston leaves a son and daughter, and a host of grandchildren, and his recently bereft widow, to mourn their loss; but they expect to meet him again.

He did his duty well in all the relations of life, and God has called him up higher. May we all meet him in the Celestial City!

HAND—WILLIAM ENOCH HAND, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Hand, of Quitman, Miss., was born Jan 8, 1895, and died July 17, 1895.

This sweet babe remained only a short while to brighten our home, when, lo! death's angel entered and suddenly snatched him from our midst and bore him away to the happy land where angels dwell. He left behind him a heart-broken mother, a sorrowing father and many who deeply mourn the loss of this precious little lamb.

His bright, winning ways won the love and admiration of all who knew him. His fond parents had brilliant hopes for his future; but, alas! a wiser than they saw best to take him away from this world of sorrow and strife and transplant him in that bright beyond, where grief, toil or care never enters.

Let us not think of Enoch as gone forever, but only in that beautiful city, where he is waiting with outstretched hands, beckoning us to heaven. K. G. H.

GRIFFIN—MARY CECELE, infant daughter of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Griffin, was born Dec. 13, 1894, and died Aug. 3, 1895.

"Little Mary" was the third child born to the family, and was the center of affection; being delicate made a lasting impression as a sweet angel until God took her to be with himself. A sweeter disposition never lived. How she is missed from the home!—yet how sweet to be perfectly submissive to our Father's will!

Smooth the silken, golden hair;
Close the glad blue laughing eyes;
They'll open on a scene more fair—
The radiant shore of Paradise.

Loved ones on the other side,
Meet and guide her on the way;
The pearly gates will open wide
Unto the realms of endless day.

F. W. S.

Wesson, Miss.

JONES—MATTIE ELLEN, infant daughter of Rev. L. J. and Mrs. Jennie Jones, was born Nov. 9, 1894, and died Aug. 17, 1895, aged nine months and eight days.

Mattie was a sweet child, and while her stay on earth was short, it was of sufficient length for her to entwine herself about the hearts of loved ones who weep over her absence, but sorrow not as those without hope; for He who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," hath taken her to himself.

The bereaved family of our beloved pastor and his wife have our heartfelt sympathy and prayers. Weep not, dear parents; it is yours to meet your loved ones in the sweet by-and-by. B. A. B.

What is an Emulsion?

Milk is a true Emulsion, and as milk or cream is easier to digest and assimilate than butter, so is the milk or cream of Cod-liver Oil easier to digest and assimilate than raw Oil. This is why Scott's Emulsion is much more useful and effective than the natural Oil; why it accomplishes so much in arresting waste and building up the body.

But it is much more than ordinary fat food. It has other constituents that have wonderful healing and strengthening power, and in addition we add the Hypophosphites (or Phosphorus), another most important element in overcoming decreased vitality, or loss of flesh. These are the reasons why Scott's Emulsion is benefiting to-day hundreds of thousands of consumptives and anæmic persons, as well as being a food and remedy for sickly, wasting children that is surprising both to physicians and parents.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

The Dunning Medine Music Company, Limited.

The latest competitors to enter the list for the music trade of New Orleans and the surrounding country is the "Dunning-Medine Music Company, Limited." This strong young rival of the old established music houses of this city bids fair to make its strength distinctly felt from the very first as a high-class competitor in every sense of the term. To be assured that this new company has come to stay and is thoroughly reliable in every respect, it is only necessary to inform the public that among its officers, Board of Directors, and stockholders, are such well known business men of this city, as W. B. Schmidt, of Schmidt & Ziegler; Albert Mackie, president; Pearl Wight, of Woodward, Wight & Co.; John Barclay, of John Barclay & Co.; Henry Garder, Charles Mackie; R. B. Sondder, vice-president; A. G. Medine, and F. O. Dunning, secretary and treasurer. The two last-named gentlemen have each had several years' experience as salesmen in music houses, consequently they have a thorough and practical knowledge of the music business.

See the advertisement of this splendid house on the sixth page of this issue of the ADVOCATE, and call at its handsome store, 214 and 216 Camp street, and examine its large, complete and select stock of musical instruments and sheet music when you need anything in that line.

Does economy bore you?

It ought not to, always. Take the matter of washing with Pearline, for instance. That is a pleasant economy. There's your work made light and short for you; and while you're doing it, in this easy, pleasant way, you can be thinking of the actual money that you're saving by not rubbing things to ruin, as in the old way.

That ought to be pleasant to think of, whether you're doing the work yourself, or having it done.

Millions use Pearline.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 431 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

A Chance to Make Money!

I have made $1 640 clear money in 87 days and attended to my household duties besides, and I think this is doing splendid for a woman inexperienced in business. Anyone can sell what everyone wants to buy, and every family wants a Dish Washer. I don't canvass at all; people come or send for the Washers, and every Washer that goes out sells two or three more, as they do the work to perfection. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I am going to devote my whole time to this business now, and I am sure I can clear $5 000 this year. My sister and brother have started in the business, and are doing splendid. You can get complete instructions and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and if you don't make lots of money, it's your own fault.

A Pure Baking Powder.

A baking powder that can be depended on to be free from lime and alum is a desideratum in these days of adulteration of food. So far as can be judged from the official reports, "Royal" seems to be the only one yet found by chemical analyses to be entirely without lime or the other of these substances, and absolutely pure. This, it is shown, results from the exclusive use by its manufacturers of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by them by processes which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder except the "Royal," the manufacture of which control the patents under which it is refined.

Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly analytical chemist for the U. S. Government, who made the analyses for the New York State Board of Health in their investigation of baking powders, and whose intimate knowledge of the ingredients of all those sold in this country enables him to speak authoritatively, testifies to the purity, wholesomeness and superiority of the "Royal:"

"I find the Royal Baking Powder composed of pure and wholesome ingredients, viz., cream of tartar powder, and does not contain either alum or phosphates or other injurious substance."

Prof. Love's tests, and the recent official tests by both the United States and Canadian governments, show the Royal Baking Powder to be superior to all others in strength and leavening power. It is not only the most economical to use, but makes the purest, finest-flavored and most wholesome food.

How the good traits of our loved ones become magnified in our sight after we have laid them away to rest! We almost forget that they ever had any faults. How much better it would be if we would see less of the faults and more of their good traits while they are with us.

THE TWILIGHT BELL OF THE ANGELS.

There has come to my mind a legend, a thing
I had half forgot,
And whether I read it or dreamt it, ah well, it matters not.
It is said that in heaven, at twilight, a great bell softly swings,
And man may listen and hearken to the wondrous music that rings.
If he put from his heart's inner chamber all the passion, pain and strife,
Heartache and weary longing that throb in the pulse of life—
If he thrust from his soul all hatred, all thoughts of wicked things,
He can hear in the holy twilight how the bell of the angels rings.
And I think there lies in this legend, if we open our eyes to see,
Somewhat of an inner meaning, my friend, to you and to me.
Let us look in our hearts and question, Can pure thoughts enter in
To a soul if it be already the dwelling of thoughts of sin?
So, then, let us ponder a little—let us look in our hearts and see
If the twilight bell of the angels could ring for us—you and me. —Anon.

A Visit to Wesley's Home and Other Famous Places.

MR. EDITOR: Since my return from Paris I have been boarding in London with three "redneed gentlewomen," typical English old maids; tea, black cat, and all other accompaniments peculiar to the delectable state of spinsterhood. My room is the same that Dr. Samuel Johnson occupied for many months. In these interesting quarters Miss Lillian Phelps, W. C. T. U. lecturer for the Dominion of Canada, is my companion. Together we saw London. Our first ambition was to visit the Dickens' quarters. For hours we rambled down the queer old streets made famous by the great novelist, gazing upon the antique collection of books and papers and dusty bric-a-brac in the "Old Curiosity Shop," sauntered into the home of "Sairy Gamp," the "Pickwick Club," saw called "Old Black Jack," and Bedlam's Hospital, under which is buried the body of "little Joe."

One day, in a pouring rain, we went out to the home of John Wesley, which is now the parsonage for the clergymen who fill his pulpit. In the room where Wesley died we were shown the book-case that he used, the kind minister who welcomed us opening the doors and pointing where Wesley kept his precious papers and where he wrote his great sermons. The little room adjoining was his sanctuary, where he retired to pray and meditate. In his "living-room" we saw the chair that he used, and another book-case that he owned; in the hallway is his old clock, which keeps time as excellently as ever. A few steps from Wesley's home is the old church where he preached. He designed the interior. Recently it has been somewhat renovated. The gallery is supported by seven handsome colored marble columns given by Methodists from seven different countries. I was glad to know that the M. E. Church, South, had presented one. The organ is wonderful. It is worked by steam. The key-board is in front of the pulpit. There are nine miles of pipe, arranged on either side of the gallery. The present organist is a grandson of Charles Wesley. John Fletcher's chair is in the old church. Back of the pulpit are tablets erected to the memory of Fletcher, Benson, and Adam Clarke. In the little graveyard at the rear of the church John Wesley is buried. Charles Wesley and his sister rest in the same grave at Marylebone. In front of the church is a statue of John Wesley, a life-size figure, with his famous sentence, "The world is my parish" written beneath it. Near is a monument to the memory of Susannah Wesley, whose body lies in Bunhill Fields, an ancient burial-ground beside City Road Chapel. On her tomb is inscribed, "Mother of nineteen children." In this quiet spot lies also Dr. Watts, John Bunyan, Daniel Defoe, and members of the Cromwell family.

On through the wet streets we plodded our way to St. Giles, Cripplegate, the old church in which John Milton is buried. The building is in process of repairs, and the beedle, who did not expect our presence until we had been standing for several moments before the bust of Milton, hurried up and insisted that we could not stay, as the church was not open to visitors. "We have come a long way to see Milton's burial-place, and it seems too bad to go away without a glimpse of it," we declared. 'I can't help it, Miss," returned the man "clothed in a little brief authority," "but I have my orders." "But won't you even tell us where it is?" we persisted. "Oh, yes; it is not far from the chancel, near"—mentioning some place with which we were not acquainted, being Methodists. "What do you mean by that?" I asked, referring to the unknown portion of the church he had spoken of. He looked at us in amazement, and said: "Ah, you do not belong to the Church of England, I see! I am sorry for you. Are you Wesleyans?" "Yes," we replied, "and feel so sorry for you." This was the "open sesame" to his volubility. He launched out at once into an argument against Methodism, declaring that John Wesley never left the Episcopal Church. In his excitement he walked around the church, and we followed, taking in points of interest as we went. Finally he stood over a brass plate, which was nailed to the floor near the chancel. "Ah!" he exclaimed, stepping aside hastily, "this is the grave of John Milton." His argument was never ended. We immediately beat a retreat.

The first Sabbath after our return to London we went to hear F. B. Meyer preach, but were disappointed, as he was off on a vacation. Dr. Newman Hall occupied the pulpit and delivered a spiritual sermon on, "This is the same Jesus." In his opening remarks he declared that he had been in the ministry for sixty years, and his heart was as full of enthusiasm as when he first began. It is a strange anomaly for Meyer to be the pastor of a Congregational Church, as he is a Baptist; but such is the case. He has the charge that for many years was that of Dr. Hall. We were astonished to find so many of the dissenting ministers using the forms of the Church of England in their services. Dr. Hall was in full regalia.

In the afternoon we heard a marvelous sermon from Canon Wilberforce in Westminster Abbey. The trammels of ecclesiastical garb seem to be trying to him. We were amused to see him, in the midst of his oration, draw up the sides of his white gown and put his hands in his trousers' pockets, standing in the attitude of a tradesman driving a good bargain with unusual vehemence. The ever-present manuscript is another astonishing feature among the dissenting clergy.

Last Sunday night I went to hear Hugh Price Hughes. His sermon was all cut and dried before him, and he turned over the leaves as methodically as any curate in the Church of England. Nevertheless, he seems to be a great success with the people. The theatre where he preached was packed. The English, in their conservatism, are full of inconsistencies. Some things that we do as a matter of course shocks them beyond measure, while many of their customs are startling in the extreme to Americans, who, by the way, are not easily startled. At the Sunday evening service of Hugh Price Hughes he had a full orchestra; in it four young lady violinists. I had never heard of a similar mode of worship in the United States; but if it is English, it must be right.

A Chinese Proclamation.

While the civilized world has read with anxiety and distress of the murder of missionaries and the destruction of mission property in China, there comes also an assurance of a better day. The proclamation issued by Viceroy Li Hung Chang, a translation of which appeared in American papers last week, is a remarkable document from an authoritative Chinese source. It not only commands the people to refrain from molesting the missionaries, but speaks in high praise of their character and good works. That this is an honest expression from the Viceroy all believe who are acquainted with the distinguished and venerable statesman. He is thought to be the greatest man in the East, and had his policy been followed, China would have been far in advance of its present state of development. The Emperor, it is reported, has been reading the Holy Scriptures and studying the English language. We may be assured, therefore, that the power of the government will be used to protect missionaries in their work. Some local officials, here and there, may be fanatical enough to condone, if not encourage, persecution; but the government has gone too far in its treaty relations with other countries ever to recede. The China of twenty years ago has gone forever. Here is the proclamation:

"Given by Li, by grace of the Emperor, Commissioner of Salt Revenue, expectant intendant of circuit, and prefect of the Jaing Ning (Nanking) circuit, being advanced three steps in office and having one brevet rank, having thirteen times honorable mention on official records:

"For the purpose of publicly and straightly charging the people concerning foreigners who have in whatsoever points of the interior established chapels, schools, or like places. For a long time these have been permitted by the Emperor's commands. Now, having examined the doctrine hails in every place pertaining to this prefecture, we find that there are free schools where the poor children of China may receive instruction; hospitals where Chinamen may freely receive healing; that the missionaries all are really good; not only do they not take the people's possessions, but they do not seem to desire men's praise:

"Already the prefect, with the magistrates of the provincial capital, has personally visited each hall, and has commanded the magistrates of outside districts to personally visit each outstation of the churches and talk with the missionaries. They have personally observed the hospitals, schoolhouses, etc. There is, therefore, good established with the sincere desire to save men. Although Chinamen are pleased to do good, there are none who excel these (missionaries).

"We think it right, therefore, to put forth this proclamation, plainly charging soldiers and all people. Be it known that foreigners here renting or otherwise setting up halls do so to save and to help the poor, and there is not the least underhand business. Let it not be that you invent false reports and even commit crimes and misdemeanors. If there should be shameless villains who, thinking to 'fish for wealth' (i. e., take by violence), invent or create disturbance, falsely accusing the missionaries of offenses, they will first be thoroughly examined, then strictly dealt with. They will be punished to the fullest measure, certainly not leniently. You have been informed and warned. Do not disregard this proclamation.

"Given on the twelfth of Literalary, fifth month, twenty-first year of Kuang Hu (July 4, 1895)."

The fact that an official document, sanctioned by the Emperor, should thus pronounce a eulogy on the character of Christian missionaries, is most marvelous. What hath not God wrought? We wonder if this is really the China of which Dr. Morrison knew! In presence of this imperial utterance, however distressed because of reported persecutions, the church at home had reason to gird up her faith, renew her strength, increase her offerings, and multiply her faithful workers. Now is the time to hurry other laborers to the field.

Educate Your Sons.

Parents sometimes imagine that there is no use of educating their children except for the professions; that a boy who intends to be a farmer or a mechanic or a day laborer needs no training in the colleges and universities. This sort of reasoning implies that the parent's judgment is infallible, and that his foreknowledge is absolute. None but God can tell what is before a child. There is probably no branch of knowledge which a sensible person, whatever his vocation, may not turn to some excellent purpose. The day is past when ignoramuses can expect to accomplish much in the battle of life. The popular idea is to develop everywhere educated farmers, trained workmen and skilled laborers. Every person should seek to excel in his own calling. It is well to acquire learning which is adapted to the requirements of our chosen vocation, but all kinds of culture help us more or less. It is better that a clod-hopper should know Greek than that a minister of the gospel should be untaught in the classics.—Michigan Advocate.

How Methodists Treat Baptists.

A few days later we went with Brother John F. Ragland, of this city, to see Mr. James B. Pace about a valuable lot in the West End of Richmond, which was needed for a Baptist chapel. Mr. Pace is a Methodist, but he gave us a princely reception, sold us the lot at our own figures and subscribed $375 towards the enterprise. A few days later we were in Pocomoke City with a Methodist preacher on one side and a Presbyterian on the other, both responding most generously to the call for help and encouraging their people to do the same. We believe in Baptist principles and in their estimable value, but that does not make us blind to the good that is in other people.—Religious Herald.

Rev. Heber Newton's Infidelity.

This Episcopal Higher Critic affirms that the writers of the New Testament evidently believed and distinctly taught the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. He, however, does not accept their testimony. What is the use, therefore, of his preaching at all? What is the difference between him and Ingersoll? None at all, except to the latter's advantage, for he does not claim to be a clergyman, nor profess to belong to the church, nor has he violated the most solemn vows taken at the ordination of a man to the gospel ministry. Hence the preacher is in a much worse and more hopeless condition than the profane and vulgar blasphemer.—Truth.

A general outlook upon the church at large discloses the danger of a frightful apostasy from the truth of God. In certain quarters, hitherto regarded as orthodox, there is an undisguised attempt to eliminate the supernatural from all religion. The Incarnation is openly separated from the doctrine of Atonement and Redemption: and Christ is presented, with all the embellishment of rhetoric, as the mere flower of humanity. Man is no longer to be described as "dead in trespasses and sins," but as having a germ of natural goodness, which, under sufficient culture, develops into "the power that makes for righteousness." The necessity of "the new birth" being disallowed, a future probation promised beyond the grave, and every element of saving grace removed, a religion is built up exactly suited to the taste of the sinner. It is a religion of mere sentiment, founded upon the mercy of God apart from his justice and holiness—based upon a high morality and a faithful discharge of the relative duties of life.—Rev. B. M. Palmer, D. D., in S. W. Presbyterian.

Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain), who sailed a few days ago from Vancouver, B. C., on a lecture tour around the world, said in an interview concerning the purpose of his trip: "It has been reported that I sacrificed, for the benefit of the creditors, the property of the publishing firm whose financial backer I was, and that I am now lecturing for my own benefit. This is an error. I intend the lectures, as well as the property, for the creditors. The law recognizes no mortgage on a man's brain, and a merchant, who has given up all he has, may take advantage of the laws of insolvency and start free again for himself; but I am not a business man, and honor is a harder master than the law. It can not compromise for less than a hundred cents on the dollar, and its debts never outlaw.—Central Advocate.

A Roman Catholic paper, published in San Francisco, refers to Bishop Foss as "one Bishop Foss." It speaks of Chicago Methodist ministers as "lunatics and liars." Speaking of the persecutions of missionaries in South America, it says that its only regret for their treatment is that "their imported heads proved harder than the indigenous cobble stones;" that "no self-respecting Protestant in South America would care to touch a missionary with a forty-foot pole; that these hypocritical hirelings are in the business simply for a living; that they have not been able to produce a convert from South America who could be trusted alone with the spoons; that the doings of the so-called Protestant missionaries have been a scandal and a disgrace from Tokio to Timbuctoo."—Exchange.

Mr. Andree's project of a balloon voyage to the Pole, described by him in an address before the Stockholm Academy of Sciences, has been fully approved by Baron Nordenskjold and other authorities. Mr. Andree is an engineer as well as an aeronaut of experience, and he has made practical acquaintance with the conditions of life in the polar regions. An original device for steering the balloon has been tried and found to be successful. Cables attached to the car drag upon the ground and furnish a point of resistance for the working of a sail, so that the balloon can be headed as much as 27 degrees, sometimes even 40 degrees, from the direction of the wind. The start will be made in 1896.—Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Hebrew is rapidly becoming a living language again. This is one of the singular facts of the age. In Jerusalem and throughout Palestine there is a remarkable resurrection of the language of Moses. The only papers published in Palestine are two weeklies, both in Hebrew. In 1893, a Jewish monthly was started for juvenile readers, and this also was in Hebrew. There are households where only Hebrew is spoken. Here we have a sign of the times. The Jews can not die out while they keep their old language alive. The Bible has a way of saving every language into which it is translated. It is the preaching of the gospel which is saving the Welsh language from rapid extinction.—London Commonwealth.

Andrew Carnegie says: "The country at large does not realize the boom which has started in the industrial world. Iron and steel mills all over the country have contracted their full capacity for months ahead, and many are actually unable to take additional orders. Since the bulk of their contracts were booked, there has been an advance of fifty cents in pig iron. This Fall consumers will find that they can not place orders. The country is on the threshold of the biggest revolution in business it has ever experienced, and it is not a long ways off."

It is astounding that some pastors, and the people generally, are so little interested in the circulation of a worthy denominational paper. Pastors stand sadly in their own light when they fail to encourage the members of their churches to take a good denominational paper. It is simply impossible for church people to be in the largest degree useful to their churches, to their denomination, and to the cause of Christ at large, if they do not take a religious paper. There is no investment of money which will bring larger returns for the church.

The Wells Fargo Express Company has issued a new order to its employees. This makes the superintendent, route agent, or general agent, personally responsible for any loss occurring through failure to properly exercise their authority in the matter of controlling the habits of drinking or gambling of the men they employ. The first time an employee is detected in taking a glass of liquor while on duty, he is to be cautioned at once. If he repeats the offense, he is to be discharged immediately.—Exchange.

It is said that a young scion of one of the rich families in New York conceived the idea of going to London and establishing a newspaper after his own liking. After sinking $2,000,000 he gave up the venture and came back to New York thoroughly cured of a desire to run a paper in London. With that sum of money he could have purchased a fine lot of experience in this line, even in this country. It takes something more than money to make a newspaper go, anywhere.—Central Methodist.

In the county Tyrone, Ireland, there is a district of sixty-one square miles, inhabited by nearly 10 000 people, having three great roads communicating with market towns, in which there are no saloons, entirely owing to the self-action of the inhabitants. The result has been that there is not a policeman in the district, the poor rates are one-half of what they were before, and the police magistrates testify to the great absence of crime and disorder.—The Templar.

A coming trouble is seldom as big as the shadow it casts before.

The editor of the American Baptist Flag, commenting on the author of "Letters on Baptism," by Dr. Fairfield, who was for four years a member of Dr. Ray's church, and for about twenty-five years a member of the Freewill Baptist Church, having left the former church on account of close communion, says: "Mr. Fairfield was about as near being a Baptist as an ordinary immersed Methodist is a Baptist. According to Dr. Ray, an open-communion Baptist is not a Baptist after all. This is rather hard on such men as Spurgeon, Dr. Hall, F. B. Meyer, and other Baptist lights. The American Baptist Flag is published in St. Louis, and is supposed to be a nineteenth century paper. But the date on the title page should be set back about 700 years."—St. Louis Advocate.

The late Mr. Barnum, the great showman, went upon the principle which proved in his case to be very remunerative, that people love to be humbugged. We are not prepared to say that this is the declared policy of the Roman Catholic Church, but its course borders closely upon it. A while ago we had the "holy coat" fraud which proved to be remunerative. Then came the "bone" fraud, the allegation being made that the said bone is from the arm of the Virgin Mary's mother. Crowds flocked to a Catholic Church in New York City, a sight of the "bones" being granted by the payment of an admission fee. A new "miracle" at so much a peep is now due.—Mid-Continent.

In the Living Present.

The posthumous writings of the late Spurgeon bid fair to be more voluminous than those which appeared during his lifetime. Question the wisdom of putting into print all the pickings of the lamented divine's study table. It will injure his fame.

Lilliputian dogs are indispensable to morbidly cultured women. Caterers to fashion know how to supply the demand. A newly born dog, no matter of what species, only a few hours old, is taken from its mammy and treated to an exclusively alcoholic diet. The alcohol stunts the growth without necessarily injuring the general health. Canine dwarfs are hence the product of alcohol.

The worthy editor's confession, that he did not thoroughly understand the silver question, reminds us of a recent funeral sermon by a Western preacher. Said he: "Yes, my beloved, the departed brother has gone to the land where all things are known—even, perhaps, the coinage question."

Saliva neutralizes poisonous microbes which may be contained in our food. It is dangerous to partake of any esculents not properly surcharged with saliva. That this familiar fluid contains antiseptic properties is well known. Thus, when a brute is wounded, it licks the laceration with its tongue. The saliva thus furnished heals the sore without suppuration.

The Scientific American assures that molasses pavements will soon be introduced. Some cities in California have already introduced them. Refuse molasses, almost without money value, is mixed with a certain species of sharp sand to about the consistence of asphalt. When dry it becomes hard as granite.

Cremation increases in favor, though the cremation society of New Orleans disbanded. Its property has been sold for debt. But in Paris cremation is popular. Recently a second columbarium had to be erected in Pere La Chaise. Apropos, on the fifth instant, a well-known druggist in our Crescent City shipped the corpse of his wife to St. Louis for cremation.

In men purloining is called stealing; in women, kleptomania. Chivalry calls the latter a disease. Such logic would convert all penitentiaries into hospitals. In Bon Marche, Paris, alone, during the past twelve months 662 women were arrested for kleptomania. ICH DIEN.

TO-DAY.

BY MARY BRADLEY.

We mourn too much for our dead yesterdays,
We dread too anxiously unborn to-morrows;
To-day is ours for love, for joy, for praise!
Yea, and for pain perchance, and possible sorrows;
To-day alone is ours for righteous living,
For patience, kindness, most of all, thanksgiving.

Out of the grace divine it comes to us,
A sweet, bright thing from darkling shadows creeping;
A thing with mercies multitudinous,
And loves and duties always in its keeping,
Whose opportunities, alas! are wasted,
And sweetest things too often pass untasted.

Ah, that we knew it for the thing it is!
That each immortal soot to-day possessing
Might garner all its mingled preciousness,
Its seeming evil and its real blessing;
Then truly unafraid of sin or sorrow
Might we fare forth to meet the great to-morrow. —Sunday-School Times.

Applied Common Sense.

BY JULIEN C. BROWN, D. D.

NO. IV.

After the Reformation, under Martin Luther, had become an assured fact, the strong writers and seers of the Roman hierarchy, endorsed by Popes and Jesuit prelates, made this prophetic announcement: "Protestantism will ultimately fail, because of its innumerable divisions into unimportant sects, and its lack of a federal head having church authority."* And Rome has never lost faith in that simple prediction. Having the finest, completest, and most comprehensive organization of ecclesiastical and secular forces the world has ever known, she has worked right on in the day and in the night—secret, if need be; openly, if prudent—to bring about the fulfillment of her prophecy. The multiplication of sects, the estrangements of doctrinal friends, the internal divisions of progressive denominations, occasional heretical outbursts of fanatical zeal, have all encouraged the Romanist hope, and added fuel to the flame of her self-assertion. A great joy has been hers in marking the oft mistaking of verbal minutiæ for divine essentials, the substitution of traditional exegesis for God-given directions, and the holding to allegorical interpretations as revealing the absolute "mind of the Spirit." As sects have multiplied and internal divisions increased, ever widening the gulfs between rival and warring factions throughout the Protestant world, her satisfaction and complacency have steadily augmented. The basis of her confident prediction was the far-sighted prescience which discovered that such condition could only result in disintegration and death, or a possible return to the bosom of the "Mother Church." So Rome does not much fret, believing, as she does, that the seeds of death are already sown in the Protestant body.

Shall Rome's prediction prove true? Millions of Protestants say, "No," with emphasis. No sadder sight can be contemplated, and no more terrible situation conceived, than this world again in the iron clutch of the merciless Papacy. The horror of it is beyond description. And yet millions of Protestants are moving along the exact lines which, if persisted in, may make the fulfillment an absolute reality. Without some sort of adjustment, some kind of external unity based on essential truths, some organic federation of moral and spiritual forces, and in presenting an unbroken front to the arrogant claims of her priesthood, as well as against all forms of sin, the dream of Protestant supremacy must fade as a fantasy of the night. In a divided, contentious and warring condition, can we ever reasonably hope to forever defend ourselves, much less overcome that dominant, wealthy, all-encompassing, united, systematic, intensely organized and aggressive power? To-day the Vatican day-books and ledgers, written up by more than a thousand clerks, and guarded by a legion of lynx-eyed Propagandi, with the Holy Father at their head, can tell more facts about Protestantism than Protestantism can tell of itself.

And yet, with the murky threats of Rome hanging as a cloud over our head; with her deep curses, hissed through clenched teeth, throbbing in the air about us, we forge forward to ultimate chagrin and suicidal death. On the mere suggestion that our great and wise leaders, our men of influence and power, might devise, by their combined wisdom, some external bond of union, some cosmopolitan Christian platform, some acceptable and aggressive federation of forces, we are met with the peremptory statement, "It can't be done," or that other old hackneyed and threadbare phase, "Unity in diversity," etc. What a multitude of errors that last expression has covered! Like a host of old saws and pet proverbs, it is misleading, if not sophistical. On close inspection, its bottom drops out, and the soul of it flees when common sense attempts to apply it to our present emergency. Through the longest series of years it has figured as the basis for non-action, and perhaps constitutes now the apology for indifference in presence of a coming danger. Anyone can see that the emphasis is decidedly put on the "diversity" part.

We can observe the coalitions, the international laws and agreements between various governments, the co-operative organization and work of mammoth commercial interests for self-protection and mutual benefit, the combinations of capital and formation of trusts under laws both binding and practical, and still say that while sin is a unit, and diversified national, commercial and monetary interests may thus co-operate for the attainment of a specific end, yet "children of the light" can not do that same? To affirm such discredits the brain, the heart and common sense of the Christian world. You let railway companies, vast mercantile establishments and moneyed institutions see that they are losing by a wasteful competition by a warring among themselves, and the time is short until they get together in some kind of mutual understanding. They may not exactly agree in all their methods and policies, but they do agree that energy is being lost, money is being wasted, and power is being decreased, and on that basis of fundamental fact they scheme to outwit their opponents and build the edifice of a combined future success. The plan is, a co-operative harmony which will decrease friction and augment effectiveness. The very air is alive to-day with the spirit of combined and united action. Men in all trades and callings have come to see that success lies along that line. Trades unions, labor unions, and a variety of co-operative organizations are on every side of us; and yet, where it seems most desirable, where most needed, and could be most productive of all good—viz.: among this great aggregated conglomeration of Protestant sects—the bare mention is either sneered at as an Utopian dream, or discouraged as an impossible task. Any proposition or effort looking to that end is met with a grin of disapproval from long-winded, moss-backed conservatives. They fear it involves the revision of some old, antiquated ideas, the discarding of some old fossilized faiths, or the overthrow of some old worm-eaten convictions. And so freely do they fling forth "crank," "visionary," "impracticable," etc., that one is almost afraid to say what he thinks, or write what he believes.

Without assuming an air of superior wisdom, without claiming a philosopher's judgment, or the prophet's ken, but in all humility, we submit that a thoughtful and prayerful study of the matter can result in no harm, but might eventuate in the miracle of modern Christianity. The most careless will admit that at least something should be done—that neither religion nor common sense will justify the present conditions. The time has surely arrived when the Protestant world should lift the reproach that "the children of darkness are wiser in their generation than the children of light," by applying to ecclesiastical affairs the common sense which obtains in business relations; by adjusting the machinery to make less friction, and by organizing, combining and concentrating power so that some time it may almost be literally true: a nation shall be born unto God in a day. If such does not finally come, somebody will be culpable, and the blood of souls, now perishing through ranorous strifes, and unholy competitions, will be required at the "watchman's hands."

Some movements of an initial or tentative character have been started—such, for instance, as the "League of Catholic Unity," and others; but the mighty men of valor, the tall Anaks of clerical influence, must take the matter in hand if a successful work is ever achieved. By what steps, or through what processes, it must go to full accomplishment must be left to the wisdom, discretion and judgment of our wisest and best men; those of strong common sense and practical intellect—a mighty host of whom may God speedily raise up to answer that unanswered, but wonderful, prayer of the ascended Lord: "Neither pray I for these alone; but for them also which shall believe on me through their word: that they may all be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they may also be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

The Urgent Need.

The pessimist is no friend of the church. His eye is evil; consequently, his whole body is full of darkness. He views the pathway of life as if a cyclone of wickedness had swept over it, and hideous desolation marks its flight. He is a prince of doubters. He can see no good thing coming out of the present status of things. The world's pessimists have not been the world's helpers. Spare me the association of such bilious comrades. His theme, like a one-string instrument, furnishes doleful music. That theme is, that the church is fast going to the devil.

The optimist is an over-zealous friend of the church. He sees not things in their right proportions, because he peers at them through a menial microscope. They argue it is better to magnify than to minimize. We reply, It is better to do neither, but to dig up the golden mean of truth that lies midway between.

With this preface we arrive at the urgent need of Louisiana Methodism, which is a revival of knee-work, and unconditional, unreserved faith in the sure promises of the living God. Not a spasm of religion that leaves the congregation, after a season, suffering from nervous prostration; not a sensational, flitful flare of a revival based upon empty self-assertion and anecdotes, but a revival that buries its vitalizing energies deep in the individual heart. Thorough work in the individual never fruits into deception. A revival of knee-work means that church numbers will become millions on their knees; not careless, as many do. Some pray so little in secret that they are ashamed to pray in public, and beg to be excused. The prayer-altar has been taken down and out in certain households. Some congregations have converted their prayer-meetings into veritable preach-meetings. Others argue that God has not called them to make public prayers. Perhaps they are very doubtful as to whether the Lord or the devil called them, because they are trying to serve both God and mammon; but if we understand the Scriptures, there is only one divine call recognized therein, and that is a specific call to preach the gospel; so they are without an excuse. A lazy few reason that they pay the preacher to attend to that sort of business, but they won't admit that by the preacher going to heaven in their stead would satisfy their immortal spirits. If congregations, in some localities, are shorn of their strength, it is because the flocks are feeding on the juiceless pastures of prayerlessness. The old mother church at Jerusalem throbbed with spiritual power. The Scriptures unfold the secret: "And they continued daily with one accord in the temple, breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart. Praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church as were saved." I would walk across the State to join such a church as that scriptural one. Prayerlessness is the devil's freezing mixture to souls in the church. We need a revival of quenchless, prevailing pleadings with God, in order to give us a holy passion for the salvation of the devil-imprisoned. We must have a revival of unshakable faith in "the exceeding great and precious promises of God." You need not hunt up an arrogant infidel in order to find unbelievers in God's energizing promises. They are to be had in our Sunday-schools, prayer meetings and congregations. A number of courageous spirits have planted their lives on a grand promise, and cried: "Here stand I. I can do no other; so help me God." They are the spiritual dynamos of the church, whom God uses to light up the world of sin. Some believe the whole Bible with the head, but imbed only a few scanty fragments of it in their hearts. They are the sickly failures in the church that demand so much "coddling" on the part of their perplexed pastor. The Savior commands, "Have faith in God." Are we ready to take God at his word? If so, eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Read your Bibles until it becomes read into your characters. Assimilate it as the meat and drink of your souls. Prayer impinges the illumination of the Spirit on certain dark passages. It is not how much of the Bible you have read, but what you remember, that makes the sword of the Spirit death-dealing to sin. In all your pleadings and readings of God's Word remember that over the doorway of every unopened opportunity are written in letters of gold these words of Christ, "Without me ye can do nothing."

"The State of the Church."

MR. EDITOR: My eyes have recently fallen upon a contribution from the pen of Bishop R. S. Foster, of the M. E. Church, under the above caption. According to his statements, Protestantism is a full-fledged partner of Satan. Especially is this true concerning Methodism, for he speaks principally of the state of Methodism. Here is what the Bishop says: "The church of God is to-day courting the world. Its members are trying to bring it down to the level of the ungodly. The ball, the theater, nude and lawd art, social luxuries, with all their loose moralities, are making inroads into the secret enclosure of the church; and, as a satisfaction for all this worldliness, Christians are making a great deal of Lent and Easter and Good Friday and church ornamentations. It is the old trick of Satan. The Jewish Church struck on that rock, the Romish Church was wrecked on the same, and the Protestant Church is fast reaching the same doom.

"Our great dangers, as we see them, are assimilation to the world, neglect of the poor, substitution of the form for the fact of godliness, abandonment of discipline, a hireling ministry, an impure gospel, which, summed up, is a fashionable church. That Methodists should be liable to such an outcome, and that there should be signs of it in a hundred years from the 'sail loft,' seems almost the miracle of history; but who that looks about him to-day can fail to see the fact?

"Do not Methodists, in violation of God's Word and their own discipline, dress as extravagantly and as fashionably as any other class? Do not the ladies, and often the wives and daughters of the ministry, put on 'gold and pearls and costly array?' Would not the plain dress, insisted upon by John Wesley, Bishop Asbury, and worn by Hester Ann Rogers, Lady Huntington, and many others equally distinguished, be now regarded in Methodist circles as fanaticism? Can anyone, going into the Methodist Church in any of our chief cities, distinguish the attire of the communicants from that of the theatre and ball-goers? Is not worldliness seen in the music? Elaborately dressed and ornamental choirs, who, in many cases, make no profession of religion, and are often sneering skeptics, go through a cold artistic or operatic performance, which is as much in harmony with the spiritual worship as an opera or theatre. Under such worldly performance spirituality is frozen to death.

"Formerly every Methodist attended class meeting and gave testimony of experimental religion. Now the class meeting is attended by very few, and in many churches abandoned. Seldom the stewards, trustees and leaders of the church attend class meeting. Formerly nearly every Methodist prayed, testified or exhorted in prayer meeting. Now but very few are heard. Formerly shouts and praises were heard; now such demonstrations of holy enthusiasm and joy are regarded as fanaticism.

"Worldly socials, fairs, festivals, concerts, and such like, have taken the place of the religious gatherings, revival meetings, class and prayer meetings of earlier days.

"How true that the Methodist Discipline is a dead letter! Its rules forbid the wearing of gold, or pearls, or costly array; yet no one ever thinks of disciplining its members for violating them. They forbid the reading of such books and the taking of such diversions as do not minister to godliness; yet the church itself goes to shows and frolics and festivals and fairs, which destroy the spiritual life of the young as well as the old. The extent to which this is now carried on is appalling. The spiritual death it carries in its train will only be known when the millions it has swept into hell stand before the judgment.

"The early Methodist ministers went forth to sacrifice and suffer for Christ. They sought not places of ease and affluence, but of privation and suffering. They gloried not in their big salaries, fine parsonages and refined congregations, but in the souls that had been won for Jesus. Oh, how changed! A hireling ministry will be a feeble, a timid truckling, a time-serving ministry, without faith, endurance, and holy power. Methodism formerly dealt in the great central truth; now the pulpits deal largely in generalities and in popular lectures. The glorious doctrine of entire sanctification is rarely heard and seldom witnessed in the pulpits."

To my mind this matter demands the prayerful consideration of every Methodist. Whether this is an exaggeration, or not, we know that a great deal of it is true. I pray God to so direct the truths here spoken of by the Bishop that every Methodist who may read these words may be aroused and made to inquire whither are we drifting as a church to-day.

Brethren, let us, as a church, "ask for the old paths." (See Jer. vi, 16.)

Wandering Thoughts.

Are we as careful as we should be to avoid wandering thoughts in church? A great deal of good is certainly lost by the average worshiper who suffers his mind, more or less of the time, to roam about almost from one end of the earth to the other, instead of fixing it on the topics presented in the service. The hymns, the Scripture, and the prayers, as well as the preaching, may afford much benefit if rightfully employed. But they will not unless our minds are given to the matter. How rarely are they as concentrated as they should be! How rarely do we get the utmost good available from any single service! What a steady leak is here week after week! Surely it is no wonder that our vessels are not full.—Zion's Herald.

Gleanings of General Interest from the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Convention.

The third annual convention of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society was held in Central M. E. Church, South, at Asheville, N. C., Aug. 21-27, 1895. Bishop R. K. Hargrove preached the opening sermon Wednesday night. Text—Luke x, 25: "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" The Bishop said: "If Christ were here on earth to-day, one of the all-important questions we should ask him would be the words of the text." The sermon was a most interesting one, and drew forth many words of praise. "Christ sets forth the object of all Christian enterprise in the recital of the Good Samaritan. We need a great deal more of that practical Christianity which goes about doing good."

The business session was opened Thursday morning with reading of Scriptures and prayer by Mrs. E. E. Wiley. This was the first Annual Conference that Mrs. Wiley attended, bereavement and sickness having prevented her attending the two previous sessions. This work grows with increased interest under her guidance and direction. Her talk on personal consecration as a basis of success in our labors was impressive, and we cherish it as a blessing and inspiration. Eighteen Conference societies were represented, and forty-two delegates answered to roll-call. Several more names were added during the session. The following members of the Central Committee were present: Mrs. E. E. Wiley, Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, Mrs. Geo. P. Kendrick, Mrs. M. A. Wolff, Mrs. M. K. Carter, Miss Lucinda B. Helm, Miss Belle Bennett, Miss Emily Allen. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. James Atkins, of Asheville, and the response was read by Mrs. Hinton, of North Georgia Conference. Bishop Hargrove attended each session, and added much to its success by his words of counsel and advice. As Mrs. Wiley remarked: "What would we do without our balance-wheel?" Some twelve ministers and several laymen of our church were introduced to the Conference. One of the ladies remarked, "This Conference is a woman's, and men must remain quiet until called on." This the ladies did frequently. Drs. David Morton and W. R. Lambuth were welcome visitors. Rev. H. B. Somellian, a native Cuban, and in charge of our Cuban Mission work in Tampa, Fla., addressed the Conference in behalf of his people. He is a most interesting talker, and fully consecrated to his work. Mrs. M. A. Wolff told of the sore need of work among those Cubans. Surely the heathen are not only in China and Mexico, but among us; nay, at our very doors. God has brought this work to us. Will we accept or reject it? Mountain work was introduced by Miss Belle Bennett, of Richmond, Ky. Miss Bennett is an easy, graceful speaker. She read a very comprehensive paper on the subject, showing her thorough knowledge of the mountain work in Kentucky. The remarks of this gifted and consecrated woman were delightful and interesting in every way. Several valuable papers on Cuban and mountain work, mountain schools, press work, and our course of study, were read. One on "City Mission Work in New Orleans," by Mrs. Linus Parker, was among the best. An orphanage will be established in the Holston Conference. Property valued at $5,000 has been offered to the society as a site for building an industrial school in Waynesville, N. C. Dr. Morton's talk on the loan funds was excellent. The Doctor said: "How to secure funds necessary to prosecute the work of the church is one of the greatest problems before us to-day." Of course, a collection followed; money to be appropriated to the Mutual Building Fund. Six hundred dollars cash and subscriptions was raised.

Central Church was crowded on Sabbath morning to hear the annual sermon by Dr. W. R. Lambuth. Text: "Ye are the salt of the earth." "The mission of Jesus Christ," the speaker said, "was to inaugurate the kingdom of Heaven; the mission of his followers to extend it." . . . "We find our lives by losing them. As God gave us his life, we are privileged to impart it to others." Our noble woman's work, more than any other, is building character for God and eternity in the home and in the church. At the close of the service a collection was taken for Cuban and mountain work, and about $100 was raised.

Miss Bennett addressed the Epworth League at their evening session. She spoke with the zeal and force of a true worker for Christ. Dr. Atkins preached at night on the "Human Conscience."

Monday was occupied in hearing reports from the various Conference societies. Monday evening the Asheville P. and H. M. Auxiliary tended the delegates a reception, in addition to their warm-hearted hospitality extended the many representatives to the convention.

The Conference closed on Tuesday evening with a consecration meeting. The Holy Spirit was with us in power to bless, encourage, and inspire.

Dear sisters, this one question confronts us, "Have we been faithful?" Remember that "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto me."

All papers read at the convention will be published in a convention number of "Our Homes." You will find it a very profitable investment if you send your name and address enclosing 50 cents for one year's subscription, to Miss Lucinda B. Helm, No. 1214 McGavock St., Nashville, Tenn.

The Importance of Annual Meetings.

A little woman once said to me without the slightest intention of rudeness, that she believed the different woman's societies held their annual meetings just to have a good time and to show off. I am sure no other brain could have evolved an idea at once so original and so absurd; but are there not some who have never attended one of these meetings who have a not much more intelligent conception of them? some who fail to realize the self-denial demanded of officers and delegates and to appreciate the amount of energy required to condense a year's business into two or three days? Those familiar with the workings of our woman's societies do not need to be told of the absolute necessity of these yearly assemblies. They know how essential it is to our success that we meet to review the work of a year just gone, and to plan for the one we are just entering upon. They know the value of thoughts and suggestions from the minds of consecrated women who have made a prayerful study of the work, and the good resulting from comparison and free discussion of methods.

Outside of mere business considerations, there is a religious atmosphere pervading all these meetings that quickens the spiritual pulse and gives strength and courage for better and more enduring work. Sometimes a delegate goes to an annual meeting discouraged and mortified because her local auxiliary has failed to measure up to its full duty; and, while listening to the reports of other auxiliaries, discovers the cause of the failure she deplores in her own, and goes back home with a clearer insight and a stronger determination to help lead aright. Another, perhaps, proud of a little success, is made to realize, more than ever before, the wonders of Christ's love and the greatness of his sacrifice, and in the strong light of his life sees the littleness of her own, and that she has not done half enough for him, and determines, henceforth, to keep back no part of the price.

Our delegates should go to these meetings with an earnest sense of personal responsibility, and whatever work is assigned them, they should do unto the Lord, and not unto men. For example: Much of the work of the annual meeting is done by committees, and, while no resolution or nomination can pass until submitted to the approval of the whole society, still the committees not only simplify the business of the meeting, but must bear a heavy responsibility. Hence, the woman put upon a committee should realize that it is not a complimentary appointment, but that the best and most conscientious work is expected from her, and should earnestly and prayerfully devote herself to the task assigned her.

The approaching annual meeting of our North Mississippi Conference Society promises to be an unusually important one. We will have new work to consider and much work to do. In ourselves, we are not sufficient for these things, and must put all our trust in Him who alone is able to direct us.

The religion that fancies it loves God, and yet does nothing to help a brother, and evinces no love for a brother, is not piety. It may be dogma with a worm in its head. If you love God, you will love your fellow-men. If you love God, you will seek to advance his kingdom.—W. K. Chaplin.

Go, not to conquer men by force, but to work on their hearts, make them disciples, docile pupils in the school of Christ.—Scherr.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. G. Cammack, Fannin, Miss., Aug. 30: "We have had two meetings on Fannin charge recently, viz., at Drake and Fannin. Thirty-five accessions and eleven children baptized."

Rev. J. F. Wynn, Baker, La., Sept. 2: "Have just closed a week's meeting at this place. Robert Wynn preached for us fourteen times. The Word was attended with success. Quite a number converted and twelve young persons added to the church."

Rev. W. W. Hopper, Pastor, Tyrus, Miss.: "The meeting of five days at Bethel Chapel resulted in 15 conversions and reclamations, and 10 sanctifications. Rev. D. C. Rawls, evangelist, did the preaching, and Miss Fannie Larkin led the singing. The Lord is graciously reviving his work among us."

Rev. W. G. Backus, P. C.: "We have just closed our fourth protracted meeting on Caseyville circuit. Thirteen accessions, several conversions, and the church graciously revived as a part of the results. Some of these meetings were said to have been the best held in years. Bros. D. C. Rawls and W. T. Griffin did most of the preaching, and it was good, plain, earnest and in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. We expect to round up all right on this work."

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, Grenada: "We have just closed a great meeting at New Albany. The church was wonderfully blessed and many sinners saved. Sixty-five committed themselves to join the church, mostly the Methodist. Bro. Bell was not with us but two days. He was taken ill with slow fever, and is still quite sick. Let the brethren pray for his recovery. He is one of our most efficient pastors, and is doing a fine work for God and the church in Ripley and New Albany."

Rev. R. A. Breland, P. C., Camden, Miss., Sept. 2: "For July I report as follows: Miles traveled by private conveyance, 290; on railroad, 425—total, 715. Sermons preached, 15; burials attended, 1; members received, 1. For August I report as follows: Miles traveled by private conveyance, 264; on railroad, 110—total, 374. Sermons preached, 40; prayer meetings held, 2; pastoral visits made, 16, burials condnoted, 1; children baptized, 8; adults baptized, 14; members received, 30."

Rev. P. D. Hardin, P. C., Westville, Miss., Aug. 30: "Since my last report we have had glorious revivals at Pleasant Hill and Goshen, resulting in many conversions and thirty-nine accessions to the church. Bros. G. H. Brown and M. A. Thurman rendered faithful assistance. This circuit is afire with the Holy Ghost, probably as never before. In the past five weeks I have been in four protracted meetings, which resulted in eighty-eight accessions to our church. Surely God is doing great things for our beloved Zion. To him be all the glory."

Rev. G. W. Bachman, Slate Springs, Miss., Aug. 30: "I have been here nearly one week aiding Bro. Massey in a meeting, which closed last night, with seven accessions to the church on profession and three by letter. I go today to Benela; thence to Enterprise, to spend a week with Bro. W. L. Anderson and his people. I am to be in Pittsboro the second Sunday in September, and the week following with Bro. A. J. Foster and his charge, closing the third Sunday at Chapel Hill. I hope these weeks of preaching, colportering and Sunday-school working in Calhoun county will result in much good for Christ and souls."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., Sept. 4: "We have had another good meeting at Bradley's Chapel Church. We commenced the fourth Sunday in August, and closed the first Sunday in September. The church was greatly helped, lifted from a state of lethargy into a state of activity, and we hope several sinners saved, with nine accessions to the church. We had a fine meeting. Bro. G. A. Guice, of Hermanville, did nearly all the preaching, and did it to the great delight of pastor and people. He is a good preacher and a good revivalist. He preached some very fine sermons, and the Lord owned and blessed the service. Praise the Lord!"

Rev. D. F. Turner, Homer, La., Aug. 26: "In July the Arcadia District Conference saw fit to give me license to preach God's Word, and since that time I have been trying, by the help of God, to exercise the functions of my office as a minister of the gospel. A short while since, by invitation of the pastor, Bro. Collier, of the Haynesville circuit, I preached at Flat Lick. We had a very good service Sunday morning. That evening, considering the size of the congregation, we had the most glorious outpouring of the Holy Spirit it has ever been my pleasure to witness. Sinners were brought into a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ, backsliders were reclaimed, and the Christian soldiers were filled to overflowing with the love of God. I feel now that I can say with more earnestness than I have ever said, 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow.' Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. J. R. Roy, Columbia, La., Aug. 30: "I will give a few data of the Columbia circuit. On the first of August I commenced a meeting at Olla. Preached eight days, having two services a day. My help failed to come, so I had to hold the fort myself, by the help of the Master. We had a glorious revival; had eleven additions to the church. We are also building a nice church at this point. I went from Olla to Boeuff River, where one of my local preachers, G. W. Garrett, had commenced a meeting. I preached twice a day for three days. Twenty-four were added to the church and sixteen were baptized. I then went to Master's Chapel, assisted by Rev. I. T. Reams, who did the preaching from Thursday until Friday. He preached a pure, straight gospel. The church somewhat revived, and three added to the church. Total this year by profession of faith, 39, and three by letter. Have two meetings to hold yet. All glory to God. Pray for us."

Rev. R. L. Phillips, Supply, Theadville, Miss., Aug. 26: "We held our third Quarterly Conference at State Line Church on the ninth. It was presided over by our presiding elder, Bro. Carley, who has won great favor with our people by his zeal and judgment manifested in the interest of the work. He only remained with us one day, but preached us a strong sermon on 'The Just Man.' We protracted the meeting two days, and were blessed by the presence of the Holy Spirit. The second day there was a great awakening among the sinners; 17 coming to the altar for prayer, and there was visible evidence of a change of heart in some. However, the Lord had a greater blessing in store for us. We opened a meeting at New Home on the following Sunday, and then the pentecostal wave struck us and continued to baptize us throughout the meeting. Bro. J. N. Broadway did all the preaching for the first three days, and I have never heard a man preach with greater demonstration of the Spirit. The entire membership was revived and many sought salvation. I have never attended a more happy or more glorious meeting. Bless the Lord, O my soul! May the Lord grant an outpouring of his Spirit on all the land this year! Amen!"

Rev. W. D. McCullough, P. C., Pickens, Miss., Aug. 28: "We began a revival meeting at Goodman, Miss., on the fourth Sunday in July, and closed out on Friday night following. Rev. J. R. Robertson, from Panola county, reached us on Monday night, and did most of the preaching after that. We had a flaming revival. The church was quickened, sinners convicted and many converted. Goodman is moving on grandly. With Bro. Robertson to assist, we began a meeting at Pickens the first Sunday in August, and closed after a week and a half of earnest work. This was the finest revival I ever saw. Christians of all denominations worked as I never saw Christians work. Every sinner who attended the services was convicted; 25 or 30 conversions; 17 accessions to our church, and 3 to the Baptist Church. Pickens runs up the white flag and surrenders to Christ. The oldest people here say they never saw such a revival. We have an Epworth League organized and ready to begin work. Our W. F. M. Society and Pickens' Pickers all aflame. More family altars than ever before. More and better workers in the church. Glory to God! Bro. Robertson's preaching was of a very high order. It was spiritual and clear. It was the good old gospel, red-hot. Christians rejoiced in it, sinners were convicted by it, and mourners converted by it. He is as good help as I ever had in a revival."

The Family Altar.

I was interested in reading the article of "A.," on "The Family Altar," in your paper of Aug. 29. There was so much in it to remind the man who prays with his family of the events and happenings of life. If God's people would write more about home duties and talk together about his mercies, blessings and goodness to his people, refreshings to the thoughts of men would spring up in the soul more frequently than they do. We would love each other more and be happier.

I joined the Methodist Church, as a seeker of religion, in December, 1841. My wife, who was an Episcopalian, joined with me. Next morning she handed me a Bible, saying: "You are now a member of the church. You must have family prayers, that our children may learn to love God." I took the book with great confusion, read a part of the thirty-seventh Psalm, kneeled down and tried to pray. Our hearts were comforted, a principle was established, our family altar erected, which stands to this good day. The comforts and blessings of this good deed of a good wife will not all be known in this world. I have been tempted often to let the altar fall, but when such temptations came, I have thought of my pledges and promises to my heavenly Father, the acts and influences upon my children, and the blessed woman who prompted the building of the altar. Yielding to the Spirit's guidance, the temptations have departed, and the satisfaction of having tried to do my duty in that regard remains with me, and the determination to try to live in obedience to God's holy law grows stronger day by day. I think it very probable, if it had not been for the family altar and its influences, I might have been a castaway long ago. Now I hope for salvation.

H. W. FOOTE.

Wasted Prayers.

It is an awful thing to waste a prayer. When we kneel to plead face to face with God, our words ought to be so sacredly precious that none of them should be lost. We waste our prayers when we do not want what we ask for and do not ask for what we want. We waste our prayers when we unnecessarily prolong them or when we care more for the words we speak than for the message those words bear to the heart of God. But perhaps the saddest waste of prayer is experienced by those of us who ask for what God wants us to get for ourselves. What a waste is in the petition, "O Lord, show me something to do," when all about us the world is fairly overflowing with work to be done! It has been said that there is no power in the piety of a man who is in the house praying for something to do, when he ought to be out clearing the snow off his sidewalk. What a waste is in an appeal to God to give us the purpose to do right, when we ought ourselves to form just this purpose! How deplorable is the waste when we pray, "Lead us not into temptation," and then get up and deliberately walk into temptation! Oh, the blasphemy of wasted prayers!—Christian World.

Making History.

Florida is making history on the miscegenation question. The last session of the Legislature passed a new school law which went into operation September first. One of the provisions of this law makes it a penal offense for any person to teach white persons and negroes in the same school or class. Fine and imprisonment are the penalties provided for. The law was aimed primarily at a certain school at Orange Park, where co education of the races is practiced. The superintendent of education has given notice, however, of his intention to apply it universally. There are in the State several missionary schools of the M. E. Church in which there is no attempt at general co-education, but in which the children of white members of the faculty receive instruction in the same classes with negro children. Rev. J. C. Hartzell, secretary of the Freedman's Aid Society, recently wrote to the State superintendent of education inquiring how he would construe the law as regards pupils of this class. From the superintendent's reply we quote as follows:

It is my opinion that the word "persons," in section 1, is intended to apply to teachers and pupils, as the intent of the law is to nip in the bud social equality and miscegenation, that such schools are calculated and possibly are intended to inaugurate in this part of the country. Those of us who love the Anglo-Saxon race and this great American republic are willing to do almost anything to preserve race purity and to save the South from the spectacle witnessed in Hayti, Jamaica, Mexico and wherever there are no race distinctions. We believe in the education of the negro. Our works testify to our faith, but we do not believe in the elevation of the negro at the cost of the degradation of our race. In many sections of the South the blacks are largely in the majority. You are philosopher enough to know what must be the final result of your nefarious doctrine of co-education of the races and social equality. If the negro must be educated with the whites, I sincerely pray that it will only be done north of the Ohio, where the whites outnumber them. This doctrine of social equality, especially as it is enforced upon the helpless school children, is the only animosity I bear the North.

In every other respect, I admire her institutions and her enterprise, especially her educational and religious labors and enthusiasm.

Yours respectfully,
W. N. SHEATS, State Sup't.

It is said that the authorities of these M. E. Church schools will disregard the law and that, if arrested, they will appeal to the United States Courts. Then comes the tug of war. The final decision of this question will be far-reaching in its consequences.

American Criminology.

Of all the sciences of our day, not one is worthy of more careful study than criminology. What are the causes of crime? To what extent is crime preventable? What methods are best adapted to the suppression and prevention of crime? Questions like these should engage the attention of the best intellect of the day. Statesmen, philanthropists and reformers of every description should give to these matters the most careful, painstaking thought. It is a simple, undeniable fact that crime is rapidly increasing in the United States. Sufficient evidence of this is furnished in the columns of our daily papers. Crime of every grade, but especially of the higher grades, in wholesale quantities greets us at the breakfast table every day. The published statistics of crime in this country are absolutely appalling. We are a Christian nation, and yet we almost surpass heathendom itself in deep-dyed villainy. And we are steadily going from bad to worse. A comparison of our crime record during the last five years with that of any former period of equal length will demonstrate this.

In spite of our wealth, luxury and refinement; in spite of our marvelous inventions and discoveries; in spite of our railroads, telegraphs, electric lights, improved machinery and other paraphernalia of an advanced civilization; in spite of improved educational methods and a wider diffusion of education than was ever known before in the history of the world; in spite of our many boasted reforms and our improved legislation; in spite of religious literature of every description circulated on a scale hitherto never dreamed of; in spite of our Bible Societies and other agencies which are circulating the Word of God to an extent never approximated in any former age; in spite of our Sunday-schools supplied with biblical literature incomparably superior to that of our fathers; in spite of our churches, with the multifarious evangelistic agencies which they operate with a vigor, energy and heroism that is truly marvelous—in spite of all this, crime is increasing among us at a fearful rate. Not only is there an increase in the sum total of crime, but the greatest increase is in crimes of the highest grade—murder, robbery, and the like.

One fact to be considered in this connection is that this condition is peculiar to the United States. In England there has been for some years a decrease of crime. Late statistics show that the United States has thirty murders to England's one. Why this difference? We repeat, that this is a question which should engage the attention of the wisest men among us. We do not propose in this brief article to attempt an exhaustive analysis of the causes of this anomalous state of things. A few facts, however, we will present.

It is a simple fact that crime is much more surely and speedily punished in England than here. In England justice moves with railroad speed. The criminal is brought to trial at once. No one needs to be told that all this is reversed in this country. The grounds upon which a plea for continuance can be based are so numerous that one or another is nearly always available. If a criminal has money or influential friends, he can nearly always secure a continuance; and a postponement from time to time for two or three years is almost a guarantee of acquittal. In a murder case, the sympathies of the public are very soon transferred from the victim to the murderer. We need a reform just at this point. Measures ought to be adopted which will ensure a speedy trial of persons accused of grave crimes. Another feature of American jurisprudence which needs attention is the absurd requirement of a unanimous verdict. This requirement puts it in the power of a crank, or a corruptionist, to defeat the ends of justice. It is an easy matter for a rich criminal to bribe at least one out of twelve jurymen. Without saying anything to the disparagement of other reforms, we express the opinion that the plaudits of the civilized world await the man who will bring about a reform at this point. Why not let a majority rule here as well as everywhere else?

Another prolific source of crime is found in the mighty flood of immigration that is constantly pouring in upon us from all the countries of the old world. Immigrants of the right sort are valuable to us. We should welcome with open arms the man, of whatever nationality, who comes among us to contribute to our national prosperity. But we should not tolerate the wholesale importation of criminals and paupers from all the ends of the earth. This alone accounts for a considerable part of our increase of crime, especially in our large cities.

Another matter which needs attention on the part of those who shape our criminal jurisprudence is the moral regime to which criminals are subjected. There ought to be a classification of criminals. Youthful criminals and those committed for some minor offense ought to be kept apart from those who have become hardened in crime. This only needs to be stated in order to be accepted by all intelligent, right-thinking people. And yet, how often is it the case, that mere boys and men who are incarcerated for some comparatively trival offense are forced into constant association with the most hardened criminals. As a result of this method of procedure, these classes go out into the world after a short term of imprisonment far more depraved than before, and ready for a career of crime hitherto undreamed of.

Then, too, the preaching of the Word, the Sunday-school, religious literature and all the agencies of Christianity should be brought to bear upon the inmates of all our penal and reformatory institutions. Away with the idea, "Once a criminal always a criminal." This is contrary to the teachings of the Word of God. The door of hope should never be closed against any human being. We have not space to dwell upon this further at this time; but there is just here food for thought upon the part of the churches as well as law makers and reformers.

Systematic, organized effort should be made to furnish employment to ex-prisoners. In these times men of unblemished reputation often find it difficult to obtain employment. How much more so must it be for that class usually spoken of as "jail birds," etc.? Many of this class feel that they are confronted with the alternative, "steal, or starve." Thus they continue in a career of crime, when, if employment were afforded them, they might soon become good citizens.

After all, however, the great cure and preventive of crime is the gospel of Christ. An increase of crime marches pari passu with an increase of infidelity. The great need, therefore, is that the masses of humanity be brought under the influence of the regenerating grace of God. City evangelism is the one great need of our times. Our agencies for reaching the unsaved masses in our great centres of population need to be multiplied a thousand-fold.

Chicago has twenty-six daily papers; New York, forty-nine; and London, twenty-five. London has more than twice the population of New York, yet only about half as many papers.

Protestantism in New York.

Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., began a few days since a series of sermons on "The Failure of Protestantism in New York City, and Its Causes." In his first sermon he presented "The Facts of the Failure." Some of the statements made in this first sermon we here epitomize:

New York City is the metropolis of the nation—is, in addition to this, the ground of Protestantism. New York is, without exception, the most godless city on the American continent. In 1840 there was one church for every 2000 inhabitants. To-day it has one church for every 4500 of its inhabitants. There are vast districts in this city in which there are 50,000 people and no church. New York City has 500,000 human beings who, as far as regards Christian knowledge, are heathen, and heathen not in name and form, but in heart and spirit. The number of men who attend church is not equal to one-half of those who register daily at the hotels in our city.

In the Methodist Church, which is the most aggressive church of our time, there was a membership in New York last year of 17,309, divided among 86 churches. The members subscribed last year $550,000, and there was $4,100,000 invested money besides. All this capital resulted in a gain of 241 members during the year. In the Baptist Church the average gain is 216 members a year, with a membership of 18,000, an income of $500,000 and an invested capital of $4,000,000. The same state of affairs prevails in the Presbyterian Church, notwithstanding its immense wealth and power. The men have destroyed the churches of New York. There are 1000 secret orders in New York, and they have not a single woman member, and 300 churches, the membership of which is three-fourths women.

Dixon is no doubt a sensationalist; but he is here dealing with facts. If his statements are untrue, it will be easy to disprove them. If they are true, we are confronted with a state of things in our great metropolis that is truly appalling. Just think of it; our greatest city has less than half as many churches to-day as she had fifty-five years ago. That means not only no progress, but direful retrogression. Think of eighty-six Methodist Churches in a great urban centre, with vast pecuniary resources at their command, and with pulpits filled by men of learning, ability and eloquence, reporting an average annual gain of less than three members each; while the Baptists make a still worse showing, and the Presbyterians no better. If these statements are true, then, there is something wrong somewhere. Perhaps, Spurgeon's remark about American Methodism is true of New York at least, viz., that "it's becoming entirely too respectable." Perhaps too much wealth and fashion in the pews have caused New York Methodism to lose its hold upon the masses. We give this only as a perhaps. We do not know what the real cause is. If this is the cause, then the followers of Wesley need to regain the spirit and imitate the example of their great leader. Evidently there is ample room for the Salvation Army in America as well as in the old world.

The Curse of God.

The substance of the following was published in the secular papers a short time since. Having had too much experience to copy a story so sensational from such a source, we took no notice of it at the time. Seeing it, however, in last week's Wesleyan Advocate, we regard the story as authentic:

Rev. J. T. Lowe, of the North Georgia Conference, has been conducting a meeting of much interest at High Shoals. In the congregation, from time to time, could be seen an old gentleman whose name is William Haygood. He moved into the neighborhood not long since from Princeton Factory. He professed infidelity, and it was his custom, after each service, to gather a little company around him and object to the doctrine preached. He laughed at the idea of immortality, of heaven and hell. During one of these conversations the crowd was awed to silence when the old man stopped short in his talk, looked wild—and could speak no more. His tongue was paralyzed! He was at service the next day greatly distressed. At the close of the service he wrote on a piece of paper these awful words: "I am doomed to hell! There is a hell—pray for me." He still attends the meetings. Is penitent, but unable to speak.

P. S.—Since writing the above, we see by a press dispatch, dated August 28, that William Hogue Wood (or Haygood) has regained his speech. He was stricken on Sunday. All day Monday and Tuesday he prayed for forgiveness. Last night he arose from his seat and began to talk. He declared that he had been forgiven for his great sin, and his speech returned immediately after his conversion. A profound impression was made on the people of High Shoals.—Wesleyan Advocate.

That is the right kind of apostolic succession.

We gave notice more than a year ago of an effort on the part of the Methodist Preachers' Association of Chicago to induce His Holiness, the Pope of Rome, to use his mighty influence with the governments of Peru, Bolivia, and Ecuador to cause them to grant to the Protestants of those countries the same religious liberty that is extended to Catholics in the United States. It is stated that His Highness has condescended to take notice of the petition and to grant the request. The thanks of the Protestant world are due to the Chicago Methodist Preachers' Association. It may not be safe to say that there will be no more persecution of Protestants in South America; but it is certain that there will be very little of it, whenever the Holy Roman Church desires to put a stop to it.

Just now when, on account of recent disturbances in China, newspapers of a certain sort are indulging freely in decrying foreign missions, the following words from Danby, who spent ten years in China as a United States minister, are worthy of careful consideration. They form part of an official report to Secretary Gresham.

I think no one can controvert the fact that the Chinese are enormously benefited by the labors of missionaries in their midst. Foreign hospitals are a great boon to the sick. . . . In the matter of education the movement is immense. There are schools and colleges all over China taught by missionaries. . . . The education of a Chinaman who speaks English becomes a new man. . . . Missionaries are the pioneers of trade and commerce. . . . In the interests, therefore, of civilization, missionaries should not only to be tolerated, but ought to receive protection, to which they are entitled from officials, and encouragement from other classes of people.

Are We a Christian Nation?

Glancing over a statistical table in this week's ADVOCATE, it appears that there are in these United States of America 20,618,307 people who worship God. And we have in the States at least 65,000,000 people. Where are the 44,381,693 citizens of this great republic? What a mass of unchristianized heathen! If these figures are reliable, and they are the best at hand it seems, what a tremendous work the various churches have just at their doors!

In this 20,618,307 are included Jews, Mormons, Unitarians and Universalists. So it seems that over two-thirds of the people of America are either atheists or heathens. No need, then, to point to social vices, political corruption, or shameful crimes to answer the question; here are the figures. Let us then either have a revision of these statistics or cease claiming to be a Christian nation. There is a fearful mistake somewhere.

Bishop Granbery on Sanctification.

I desire to say through your columns what others have said elsewhere in regard to Bishop Granbery's masterful paper on the doctrine of sanctification, published two weeks ago in the Nashville.

The paper is decidedly strong in the support of this very scriptural doctrine, and clearly eliminates the "second-blessing" theory, which certainly minifies the work of regeneration. This paper—of the Bishop—will not settle the question, however, for, as I read it, it leaves the main issue untouched, viz.: whether sanctification is obtained by faith, as regeneration, or by "faith" and "good works," as the maturing of Christian experience. I hope "the Muse" will publish the paper in pamphlet form, and it may have an immense circulation.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

HEALING OF THE TEN LEPERS.

(Luke xvii, 11-19.)

1. The Master is met by ten lepers. They were handed together. Illustrating the adage: "Misery loves company."

(1) When David, a fugitive, was hiding from his adversary, Saul, Orethi and Plethi—outcasts—associated themselves with him.

(2) So the lepers who first discovered the flight of the Syrians from the walls of famishing Samaria. They were handed together.

2. The lepers, standing afar off, so as not to endanger the disciples, cried, "Jesus, Master, have mercy upon us!"

(1) Certainly prayer may be unexpressed.

"The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles through the breast."

(2) But, as a rule, a fire will not long be hidden, but break out in conflagration. In the turmoil of the heart, the mouth can not remain silent. Even Hannah, in silent prayer, moved her lips, expressing tacitly her petitions.

(3) Prayer, loudly expressed, is necessary on account of ourselves, not on account of God. Hearing ourselves expressing a desire intensifies that desire, secures individual attention, collection—yea, absorption.

(4) Even Jesus, in prayer, cried with a loud voice. Loudly the Publican prayed, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner!"

3. The Master's strange method in healing these ten lepers. Simply sent them to the priests for inspection.

(1) It was a test of their faith. Going was proof of implicit confidence in Christ.

(2) Doubt would have cavilled. Would have said, "Nay, Lord, having leprosy, the priests will not receive us."

(3) Oh, for such faith! Lord, increase our faith!

4. Only one of the ten cleansed returned and gratefully acknowledged the Master's kindness. Humiliating proportion.

(1) Of the vast number of Christians, does about one in ten lead a truly Christian life? How about yourself?

(2) There never was an age when an appeal to the backsliders was more necessary than now. Where are the nine?

Louisiana Epworth League Conference.

Where to be held? In Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans.

When will it take place? Soon; very soon. Oct. 3-6.

What about entertainment? Will there be room enough for all? Enough, and to spare. It will be furnished gratis to all delegates, lay or clerical.

Railroad fare, we understand, will be furnished at the usual reduced two-thirds rate.

We expect at least two hundred delegates. Has every church a League? If not, proceed immediately in effecting such organization. Elect delegates forthwith. Delegates may be male or female, lay or clerical.

Will you attend? We are assured that the Lord will be there. The programme is elaborate, promising glorious results. Come.

A Fortune Lost.

It was not at Monte Carlo or Baden-Baden, but at home, in her own house, when her system broke down under the strain of Uterine trouble, that her fortune and good health were lost. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC restored it rapidly by its wonderful influence and tonic power.

Palmer Camp Meeting.

By invitation of the pastor and officers of the church, I will, God willing, lead the Palmer Camp Meeting, beginning Oct. 4. I leave to-morrow for Greenfield, Tenn., for a week's meeting; then to Memphis. I ask an interest in the prayers of all who love God's work.

The Holman Bible for $165.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Sept., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Sept., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

The man who can make money for the other man is the man the other man is looking for. Almost anyone can make money more or less rapidly for himself; somehow that isn't exactly what the generality of humanity is searching to discover. It is the man that helps you get rich that has a clutch on your affections, and King is the man, for his goods are the best to be had, and at prices that puts money in your pocket.

it for granted that you want to get the best results in painting, you will have to use Pure White Lead to obtain them. There are many mixtures branded "White Lead," "Pure White Lead," etc., which contain little, if any, White Lead, but are principally barytes, which is of little value, if not worthless. To be sure, accept only a genuine brand (see list).

If you want any shade of color, tint the White Lead with National Lead Co.'s tinting colors, prepared expressly for this purpose. A feature of these colors is the ease with which they are used and the exactness with which the desired shade is obtained. For particulars send for pamphlet, free.

LITTLE THINGS.

A good-bye kiss is a little thing,
With your hand on the door to go,
But it takes the venom out of the sting
Of a thoughtless word or a cruel fling
That you made an hour ago.

A kiss of greeting is sweet and rare
After the toil of the day,
And it smooths the furrows plowed by care,
The lines on the forehead you once called fair
In the years that have flown away.

'Tis a little thing to say, "You are kind;
I love you, my dear," each night,
But it sends a thrill through the heart, I find—
For love is tender, as love is blind—
As we climb life's rugged height.

We starve each other for love's caress,
We take, but we do not give;
It seems so easy some soul to bless,
But we dole the love grudgingly, less and less,
Till 'tis bitter and hard to live.

Trash.

Next to the bad books are the idle books, which beget idle people. These modern paper-bound press expectorations are a bane to society. This spawn of an idle devil is immense in proportions. Our American postmaster general reported to the last Congress that, under the guise of "second-class matter," which passes through the mails at cheaper rates, these books defrauded the government out of about seventeen millions of dollars of postage in one year. You may conjecture its market value. The idle trash of the presses is appalling in extent. At times it seems to me that I should prefer insane activity to insanity. Next to outbreaking sin is uselessness in this needy world. The mind of some men is like the home of the unclean spirit, which was swept and garnished in his absence, and made all the more hospitable for the seven other spirits more wicked than himself. Very naturally that man's last state became worse than the first. In England, last year, 575,900,000 of such idle-book packages passed through the mails. The postmaster of the United States shows that our state is none the better, while France, the home of the worse than useless novel of the baser sort, has its own suggestive history.—Northwestern Advocate.

Something Worth Knowing.

Prof. William Jones, of Harvard, in his text-book on psychology, says: "Could the young but realize how soon they will become mere walking bundles of habits, they would give more heed to their conduct while in the plastic state. Every smallest stroke of virtue or of vice leaves its scar. The drunken Rip Van Winkle in Jefferson's play excuses himself for every fresh dereliction by saying: 'I won't count this time.' Well, he may not count it, and a kind heaven may not count it, but it is being counted none the less. Down among the nerve-cells and fibers the molecules are counting it, registering and storing it up, to be used against him when the next temptation comes. Nothing we ever do is, in strict scientific literalness, wiped out. Of course, this has its good side as well as its bad one. As we become permanent drunkards by so many separate drinks, so we become saints in the moral, and authorities and experts in the practical and scientific, spheres by so many separate acts and hours of work."

Take the Children to Church.

"But do they not have the Sunday-school?" Yes; and a well equipped and Christ-presenting Sunday-school is the right arm of a church. But a right arm is not a main body, and an arm dissevered from the body is a bloodless and impotent thing. All honor to the zealous, devoted Sunday-school teacher! He, or she, is often an actual pastor or shepherd to guide to Jesus those who have no spiritual guidance at home. But the Sunday-school never was ordained to be, and never can be, a substitute for the regular services of the sanctuary. Bring your children with you to church, dear friends. It is their nestling-place, as well as yours. Are you quite certain as to what your young swallows and sparrows may be about while you are sitting in your pews? How do they spend the Lord's day at home? If you commit the sin of beginning the day with your Sunday newspaper, you may be quite sure that the boys and girls will be deep in the police reports, and fashion, and gossip, and wretched scandals of those Sabbath breakers, while you are listening to the sermon. Then keep the secular desecrators of holy time out of doors, and take your "bairns" with you to the place where their young hearts may be led heavenward. Expect their early conversion to Christ.—Rev. Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Don't.

We spend a large part of our lives at the table, and the world at large would be vastly improved by observing the following hints regarding table manners:

Don't bring your troubles to the table, to allow yourself to think or speak of domestic cares during meal time. Half of the nostrums for the cure of dyspepsia, headache, and neuralgia would disappear from the market if this rule should be followed. Silence and surliness on the one hand, querulous fault-finding and snarling on the other, are bad aid to digestion, and convert a feast into a fruitful breeder of disease. Those who have read "Southey's Table Talk" and other works of the kind may realize how greatly and agreeable intellectual conversation can be made to conduce to physical benefit; and how a ready reply or happy repartee man convert a meal into "a feast of reason" as well as a moral agency for permanent mental and physical improvement. Try it. There is nothing like acquiring a habit in such matters. If you do not find a rich return in improved spirits, appetite, and general bodily and mental comfort, the whole science and theory of hygiene is a delusion. Mr. Pecksniff's belief that in setting his wonderful digestive machinery in motion he was a benefactor of society, was not a very bad idea after all.

The Value of Small Things.

One day a visitor to the school found Sydney Smith during play hours absorbed in the study of Virgil, gave the lad a shilling, and with it a few kind words of sympathy and praise. "Clever boy, clever boy," exclaimed the stranger, "that is the way to conquer the world." Such unlooked-for encouragement broke like a gleam of sunshine across the dreary and troubled life of the neglected boy, and roused within a capable heart the laudable ambition for distinction. Sydney Smith never forgot that man, and to the end of his life praised his deed. The stranger went his way little dreaming of the good his pleasant words had accomplished, while the lad he had cheered soon afterward rose to the prond position of prefect of the school.

"The little ills of life," say Thackeray, "are the hardest to bear. What would the possession of a hundred thousand a year, or fame or applause, avail to a gentleman who was allowed to enjoy them only with the condition of wearing a shoe with a couple of nails inside it? All happiness would disappear and plunge into that shoe. All life would wrankle around those nails."

Boyhood of Webster.

As a boy Webster showed signs of the greatness he attained in later years. He learned to read from the Bible and psalm books. His memory was prodigious. He committed everything he laid his hands on. He had a discussion with his brother Ezekiel about a piece of poetry he learned from an almanac. He got up in the night to verify his quotation, and nearly burned the house down. He gave the first quarter he earned to a peddler, and obtained a handkerchief on which was printed the United States Constitution. He committed the code to memory, lying flat on the hearth at night and studying by the light of the fire. He had a great thirst for knowledge. His destination was determined while he was turning hay by the side of his father in the "south hay field." A man rode up and held a conversation with Mr. Webster. When he left the father said: "Dan, that man beat me by a few votes because he had an education. Had I learning, I should now be in his place as a member of Congress. Your mother and I have decided to send you to college. You must then work your own way into Congress."—Exchange.

A Word to the Boys.

If you have anything to do, do it at once. Don't sit down in the rocking chair and lose three-quarters of an hour in dreading the job. Be sure that it will seem ten times harder than it did at first. Keep this motto: Be on time, in small things as well as great. Habit is everything. The boy who is behind-time at breakfast and school will be sure to get "left" in the important things of life. If you have a chronic habit of dreading and putting off things, make a great effort to cure yourself. Brace up! Make up your mind that you will have some backbone. Don't be a limp, jelly-fish kind of person. Depend upon it, that life is very much as you make it. The first thing to decide is, what are you going to make it. The next thing is to take off your coat and go to work. Make yourself necessary somewhere. There are thousands of boys and young men in the world who wouldn't be missed if they were to drop out of it to-morrow. Don't be one of this sort. Be a power in your own little world, and then, depend upon it, the big world will hear from you.—Standard.

The first and fundamental thing that the home has to do for the child in the way of education is, then, to help make of him a little moral vertebrate, writes the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in a vigorous article on "The Training of a Child," in the August Ladies' Home Journal. "This lesson of law and obedience, then, is one that needs to combine with love in the very first instruction given to the child. When a boy hears his father say, 'My son, do this,' the impression made upon him needs to be like that made upon the old Hebrews by a 'Thus saith the Lord.' His father is the only almighty, practically, that the boy has during the first years of his life. Obedience is worth more than geography: To learn to obey is the hardest, even as it is the most valuable, lesson a child can ever acquire. It is not only valuable for what it is in itself; it is also valuable for what it serves as the basis of. One of the first things told us of Jesus has to do with this same matter. It is related to us that he was subject to his parents; and the narrative immediately goes on to remark that he grew in wisdom and in favor with God and men. The close juxtaposition of the two seems calculated to teach that obedience was the seed kernel out of which his intelligence and holiness waxed."

The most cultivated minds are usually the most patient, most clear, most rationally progressive, most studious of accuracy in details, because not impatiently shut up within them, as absolutely limiting the view, but quietly contemplating them from without in their relation to the whole. * * * This adaptation to the humblest wants is the peculiar triumph of the highest spirit of knowledge.—James Martineau.

There was no use in saying that it was dirty wives and low-ceilinged houses that made people drunkards, because it was drunkenness that made dirty wives and low houses. It was the dirty pig that made the dirty pig-sty. Let them put a pig into a parlor. It was a pig still. The parlor would not reform the pig; but the pig would very soon transform the parlor into a pig-sty.—James Guthrie.

Early Rising and Longevity.

Most persons who have lived to be old have been good sleepers, but this does not mean that they have been long sleepers. A good sleeper is one who sleeps well. He may sleep quite enough in six or seven hours to answer all his needs and it would be folly for him to lie in bed three or four hours more. As a rule, long-lived persons have been early risers because they have been good sleepers. By "good sleep" is meant sleep that is sweet and sound, without dreaming, refreshing; the body recuperates wholly. Those who love to rise early generally are of this sort. They have strong wills and good health to begin with. Late risers are often invalids or persons of bad habits, idlers who are never free from other vices besides idleness. The nervous exhaustion which keeps a man wakeful throughout the small hours requires sleep late in the morning. This exhaustion is invariably due to one of several life-shortening influences, especially anxiety or indiscretion in diet or drink. Early rising is thus rather one effect of certain favorable influences, another result of which is longevity, than a cause of longevity. To turn a weakly man out of bed every morning will not prolong his life unless he has slept enough. Preventing a weakly person from sleeping more than four or five hours nightly would not cause him to live to be old, but would tend to shorten his life. Early rising does not mean the time by the clock. The word "has a relative significance with reference to the time of going to bed. A person who retires to rest four hours after midnight and gets up at 10 A. M. may be strictly regarded as an 'early riser.'" Thus early rising is synonymous with short sleeping, which means rapid recovery from fatigue, itself a sign of bodily strength. Early rising as a practice may be cultivated by all persons in good health. It is excellent as moral discipline, and eminently healthy as a matter of fact. Most persons will eat three meals daily. When a man gets up late those meals will probably follow each other at too short intervals and eaten too rapidly to be wholesome. When he is an early riser it will probably be otherwise. He can enjoy a good breakfast, and when his other meals are due he will be ready for them, and with a good appetite, which is itself one of the signs of health.—Journal of Hygiene.

Serious Facts.

General Grant died too young with cancer. Cause—tobacco.

Senator Hill, of Georgia, went to a premature grave after terrible suffering from cancer of the tongue. Cause—tobacco.

The life of Thomas Dunn English, eminent poet and physician, was barely saved by a torturing operation in removing a cancer. Cause—tobacco.

Lieutenant Greely says of those who went with him to the North Pole, of the seventeen of his men who died, all were smokers but one, and he died last. Of the seven survivors none were smokers.

The tobacco habit threatens to exclude men from some important industries. A woman holds the position of inspector of colored glass in New York, her sense of color being more perfect than any of her male competitors.

The tobacco habit is injurious to health, it is an expensive habit, and it is a bad example; therefore, it ought to be shunned.—Selected.

THE CUISINE.

Conducted by L. A. B.

Caramel Filling.—Put one cup of granulated sugar and one-quarter of a cup of water in a sance pan over the fire; stir until the sugar is dissolved, but not after the water has begun to boil. Cook until the sugar browns to a very light caramel. Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff, dry froth and add the caramel, pouring on the egg in a thin stream, beating all the while, in the same way that boiled icing or filling is made. Beat until cold; add one teaspoonful of vanilla and spread between the cakes.—Table Talk.

OBITUARIES.

TUCKER—Mrs. LUCY J. HUSTON, wife of W. F. Tucker, was born in Louisville, Ky., June 15 1850. Upon professing faith in Christ at the age of twenty, she became a member of the Christian Church, in which her mother had been for eight years a consistent and devoted christian. After her marriage to Mr. Tucker which was solemnized in the city of Louisville, Oct. 15, 1879, she united with the Methodist Church, to which her husband belonged by both choice and inheritance. The godly wisdom of this change was apparent in the sweet harmony of family life, and in Mrs. Tucker's success in rearing her stepchildren in the fear of the Lord. One of these, Mrs. Gertrude Evens, has preceded her to the Father's house of many mansions.

From Louisville, Mr. Tucker removed to Tampa, Fla. In 1887 he came to Mobile, Ala., and, with his wife and now sainted daughter, joined St. Francis Street Church. There they lived a useful and devout life, and were held in high esteem and Christian love. Early in the present year Mr. and Mrs. Tucker came to New Orleans, and here they worshiped at Dryades Street Church.

Mrs. Tucker's prospect of usefulness as a worker for the Master was cut short by the summons to enter into her rest. She died in New Orleans, Aug. 10, 1895, after a long and painful sickness, and the sorrowing husband followed her body to burial at Louisville, Ky.

Rarely has it been my privilege to see a sufferer more perfectly resigned to the will of God. Rapidly the process of perfection through suffering went on before the eyes of those who watched over her. She was neither nervous nor impatient. Death was robbed of his sting through the cleansing blood of Jesus. More than a week before her death Mrs. Tucker realized what her friends were slow to admit: that the time of her departing was at hand. She had not to make peace with God; joy and peace had long been her constant experience. She was willing to live for service, but desired to depart and be with Christ. Her assurance was perfect and her testimony uninterrupted. No cloud ever crossed her sky to hide her Savior from her eyes. She died well. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Precious in memory, and a strengthener to the faith of those who witnessed her death.

FITZGERALD SALE PARKER.

New Orleans, Sept. 3, 1895.

McLAURIN—Mrs. ELIZABETH A. McLAURIN, mother of Rev. J. W. McLaurin, of the Mississippi Conference, calmly passed from her earthly to her heavenly home on Aug. 20, 1895, near DeKalb, Miss., aged eighty years and two days.

She had been feeble and infirm for several years, frequently unable to attend the religious services of her church; but whenever she could—and sometimes against the advice of her friends—she would, at some risk, take her accustomed place at church. Like the Psalmist, she was glad when they said, "Let us go into the house of the Lord."

The writer, in a ministry of a quarter of a century, served as her pastor eight years; four years at one time, then an interval of eight years, and he again served four years in the same relation. During these years he was often and gladly entertained at her home. She knew how to make her pastor feel at ease.

Her son, Rev. J. W. McLaurin, writes me that for several years "she had been packed up and ready to go. She often spoke of death as calmly as she would speak of going on a journey."

From the same source I learn that she was born in Maury county, Tenn., June 18, 1815, and that her maiden name was Elizabeth Amelia Madison, and that she was converted and joined the Methodist Church in 1826, when she was eleven years old.

She married Duncan Campbell McLaurin in March, 1832. Her husband died eight or ten years before her decease, and in all the afflictions and troubles through which she was called to pass, she was not heard to murmur.

Bro. McLaurin writes me that she had made it a subject of prayer that she might die without suffering excruciating pain. The Lord graciously heard her prayer. She died without a struggle, as peacefully as an infant falls to sleep in its mother's arms.

D. G. W. ELLIS.

PATTERSON—Mrs. MITTIE PEARL PATTERSON, a daughter of Rev. J. M. and M. A. Franklin, was born March 17, 1872. She was married to George H. Patterson, Sept. 20, 1893, with whom she lived happily until July 30, 1895, when she departed this life. She leaves an infant. (Poor angel; it is so fixed by the angel of death that you shall never know a true mother's love; but one day you may know that God is both your mother and father.) She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, when about ten years of age. While all loved and admired, yet she was not always true to her religion. She was confined to her bed about eleven months before she died. Just about one month before she passed over the river she sent for me to come and pray for her recovery. I asked her if her soul was well. She said, "No." Then I insisted that we should pray for the health of her soul. She became penitent. We prayed, and God made her happy by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit; so when she came down to death, just before she passed over on the golden shore, I asked her if she was willing and ready to go, and her answer was, "I am."

Dear husband and parents, here is hope. Cling to it by faith in Christ, and let this be your submission, "Where he leads me I will follow," and all will be well.

Her pastor, T. W. BOYNTON.

STEELE—JAMES BURRIS STEELE was born in Copiah County, Miss., Oct. 18, 1858, and died May 18, 1895. He was the son of Capt. Archis and M. J. Steele; a nephew of the sainted Elijah Steele, of precious memory.

James Burris was converted at Providence Camp Meeting, near Rock Port, on Pearl river, and was ever afterwards a consistent member of the Methodist Church. His mother was left a widow, with a large place to manage, while he was young, and he took his father's place in the management of the place. He was so devoted to his mother and sisters. He never married, but to help bring up the younger children was his loving purpose. He knew, from the nature of his disease, he had to die, and was ready, but that he wanted to live to do good; otherwise nothing in his way—a noble Christian young man.

A Decade of Mission Life.

I wish to commend most heartily to every lover of mission work (and especially to every member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference) "A Decade of Mission Life," by Miss Nannie E. Holding. God's precious promises to his children have been so faithfully pondered in the hearts of our heroes of the "Border Mission," and the fulfillment of them brought so vividly to our minds by the author, that we praise God "the desert place has blossomed like a rose." It will prove an inspiration to every reader. It will comfort, cheer, and increase their faith. Truly, it is a "beautiful sacred volume, upon whose every page is seen the unfolding of a divinely laid plan." It is beautifully illustrated with views of our schools and pictures of Miss Holding and her collaborators, with characteristics of each that render it an invaluable history of missions in Mexican homes. It is appropriately dedicated to the Woman's Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and the proceeds, after expenses are met, will go to their treasury. Send at once to the Nashville Publishing House for a copy. Price, $1 75

How a Woman Paid Her Debts!

I am out of debt, and thanks to the Dish Washer business for it. In the past five weeks I have made over $500, and I am so thankful that I feel like telling everybody, so that they can be benefited by my experience. Anybody can sell Dish Washers, because everybody wants one, especially when it can be got so cheap. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I believe that in two years from now every family will have one. You can get full particulars and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and you can't help but make money in this business. I believe that I can clear over $3,000 the coming year, and I am not going to let such an opportunity pass without improvement. We can't expect to succeed without trying.

MRS. B.

Rev. N. B. Norwood.

The third Quarterly Conference of the Lower Coast Mission of the Louisiana Conference appointed a committee to draft appropriate resolutions upon the death of Rev. N. B. Norwood, the pastor of the work, which occurred June 3, 1895. The following have been prepared:

Resolved, That we bow with humble submission to the inscrutable providence which removed Bro. Norwood from the walks of men to the future state.

Resolved, That we recognized in him a true disciple of Christ, a fearless expounder of the truth, and a minister possessed of a consuming zeal for saving souls from sin and for building up the membership of the church in the faith of the gospel.

Resolved, That the Lower Coast Mission feels deeply and sorrowfully its great loss in the death of its pastor.

J. F. SCURLOCK,
WASHINGTON HARRIS,
JOHN EDGECOMBE,
Committee.

Preaching the truth in love is one of the prime essentials to success in the pulpit. If the people do not feel that the preacher is in sympathy with them and loves their souls, the sermon, however able, is not likely to do them the needed good. The homely adage, "Molasses draws more flies than vinegar," is as true in preaching as in everything else. Severity of tone and manner repels. People can not be scolded into religion. The Spirit gently draws men to Christ. This fact is suggestive of the temper the minister should evince, and the methods he should employ. As a preacher as well as a man, he should be careful not to grieve the Holy Spirit by his harshness of temper.—Mid-Continent.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

And yet in this Christian civilized nation American women are doing for themselves to-day something worse than the binding of their feet. There is only blood and bone and muscle in the foot of a woman, but the corset, with its pressure around the body compassing every vital organ of the system, alas! is it not worse than binding the feet? When a custom is stronger than sense—and sense of propriety, and sometimes of decency—then custom will hold sway.—Rev. Sam P. Jones.

For Thin Children.

Children are always thin and pale when they do not assimilate enough fat. This seems strange, perhaps, but it is literally true. Unless there is a healthy assimilation of fat food the blood becomes depleted, tissues waste away, vitality becomes low and the body languishes for the need of proper nourishment.

Scott's Emulsion

is useful to children, especially in two ways. It is Cod-liver Oil emulsionized, thus being easily assimilated and rendered palatable, with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda added to tone up the nervous system and nourish the bones. This combination of these potent nutrients is just what thin children need to give them flesh, color and vitality. Almost all children like it.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

The twenty-ninth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic is being held in Louisville, Ky., this week.

Thirty men were burned in the Oceola Mine, Michigan, on Sept. 7. The fire cut off their retreat, and the rescuers were driven back by the flames.

The Catholic University, at Washington, D. C., has decided to admit women as pupils in all the higher studies, embracing courses of science, philosophy and the arts. The university heretofore has been available for priests alone.

Judge Bellinger, of Portland, Or., has sentenced Ex-Collector of Customs James Lotan, convicted of conspiracy to illegally land Chinese, to pay a fine of $8 000. Said Back, the Chinese merchant who was convicted with Lotan, was fined $5,000.

The Methodist Conference of Montana has decided by a vote of 34 to 4 to admit women as members on the same footing as men. The action seems to be reasonable, as women preachers have been recognized by that Conference for some time.

The Central German M. E. Conference has indicated its position on the subject of the admission of women as delegates to the General Conference. It will be almost unanimously opposed. Its committee, on Sept. 5, reported in favor of what is called the Baltimore amendment, which provides that women shall not be eligible.

Recently the Cotton Exchange received from the Liverpool Cotton Association a letter notifying it that, after the coming season, the Liverpool Exchange would impose a penalty of five pounds per bale on all cotton imperfectly baled. The local Cotton Exchange has made a reply to this notification, declining to become a party to such arrangements, and denies the right of the Liverpool Cotton Association to impose a penalty upon improperly baled cotton.

For some days past accusations of misconduct and malfeasance have been made against the conduct of the district attorney in this city. These allegations were to the effect that the district attorney, or some one of his assistants, had accepted money which was paid to delay the prosecution of the violators of the Sunday law; also that the district attorney had exacted and accepted money considerations in payment for the withdrawal of prosecution against onmerous accused persons. These charges have been made by the editor of one of the evening papers, and, in consequence, the accuser is now being tried for libel in the Criminal Court.

In consequence of the activity of the nihilists, it has been found necessary to guard the Czar's every step as completely as the movements of his father, Alexander III., were guarded by the police at the most perilous period of his reign.

The licensed liquor dealers of Austria are making a fuss because some priests have been making their people take a pledge. They claim that the priests are interfering with their lawful business and threaten to bring the matter into court.

The Trades Union Congress, in England, has passed a resolution, by unanimous vote, the delegates protesting against Emperor William's interference with the liberty of the press, and expressing sympathy with the workingmen of Germany.

The inquiry into the massacre at Ku Cheog, in China, is proceeding to the satisfaction of the American and British consuls. There have been a number of important convictions. Among those condemned are some of the ring-leaders of the riot.

Advices from Cuba are to the effect that a great battle was fought on Aug. 31, near Santiago de Cuba, between the insurgents and a body of Spanish troops commanded by Cavillas. The insurgents are said to have routed the Spanish army. Six hundred Spanish soldiers and eight officers are reported killed and many were wounded, Cavillas among the latter.

A Timely Reminder.

Each season forces upon our consideration its own peculiar perils to health. The advent of Fall finds many reduced in strength and vigor, poorly prepared to continue the business of life. The stomach and bowels, the great highway of animal economy, is especially liable to disorder in the Fall. The nervous system has also suffered in the struggle. Typhoid fever and malaria in particular find in the Fall that combination of earth, air and water that make this season so especially dangerous. The falling leaves, the decaying vegetables contribute their share of contamination. Hood's Sarsaparilla furnishes a most valuable safeguard at these important points, and should be used in the Fall before serious sickness has laid you low.

Don't Be Side-Tracked.

The time for study should be regular, daily and unhurried. Take time enough to forget time, and take the choicest time of the day. Study in the morning prepares for the day's fight against self, sin and Satan. Chinese Gordon put a big handkerchief out in front of his tent every morning. Then everybody knew that he wanted to be left alone with God and his Word. Havelock, when on his heaviest marches in India, would get up one hour earlier than the camp was broken to study and pray. Ruskin said: "Make it your first business of the day to understand what the Bible says to you, and then make it your business to live it out for the remainder of the day."

As to the manner of carrying out this personal-growth study these suggestions were made: Keep in mind the object of this kind of study; be alone; let there be resolute detachment of mind; do not be side-tracked; be thorough; meditate; record results. —The Bible Reader.

A significant fact regarding the boasted educational virtues of the Roman Church is found in the following item: "In Rome there are 30 cardinals, 75 bishops, 1,369 priests, 2 832 monks, and 2,215 nuns, and yet in the same city there are 190 000 people (adults) who can neither read nor write."—Pacific Advocate.

Sept. 10, 1895.

After a period of almost uninterrupted success in the way of gaining adherents, the Socialists of Germany have recently met with a severe setback. With a degree of folly, almost amounting to insanity, the Socialist leaders have drawn down upon themselves and their party the anathemas of all patriotic Germans by openly denouncing the recent celebrations in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the victories of the war of 1870.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER {Spring No. 1.}

IN NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA.

Wm. O. Baskerville, M. D., Oxford, N. C., Member of N. C. Medical Society, writes under date of October 3, 1893, as follows:

"About August or September of 1891, I was very much troubled with torpidity of the liver and disorder of the digestive organs; later in the fall and winter I found that my urine was laden with uric acid, and I was a victim of Nervous Prostration and Nervous Dyspepsia. I tried the most approved remedies for such ailments, and consulted several of the most noted physicians of our country. Failing to obtain any relief, I determined to visit the Buffalo Lithia Springs of Virginia, where I spent a period of six weeks during the summer of 1892. I was entirely restored to health; my nervous symptoms all disappeared, and my general health was rapidly restored to its normal condition. Since that time my health has continued as good as at any period of my life. As a tonic, anti-dyspeptic and restorative, the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is without a peer."

Dr. P. A. Flournoy, Charlotte Court House, Virginia.

"My Nervous System was shattered, my digestion difficult and painful, the stomach often rejecting the lightest possible article of food. I was greatly depressed in spirit, and had but little hope of any improvement in my condition. Upon a diet of tea and crackers, I visited the Buffalo Springs and put myself upon the Water of Spring No. 1. I was soon conscious of an increase both of the appetite and digestive power, and at the same time of a gradual increase of Nervous Vigor. This improvement continued through a protracted stay at the Springs, and to such an extent that before leaving I was able to eat with impunity any article of food found upon the hotel table. I left the Springs fully restored, and returned home to enter actively upon the arduous duties of my profession."

This Water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f.o.b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

THE INEVITABLE.

BY SARAH KNOWLES BOLTON.

I like the man who faces what he must;
With a step triumphant and a heart of cheer;
Who fights the daily battle without fear;
Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unfaltering trust
That God is God; that somehow, true and just
His plans work out for mortals; and a tear
Is shed when fortune, which the world holds dear,
Falls from his grasp: better, with love, a crust
Than living in dishonor; envies not, nor
Nor loses faith in man; but does his best,
Nor even murmurs at his humbler lot,
But, with a smile and words of hope, gives zest
To every toiler: he alone is great,
Who by a life heroic conquers fate.

—From "The Inevitable and Other Poems."

Correspondence.

London from the Top of a Bus.

MR. EDITOR: Desiring to study English life on all sides, I made it a point to visit Hampton Court on Bank holiday, knowing that "the great majority" would be out in full; and they were. Climbing to a seat on the top of a bus at Charing Cross, I had the benefit of being "a looker-on in Venice" to my entire satisfaction as the four stalwart horses jogged along the crowded streets. Every laboring man, woman and child in London, and every idle one, seemed to be out, dressed in their best clothes, with nosegays in their button-holes and lunch-baskets in their hands. A very staid and orderly set they were for several hours; but, as the day lengthened, there was loud laughter, unsteady jokes and utter disregard of the proprieties. The English are considered by all the world as the very essence of all that is proper, society. I have never seen such freedom between the sexes in the middle and lower classes. Young men and women holding each other's hands walking along the streets in the glare of daylight, arms not only intertwined, but often the masculine encircling the feminine waist, and vice versa, and all with the utmost sang froid. At stated intervals our driver would stop at "inns," dismount, and rush to the bar to refresh himself, followed by nearly every man and woman in the coach. If the latter did not care to descend, her male escort would bring the liquor out to her, and she would drain the glass as often as occasion presented itself, as each draught growing redder and jollier.

A magnificent avenue of chestnut trees leads to the old palace of Cardinal Wolseley. We went from room to room and hall to hall in the old palace, in a tremendous crowd of people, who would look mechanically at the paintings and tapestry and other remnants of the glories of Henry VIII. and his prime minister, making remarks on each which were as indicative of as much ignorance and stupidity as the ordinary British mind is capable of.

Later we saw throngs loiling idly on the banks of the Thames, others eating under the trees and in the restaurants, and some young soldiers, half drunk, walking with girls similarly befuddled. In the midst of it all a band of mission workers were singing gospel hymns and preaching of the salvation of Christ. The amount of drunkenness in England is appalling, especially among the women. There are barmaids in every saloon, bloudined and painted; there are crowds of women in every grog-shop, dozens with their children in their arms; as many as fifteen young girls are seen often on the streets in groups, all drunk. Open immorality is tolerated to an extent that would astonish the least righteous of American minds. The English are in the very initiative stages of prohibition. Only recently, during the last year, have they begun to agitate the question of a local veto, known among us as local option; but even that measure was killed in the defeat of the Liberal party at the last election. It is an undisputed fact that the ministers of the Church of England combined with the liquor dealers of the British kingdom to make the Conservatives triumphant. One was pushed on by the question of the disestablishment of the church in Wales; the other by the fear of a restriction of the liquor business. Reform measures have been retarded twenty years by the election of the Conservatives. When the church and liquor dealers combine, there is no power under heaven that could defeat them. Wine drinking is a common thing among the British clergy. A minister of high repute in the Methodist Church made the statement on the platform this Summer that divinity students in theological schools drank their wine as regularly as they ate their meals. He had reference, too, to Methodists; but, I am glad to say, he asserted that among the Nonconformists it is growing "beautifully less."

After a visit to Windsor Castle, the Tower of London, the National Gallery, the British Museum, and other places of interest in and around London, I concluded to see the great city at night from the top of a bus. With two elderly ladies, prominent in W. C. T. U. work in England and America, I began my pilgrimage at Ashley Gardens. In a few moments we were at Westminster Abbey and the Parliament buildings; then we went up Whitehall street, where the government offices are, passing the place where King Charles I. was hung (from a window), and crossed Downing street, where, for a long time, Mr. Gladstone had his official residence. Soon we came to the Queen's Life Guards Barracks and the Admiralty building, arriving at Trafalgar Square, where is seen the statue of King Charles, which was buried during the Cromwell Revolution, and the splendid monument to Nelson. The lines at the base of the latter were modeled after those of St. Mark's, in Venice. Just back of this is the monument to Chinese Gordon, whose body rests in the crypt of St. Paul's Cathedral. After a glance at the old church of St. Martin's in the Fields, where all that is mortal of Nell Gwynn lies, we went down the Strand, passing by the old palace of Henry VIII. and Cardinal Wolseley, now used as a barber shop; Somerset House, the place of registration of all deeds in England; Temple Bar, where the griffin marks the limits of the old city and the beginning of the new; King's College and St. Dunstan in the West; the old church where Isaac Walton was warden, and in which, by the way, only recently a tablet has been placed to his memory; down Fleet we went, where all the leading newspapers of England are published; up St. Paul's by the cathedral, down Cheapside, passing Newgate, then to the Bank of England, the Mansion House, and the Stock Exchange. The last looks like an old Greek temple, and covers a whole block. From here we went to Whitechapel, which we were surprised to find a very broad, well-lighted street; but, as we rode along, my friends pointed to the small courtways opening to the dark alleys, where the horrible murders were committed by the fiend who signs himself "Jack the Ripper." The further down we went the greater the unwashed crowds swelled. It was Saturday night, and the later it grew—we started at twelve—the more tumultuous they became, and the further down we went the dimmer the lights became. We finally got to Burdette Road, where we took an underground railway to Charing Cross. There we mounted another bus, and went up to Piccadilly, Pall Mall, and Regent streets; then, taking a cab, we went down by way of St. James Palace, where the Duchess of York lives, through Hyde Park, and in a few moments landed safe, but wiser and sadder for poor humanity, at Ashley Gardens, where my Anglo-American friend lives who has entertained me here as one of her very own for many happy hours. To Pastors in the Louisiana Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: The time has now come when the products of the country are beginning to flow to the trade centers, and money is being returned for them. We are at the beginning of the money season, the opening of the financial harvest. If we expect to secure the sum of our collections, we must begin now—the sooner the better.

The apportionment to the Louisiana Conference for missions is not exactly in proportion to the peculiar demands of our Conference territory, but the sums for both the foreign and the domestic work will all be needed, viz.: For foreign missions, $9 000; for domestic missions, $3,400; total for missions, $12,400. Of this amount, the very inadequate sum of $3,400 is allowed for our domestic work, provided that sum is collected on its own merits. If the whole amount of this very small sum is collected, it will enable us to double our forces in the God-forsaken, priest-ridden portions of our Conference next year.

The Board of Missions, through its secretary, has been seeking competent men for our French work, not only among men, but by humble prayer to the great Head of the church. In answer to this diligent inquiry, several men, well known, tried and true, thoroughly qualified in heart and tongue for this peculiar work, have offered themselves, and now await the pleasure of the Bishop and Board of Missions. Shall we, as heretofore, go up to Conference at Jackson, next December, with less than half our domestic mission apportionment in hand? God forbid. Responsibilities are greater than ever before. Heretofore the men qualified for the work most needed were not to be had. Now they stand at our side, crying: "Here am I; send me!" Shall we send them? "How can they go except they be sent?"

At least one-fourth of the population of our State are being taught to believe the Bible is a bad book, and that it is a sin for the common people to read it! Shall these people die under such delusions?

China, Japan, Brazil and Mexico must not be neglected, much less the foreign-speaking population of Louisiana. The masses of the people—the majority of them—in the parishes of St. Bernard, Plaquemines, Lafourche, St. Charles, St. John, St. James, Jefferson, Ascension, Iberville, Assumption, Terrebonne, Point Coupee, West Baton Rouge, Avoyelles and St. Martins are as destitute of the gospel of grace as the people of Mexico or Brazil. In all the parishes named above, except where immigration has strengthened the hands of Protestantism, Romanism has spread out its dragon wing and driven our own church toward the hills of Central and Northern Louisiana. Our own church has less hold upon these parishes now than it had thirty years ago! We must put more men in the open field, or continue to retreat. Which shall we do? Everywhere the people are calling for our preachers, even though they can not preach in the French language.

The want of piety in the Catholic Church, the imperviousness of its priesthood, and its antagonistic attitude to secret societies, have combined to dissatisfy its communicants and create a desire for a form of religion which satisfies the soul without interfering with the liberty of conscience.

Let me beg you, dear brethren, not to rest until every dollar of your apportionment for domestic missions is in hand. You need not neglect any one of your seven collections, but press this one, which, next to that for "widows and orphans," is, in my humble judgment, most important.

Your brother in the gospel,
J. A. PARKER,
Sec. B'd of Missions, La. Conf.

About the Atlanta Exposition.

MR. EDITOR: Next week the gates to the Cotton States and International Exposition will be thrown open. This will be the finest exposition, save the World's Fair, this country has had. It is remarkable that a city of one hundred thousand inhabitants should inaugurate such a huge enterprise during the times of financial depression. Surely no other city beside Atlanta would have shown such pluck. Fourteen years ago, when I moved from Mississippi here, the city numbered 37,000 inhabitants; now it reaches 100 000 and over. The development and carrying out an enterprise like this is due to the fact that every Atlantian is for Atlanta. The citizens may differ on some questions, but when it comes to progress, every hand is ready to push. For fear you may think I am bragging, I will leave that part, especially as I remember you were a Georgian for a while, but a Maconite instead of an Atlantian. It is to be hoped that you imbued no jealousy while sojourning there.

The Cotton States and International Exposition is not a local affair at all. It contains the products of many countries, especially those of South and Central America. I saw yesterday a large exhibit marked "Gt. Britain." Like all other expositions, this one will not be ready for opening day, but will be by October first, to astound the most expectant visitor. The site is much more picturesque than that of the World's Fair, which was on a level. This is on terraced ground, some points fifty feet higher than the level of "Clara Meer," which is the lowest point of the grounds. In this beautiful lake will float the historic gondola and the modern electric launch. Across it will span beautiful bridges; rising from the center of it will be the most magnificent fountains, casting water one hundred feet high. These fountains will be wonderfully beautiful at night, as they will be illuminated. This, the most beautiful display, will be more accessible than those of Chicago. Broad, beautiful steps will lead from one terrace to another. The balustrades of the steps are of granite in rustic form. Handsome statuary will adorn both sides of the ways. The roof of every building will sparkle with electric lights, which will thickly dot the eaves, the combs and the ridges of the roofs. Thousands of these lights will twinkle like stars above. Some immense searchlights are being put in position, which, when turned on Stone Mountain, eighteen miles east, will show this wonderful shaft of granite rising, as it does out of a valley, like a ghost. When the lights are turned northwest, Kenesaw will read his sad records of the war twenty miles away.

The government exhibit, for which $200,000 was appropriated, is about ready, and is magnificent. In many respects it will surpass the Chicago exhibit. The fisheries will certainly be finer. Those who saw that beautiful display at Chicago will want to feast their eyes again on the beautiful varieties of fish.

The first building, after passing through the grand battle-towered entrance gate, is the Auditorium; then, bearing to the left, round one of the prettiest and highest terraces, is the handsome Fine Art Building. This is an exquisite structure. Next is the Government Building; then the Liberal Arts, a magnificent structure, which had to be made much larger after it was nearly finished. Close to this is the unique building, pyramidal in shape, of the Plant System of Railroads and Steamships. I can't, for lack of space, tell of the many special and State buildings. The next in order, after descending a beautiful terrace, is the "Japanese Village;" then across the end of Clara Meer is the Electric Building, a large, fine structure. Next comes the Transportation; then the Georgia Manufacturers Building, devoted entirely to the manufactured products of Georgia. The next is the Negro Building. This will astonish all visitors, and will show the progress of the negro race. After this is the Machinery Hall; then the Forestry. This is a beautiful rustic building. Back of this is the Midway, where "fakirs" will be aglow. Here is the phœnix wheel, a smaller edition of the Ferris, and the scenic railroad, and other things to while away the time and spend money. One week of time is necessary to see the Exposition. I saw people at Chicago who did the show in a day. It was amusing to see them. They struck a streak down the center aisle of a building, passed out and into another the same way. They could not tell a thing they saw, for they saw nothing. Prepare to come to the Atlanta show. B. H. CATCHING.

"A Districted Episcopacy."

Bishop Thoburn's deliverance in the Methodist Review in favor of "A Districted Episcopacy" is attracting much attention in the M. E. Church. Zion's Herald delivers itself on the subject as follows:

The remarkably able article of Bishop Thoburn in the Methodist Review is the subject of many favorable comments. The suggestion that the Bishops should have each their definite field for a number of years, and be held responsible for its efficient supervision, has common sense in its favor. Why should the able resident Bishop of New York have nothing to do with administration here, while the supervision of New York City is divided between two Bishops—one residing at Omaha and the other at Denver? Why should the San Francisco Bishop be brought across the continent twice every year to preside at two or three Eastern Conferences, and then go away, not to see them again during the year, but to have all questions of episcopal administration that may arise referred to him by letter or telegraph across the breadth of the continent? These are puzzling conundrums, and the talk about them is not likely to cease. If Bishop Andrews could have all the Conferences of the Second District under his care for four years, he would become known throughout their bounds, and could exert an influence which is now practically impossible. Such a plan is feasible, and could be enacted by the General Conference, and put into operation at once.

The Western Advocate takes the other side, as the following quotation will show:

We do not believe that the church is ready to adopt the project which he advocates. We are convinced that nearly all our Conferences would, over against his suggestions, prefer the current and time-honored policy, in vogue for three-quarters of a century, whereby a "new" Bishop comes to preside at the annual session every year. The variety of service rendered under this arrangement, the fresh inspirations imparted by the new personality of the presiding Bishop, the difficulty of perpetuating a Conference "ring" when the administration each year is reviewed and conducted by a new administration—these are some off hand reasons why the present arrangement will be, we are convinced, continued.

As to the expense of the case, it is but a trifle. The traveling expenses of our Bishops amount, even in the aggregate, to a very small sum. Without bringing into comparison any of the living Bishops, we have in mind the great advantages which the undergraduates of our Conferences twenty-five years ago possessed in the privilege of having, in succession, Bishops Simpson, Ames, Janes, and Harris, during a quadrennium—each one a master in his own field—followed by Bishops E. O. Haven, Gilbert Haven, Jesse T. Peck, and Wiley, all of them unique characters and gifted with individual characteristics which made them marked men. This privilege was worth more to an Annual Conference in eight years than the administration of the greatest of the eight, whoever he may have been, could have been for the whole of that time.

Lord Salisbury told some wholesome truths to the Sultan in his speech. He referred to what the European powers, and especially Great Britain, had done to bolster up his rotten empire, and led him to understand in plain terms that if he did not insist upon radical reforms in his Christian provinces, the powers would seriously consider the question whether he was worth preserving. Whether this warning has had its effect, time will tell. But it would be absurd to maintain in power a rule which sanctions such brutalities as have been recorded in connection with Armenia. If half reported were true, it would be a crime for a civilized power to protect the government any longer. There is a report that the Sultan intends to signalize the coming anniversary of his accession by proclaiming general reforms. Like the late government, he has done more promising than performing, and deserves no less merciful treatment than they received. If he proclaims reforms and gives effect to them, well and good; but if he does not, the Sultan should be told to march off, bag and baggage, from Europe.—Belfast Witness.

The hypocrisy of many of the Northern papers in their utterances on the race question is beginning to be observed and commented on north of Mason and Dixon's line, as the following from Zion's Herald will show:

We are being forced to the conviction that there is as much pretense and hypocrisy upon the "color question" right here in Massachusetts as anywhere else. The latest illustration comes from Springfield. The Rev. Bradley Gilman, of Springfield, Mass., has been a bicyclist for a number of years, and, in consequence of the benefits to be received from the efforts of the American League of Wheelmen, it was urged that he should join the league. Soon he received a circular in which it was said: "Our rules require a member to be an amateur to be white, and to be eighteen years of age." And yet how vehement we become when the color line is drawn in any part of the Southland!

There is a common notion that uprightness is stern of countenance. We look for a certain severity about great purity. But there was nothing hard or angular about Jesus. People did not think of his piety as of an apple that would be good if it were only mellow. He attracted men. That is, he attracted all to whom goodness had any attraction. The children came to him—instinctively recognizing in him the children's friend. Alas! for the man whose piety makes children run shy of him.

The vast stride that has been made in the circulation of the Scriptures and evangelical literature may be estimated from the report that more Bibles have been printed and circulated in the past twelve months than were produced in all the years previous to 1880. Portions of the Scriptures are now provided for nearly all the races of the globe.—Exchange.

The attorney-general of Kansas lately visited incog. every large city in the State during two weeks, while he was supposed to be in New York on legal business. The result was the issuance by the governor of positive injunctions to the police commissioners of every city under the Metropolitan Police Law to close every saloon within three days or immediately resign. The attorney-general also sent a letter to all the county attorneys in the State notifying them that unless the laws were enforced a writ of ouster would be filed in the Supreme Court within ten days. Such official fidelity as this can not fail to close the saloons. Law enforced is effective law.—Christian Intelligencer.

That "better times" are beginning to dawn must be apparent to all. Almost every paper one picks up contains an announcement of some factory resuming business, enlarging its capacity and increasing the wages of its employees. This is significant and means, if it means anything, that capital is beginning to come out of its hiding place; that the clouds of adversity are beginning to roll away, and that the near future will witness an active business revival.—Winona Times.

Some men, like some matches, never show what is in them until they are struck, when it is discovered that they are made chiefly of brimstone.—Texas Advocate.

In the Living Present.

English medical papers speak of the appearance of the bicycle-face. Overexertion and unconscious effort to maintain one's balance produce it. It expresses disquiet and exhaustion. One exchange suggests, that it is the result of the gradual approximation of the long, solemn horse visage.

Book and Review critiques, like the tombstones, seldom tell the truth. Encomium from first to last. Everything, even the veriest bosh, is "best, cleverest, most suggestive, frankest, epoch making," etc. Knowing ones do not read them.

The Minneapolis Methodist Herald assures, that about one half of the old historic camp grounds have been converted into summer schools. The old Chautauqua Camp Ground in New York led the van. In this said paper discovers not declension of spiritual power in the church. Since every hamlet has been supplied with church facilities, the old time camp meetings are no longer a necessity. Besides, education is the chief hand-maid of the Christian religion.

The St. James Gazette believes, that not less than fifty thousand American tourists have visited Great Britain during the present Summer. It has been noticed that nearly all visited and took interest in those places and scenes which have been prominently mentioned in Dickens' novels. Said novels are found in nearly every American's house.

The Chicago Preachers' Meeting is a very enterprising body, bordering sometimes, though, on the impertinent. Recently it invited Keir Hardie, the defeated English labor candidate, to set forth his views in its midst. He complied; but advocated rank anarchism. Praised Chicago's labor agitators and murderers. Of course, the preachers interrupted him with hisses. The speaker left in disgust. Ah, yes. What Prince Metternich said of the Russian, "Scratch him, and you discover a Cossack," is true in regard to European socialists. Probe them fully and you find them incipient anarchists.

The oldest, and at the same time youngest, American college graduate is Mrs. Phœbe Davenport. She is eighty-five years old and very recently received her graduation parchment from the Chautauqua People's College, having successfully completed the prescribed four years' course of study.

Honesty and firmness in the New York court officials succeeded in having the State Sunday law respected and executed. The Liquor Dealer's Association has, by resolution, declared to keep the establishments represented by same closed on Sunday. Disobedience will result in expulsion. What of New Orleans? ICH DIEN.

Some Methods Used in My Own Pastorate, and Presented by Request of Some of My Brethren.

BY H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

While it is true that no amount of machinery, however good, will bring success to a church without the spiritual force flowing only from the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, it is also equally true that spiritual power, operating, through the best church machinery, will accomplish a great deal more than if left to do its work regardless of methods. The best railroad locomotive in the world will not run without steam, but the steam will do better work if the locomotive is a good one. I do not claim these methods as the best, but, as my methods, the best I have found. When I find better I shall hasten to adopt them.

I.—REGULAR SERVICES.

They rarely consume more than one hour, unless we have communion, and then about twenty minutes longer. I study to economize time. Beginning promptly on time, following studiously and conscientiously the order laid down in the Discipline, I use no unnecessary words. I do not say, "Let us begin worship," or, "Let us sing No. 245." I never ask my people to sing numbers, I want them to sing hymns; so I begin by saying, "Hymn 245;" then I read the hymn, re-read the first couplet, and they sing. I do not say, "Let us all kneel and pray." I feel that would be a reflection upon their rearing. If they are well-bred, they will conform to the church's postures of worship; if Methodists, they kneel. I say, "Let us pray." I read short lessons; never long, never too short. I preach from thirty to thirty-five minutes; rarely more than thirty. I find it better. I condense when I thus limit myself, and I find my sermons more effective because of such condensation. At the close of the last prayer, which is always short, the Doxology is sung without word or gesture from me, and the benediction closes the service. I make no announcements. This matter is thus arranged: At the beginning of the year some six thousand cards are printed on one side thus:

You are cordially invited to attend services at the Methodist Church, corner Madison and Washington streets, Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D., pastor. Sunday-school, 9.30 A. M.; regular preaching services, 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M.; prayer meeting every Thursday at 7:30 P. M. Seats free.

The other side contains announcements of services for the week.

This printing does not cost over fifteen dollars per year. These cards are distributed on the seats by the sexton. We have ushers to seat the audience. Everyone knows his part, and everyone does it without a word from the pulpit. Thus time is saved, and utmost order prevails.

II.—OUR PRAYER MEETINGS.

Forty minutes are given to the prayer meeting, held each Thursday at 7:30 P. M. The lesson, a brief one, is read responsively—I one verse, the audience the next, and so on—and the lesson is explained in a twelve- or fifteen-minutes' talk. Two or three verses of each hymn sung is all we use. We have the organ lead the music. The lesson and its explanation, from four to six songs, and from two to four prayers, are put into our forty minutes, and make up our prayer meeting. They are well attended.

III.—OUR EPWORTH LEAGUE.

No branch of our work is worth more to us. I do not see how I did without it so long. After five years of trial, I am determined never to undertake to direct the work of a church without one. I can not get along without it. Our League does all of our charitable work; aids the pastor in circulating religious literature and in taking the collections ordered by the Annual Conference; gives our young people pleasant and profitable social entertainment, thus leading them away from the forbidden kinds constantly offered by godless society, and cultivates a love of the Bible and other good reading. Its business meetings are held on the first Thursday in every month at the close of the prayer meeting. Its social meetings are held at the homes of our people on the last Friday night of each month, and are very profitable and delightful. The Bible study meetings are held every Sunday at 5 P. M.

IV.—RECEIVING MEMBERS.

The names of candidates are taken, some in the old way, "opening the doors of the church," and some in private conversation. When I have a number—I had about fifty a few months ago—I divide into classes according to ages, and appoint some godly person in the church to be leader for each class. I put into the hands of each candidate a paper-bound copy of our ritual, and card, on one side of which is printed the following:

OUR VOWS.

Do you solemnly, in the presence of God and this congregation, ratify and confirm the promise and vow of repentance, faith, and obedience, contained in the baptismal covenant?

ANS.—I DO, GOD BEING MY HELPER.

Will you be subject in the discipline of the church, attend upon its ordinances, and support its institutions?

ANS.—I WILL ENDEAVOR SO TO DO, BY THE HELP OF GOD.

"THE BAPTISMAL COVENANT."

It is found in our service for baptism. It contains three vows:

I.—VOW OF REPENTANCE.

QUES.—Dost thou renounce the devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all covetous desires of the same, and the carnal desires of the flesh, so that thou wilt not follow or be led by them?

ANS.—I RENOUNCE THEM ALL.

II.—VOW OF FAITH.

QUES.—Dost thou believe in God the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth? and in Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son, our Lord? and that he was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary? that he suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried? that he rose again the third day? that he ascended into heaven, and sitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almighty, and from thence shall come again, at the end of the world, to judge the quick and the dead?

And dost thou believe in the Holy Ghost, the communion of saints, the remission of sins, the resurrection of the body, and everlasting life after death?

ANS.—ALL THIS I STEADFASTLY BELIEVE.

III.—VOW OF OBEDIENCE.

Will thou obediently keep God's holy will and commandments, and walk in the same all the days of thy life?

ANS.—I WILL ENDEAVOR SO TO DO, GOD BEING MY HELPER.

On the other side is printed:

WHAT WE PROMISE.

I. To "be subject to the Discipline of the church," not to do what it forbids:
1. Taking God's name in vain.
2. Breaking the Sabbath.
3. Dram-drinking.
4. Fighting and quarreling.
5. Uncharitable talking.
6. Unkindness of all kinds.
7. Dancing, theatre-going, card-playing, circuses, and such things.
8. Singing bad songs and reading bad books.
9. All other wickedness.

II. To "attend upon the ordinances" of the church:
1. Preaching.
2. Prayer Meeting, and Love Feast, and Class Meeting.
3. The Lord's Supper.
4. Family Prayers.
5. Private Prayers.
6. Fasting.

III. To "support the institutions" of the church:
1. Sunday-school.
2. Epworth League.
3. Missionary cause.
4. Educational cause.
5. Bible cause.
6. Ministry—a, Bishops; b, Presiding Elder; c, Pastor; d, Superannuated Preachers; e, Widows and Orphans of Preachers.

With the aid of this card and the ritual, the leader very easily gets the candidates to thoroughly understand the vows and the consequent obligations. Frequent meetings, not unlike class meetings, are held, and the spiritual life of the would-be member is thus developed. In short, he is trained for membership. This method, I think, is invaluable in the case of children, and I look upon the children thus brought into the church as the most valuable members I receive. This method also helps me to carry out my ideal of church management, viz.: Give every member something to do.

Selections.

Piety is of the heart and is personal: It is inward and of the spirit, not outward. It is not to be put on, like a clerical coat or the veil of a religieuse, but is that inward adornment of which the Scriptures speak, and as to which they inculcate modesty of demeanor. Nothing is more beautiful than that quiet, unostentatious piety which springs from a full apprehension of the demerits of self and of the merits and mercy of Jesus Christ; relying upon him, living in him, and living for him. All assumptions of piety are offensive; they savor of hypocrisy; they indicate a pride which comes from the exaltation of self and from a desire to get credit for religious devotion. Our Savior distinguished this class of persons in his condemnation of those who "love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men." We have need to remember his injunction: "Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men to be seen of them; otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven."

Genuine piety can always be distinguished from the spurious type. It never advertises itself. It never seeks to make itself conspicuous. It never tries to elicit the praise of men, but seeks by secret prayer and personal devotion to worship the Creator and Redeemer in spirit and in truth.—Independent.

Living Well To-Day.

Living well to-day is the best anyone can do. We can not live in the future. We must live in the present. If that be lived wisely there need not be any anxious concern for the morrow; for, says a judicious writer, "the value of the future depends entirely upon the value attached to to-day; there is no magic in the years to come; nothing can bloom in those fairer fields save that which is sown to-day. The great aim of Christianity is not to teach men the glory of the life to come, but the sacredness of the life that now is; not to make men imagine the beauty of heaven, but to make them realize the divinity of earth; not to unveil the splendor of the Almighty, enthroned among angels, but to reveal the deity of the Man of Nazareth. He has mastered the secret of life who has learned the value of the present moment, who sees the beauty of present surroundings, and who recognizes the possibility of sainthood in his neighbors. To make the most and the best out of to-day is to command the highest resources of the future, for there is no future outside of us; it lies within us, and we make it for ourselves."—Religious Telescope.

The Best Cure for Weariness.

There is nothing which will give a chance for rest to the over-tired nerves so surely as a simple religious faith in the overruling, wise and tender Providence which has us in its keeping. It is in chafing against the conditions of our lives that we tire ourselves immeasurably. It is in being anxious about things which we can not help that we often do the most of our spending. A simple faith in God which practically and every moment, and not only theoretically and on Sundays, rests on the knowledge that he cares for us, at least, as much as we care for those who are the dearest to us, will do much to give the tired nerve the feeling of the bird in its nest. Do not spend what strength you have, like the clematis, in climbing on yourself, but lay hold on things which are eternal, and the peace of them will pass into your soul like a healing balm. Put yourself in the great everlasting currents, and then you can rest on your oars, and let those currents bear you on their strength.—Harper's Magazine.

Loyalty to Denomination.

The individual church whose form of doctrine best expresses your conception of Christ's teaching, whose form of government best expresses your idea of efficiency in Christ's service, which brings the most to you as a worker, and gives you the most to do as a worker—that is the church to which you should belong. Loyalty to it is simply loyalty to your Master. Everyone enrolled in the grand army of souls which is following the banner of our Lord Jesus Christ expresses loyalty to the cause in loyalty to the corps, the regiment, the company in which he is enrolled. . . . Each one in his own place, and each one doing his own work; each one accomplishing that work to the full extent of possibility, laying all upon the altar of consecration, and taking up all the armor of God in doing God's will. . . . Every man is the best worker for the cause at large who is the truest and most faithful worker for the narrower field within which his lot is cast.—Rev. O. H. Tiffany, D. D.

Heaven.

It is well to think much of heaven. One of the most beautiful sentences ever penned about it is the following by Dr. Guthrie: "A city never built with hands, nor heary with the years of time; a city whose inhabitants no census has numbered; a city through whose streets rush no tides of business, nor nodding hearse creeps slowly with its burden to the tomb; a city without griefs or graves, without sin or sorrow, without births or burials, without marriages or mournings; a city which glories in having Jesus for its king, angels for its guards, saints for its citizens; whose walls are salvation, and whose gates are praise."—Zion's Herald.

Joy is communicative. It is sure to break forth. It can not be confined to its possessor's heart alone. It looks out of face and eye; it sings out of heart and lip; it speaks out of word and action. Heaven, so barred from earth at other times, could not hold the joy that angels felt as the Son of God began his earthly mission of saving men. "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace; good-will toward men." Christmas joy, which is but another term for Christian joy, is communicative. Good tidings need not search for a messenger. They invite telling. The gospel is "good tidings of great joy to all people." How can we who know its gladness keep from carrying it to others?

If you have light, God will put you in some place where it will shine.—Exchange.

It is well understood that the road to popularity, especially with the unthinking, is to be classed as a heretic. No matter how unreasonable may be one's views, no matter how destructive they may be to religion, or to the good order of society, if the sensationalist can get some one to call him a heretic, he thinks his reputation is made. It is often short lived, but the injury has been done, and good and honest men have grown cowardly in opposing error, fearing to do mischief by increasing the popularity of the advocate. In this country the heretic has the same rights before the law as the orthodox man. He has everything the heretics of past ages who receive our sympathy asked for. He should stand, therefore, on the same level as other men. Yet he continually whines because others are unwilling to pay him for propagating his views. He is abusive. He charges every man who disagrees with him with lack of scholarship. He intimates that all who do not agree with him are fools or knaves; and because people are behind the times, and are thinking of the Spanish Inquisition, they sympathize with him.—The Journal and Messenger.

It is not enough that we have love to others; we must take pains to manifest it in all possible ways, and by this means it will be both deepened and extended. It is well each day to make a special point of thinking about people with love, and speaking to them in love, and doing acts of special kindness. A little forethought and planning in the morning with reference to finding opportunities for this, will greatly help. So will a careful review of the day at night. There is plenty of talent love lying about, enough to make every home brighter, but it needs to be brought out into the daylight instead of being hid away in the shadow.

Yesterday's conscience will not do for to-day's need, nor to-day's for to-morrow's. Conscience is a thing which must be growing all the time—must grow with our growth, strengthen with our strength. If it be stationary, it becomes stagnant, it deteriorates, it may die. It must be kept up, its tone always equal to our best individual advances.

God respects not the arithmetic of our prayers, how many they are; nor the rhetoric of our prayers, how long they are; nor the music of our prayers, how melodious they are; nor the logic of our prayers, how methodical they are—but the divinity of our prayers, how heart-sprung they are. Not gifts, but graces, prevail in prayer.

A man may be an eternal failure, although his footsteps glitter with gold and his words sparkle with knowledge. That man is the most successful in the divine kingdom who sets in motion the greatest amount of spiritual power for the glory of God, whatever may be the opinions or rewards of fallen mortals.—John Reid.

It is our talent in action, in circulation, not wrapped up in a napkin, that will bless and help the world, and bless and ennoble ourselves; and that rule holds good whether our particular talent happens to be culture, or the genius of organization, or the gift of sympathy, or the stewardship of money.—Henry C. Potter.

It is god-like to create, build up, improve. It is the spirit of a devil that destroys, mutilates, soils. The man who never reared a hut can set fire to a temple. Erect or ruin — the act discloses character. A brute can fling a log across a rail and wreck a splendid machine that genius and skill conceived and equipped.—Richmond Advocate.

So live with men as considering always that God sees thee; so pray to God as if every man heard thee. Do nothing which thou wouldst not have God see done. Desire nothing which may either wrong thy profession to ask or God's honor to grant. — Bishop Henshaw.

Alexander the Great, it is said, had a soldier in his army who bore his name, but was a great coward. The emperor, enraged at his conduct, justly said to him, "Either change your name, or learn to honor it." So may it be said to many Christians.

When you lie down, close your eyes with a short prayer, commit yourself into the hands of your faithful Creator; and, when you have done, trust him with yourself, as you must do when you are dying.—Jeremy Taylor.

The most powerful intellect can not grasp a spiritual truth any more than the most powerful pair of tongs can grasp a flame.

The difference between reading the Bible devotionally and reading it critically is the difference between corn and husks.

Whatever you are called to do by the grace of God, you may be enabled to do by the power of God.—Myer.

"Speak the truth and shame the devil," says the ancient adage; but, as a matter of fact, nothing can delight Satan much more than the disagreeable way some people have of speaking the truth.—The Look Out.

The toughest philosophy we have tried to master recently is that of the well-meaning preacher who hopes to build up the church by pulling it down.—Wesleyan Advocate.

If you are brethren of Christ, try to be so like him that everyone will recognize the family likeness.

Happy is he that condemneth not himself in the things which he alloweth.—Ex hange.

North Mississippi P. and H. M. S.

Our Conference society may feel some pardonable pride at the news from the P. and H. M. S. Convention, recently held at Asheville, that our society takes the banner for the largest percentage of organization; although the reporter for the ADVOCATE, last week, did us more than justice when she said we have "only sixteen charges without a society." In fact, we have one district which has nearly that many charges without P. and H. M. S. auxiliaries, but in this case we consider that it is more for the lack of some one to organize than from indifference on the part of the women, as we have been unable to keep the district supplied with a secretary. At our approaching annual meeting, we hope to give those sisters more encouragement to enlist under our banners. At the rate of which auxiliaries are being organized in other parts of our Conference, it is at least possible that our delegate to the next convention may be able to report, "No charge without an auxiliary."

The report from various quarters and the notification of election of delegates indicate the largest delegation we have ever had at an annual meeting. In our eagerness to advance the business of our society, do not let us forget the spiritual side, but let us stress that more and more. Realizing our own insufficiency, let us continually acknowledge the majesty and goodness of God. "In thine hand is power and might; and in thine hand it is . . . to give strength to all." "For all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee." I wish to commend to your attention the following selection from Our Homes. May the love of God so guide us, and his Spirit so enlighten our lives, that in all our ministrations those we come in contact with may feel that we are "sent" by him!

GOD-SENT.

The members of the Louisville Flower Mission, while making their charitable visits, see and hear many pathetic things. One day last Winter a lady went to the western portion of the city to take a basket of groceries and fruit to a sick woman. Making a mistake in the address, she found, on getting off the car, that she was not in the right place, so she stopped at a house to make inquiries.

She was told that although the person she was seeking did not live in the neighborhood, there was a family on the opposite side of the street that was certainly suffering. Accordingly she crossed over, and found standing at the gate a little golden-haired fellow about four years old. He was looking anxiously and expectantly down the street. When he saw her his countenance brightened, and, looking earnestly into her face, he said in an awe-struck tone: "Did God send you?"

"Yes, God sent me," was the reply.

"Have you brought us bread?"

And receiving an answer in the affirmative, he rushed into the house, crying joyfully: "Mama, mama, God has sent the bread!"

The lady followed him into a room, where a poor woman lay sick and suffering. By her side was a baby only a few days old, and another of two years was sitting on the floor. They had no coal and nothing to eat. The father was out trying to find work; and when the children had cried for something to eat, the poor mother had told them to be good and God would send them bread. The little fellow had been watching at the gate ever since.—Boys' Journal.

A Generous Gift.

[Note with gratitude this item from September number of Our Homes.]

Mr. John C. Collins, of St. Louis, Mo., died some months ago, leaving most of his property to religious and benevolent objects. We gratefully rejoice to know that one clause of his will reads as follows: "I give and bequeath to the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kentucky, in trust for the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, to be held, paid or applied as the Central Committee of said Society shall direct, one thousand dollars, and the receipt of the treasurer of said Board shall be a complete discharge of my executor for same." This shall be with us a lasting memorial of our generous brother in Christ.

President, Miss Addie V. Marshall, Brookhaven, Miss.; vice-president, Mrs. R. R. Parker, Jackson; recording secretary, Mrs. A. F. Watkins, Jackson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. B. Chatfield, Meridian; treasurer, Miss Mary Andrews, Vicksburg; auditor, Mrs. Annie De Moss, Vicksburg; editor of items in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and agent for the Woman's Missionary Advocate, Mrs. E. D. Jones, Carlisle, Mississippi. District secretaries: Brandon, Mrs. W. P. Jones, Newton; Jackson, Mrs. Blanche Howell, Canton; Brookhaven, Mrs. Emma Siebe, Crystal Springs; Meridian, Miss Sallie Smylie, Meridian; Vicksburg, Mrs. J. D. Crymes, Anguilla; Enterprise, —— ——; Seashore, Mrs. Lou Whyte, Purvis; Natchez, Mrs. Robert Reed, Natchez, Mississippi.

Our corresponding secretary wrote wisely: "Without information we can not hope for best results. Can you stir our people up. Our annual reports have been falling short for several years. May the Lord arouse us to greater action." She reported two new auxiliaries, Vicksburg district. The secretary is working industriously. The secretary of Brandon district is anxious to do her whole duty. May the Holy Spirit move the heart of some sister in the Enterprise district to take that work! Will not the ministers of the district prayerfully and earnestly endeavor to fill this vacancy, and aid the sister in her labors?

Those of our leaders in Israel more familiar with the good accomplished by this work realize the value of it in establishing the work of the Parent Board, and in saving souls. Dr. Morrison, secretary of the Parent Board, pled earnestly for Mexico at the Bay meeting in Meridian. His eloquent words will give an idea of his estimate of the work there. When leaving Mexico this question shaped itself as he had remained unanswered in his mind: "Is the Parent Board, with its three Conferences and one hundred preachers, doing any more for the salvation of Mexico than the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, with its schools and missionaries?" All are familiar with Bishop Galloway's encouraging words and the necessity for it, as seen in his extended tour. And besides others we recall some words of Bishop Hargrove: "The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has managed its affairs with distinguished credit to themselves and have set us a good example. The pastor is recreant to his duty who does not help these women." Can the church afford to allow our work to languish, especially at this critical period of missions?

The secretary of home affairs in annual report said: "Organizers and visitors have become a necessity. How will you meet the demand? . . . To insist upon this very necessary addition to the full equipment of the enterprise we should extend as well as intensify." This was strongly indorsed by the Board in annual session, and our Conference was extremely anxious to put an organizer in the field, but just at this time deemed it unwise, but allowed district secretaries more money for necessary expenses, and endeavored to select those who could visit, and work labor faithfully. In view of this, and the imperative need of our work to supplement and aid the Parent Board, besides its value otherwise, and while we appreciate valuable help heretofore given, we most kindly entreat our ministers to aid the best they possibly can to supply this felt need, and help these earnest women by counsel and otherwise.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. W. Tinnin, P. C., Auburn, Miss., Sept. 6: "Our meeting at Adams was a great success. About 100 converted, reclaimed, and sanctified. We were assisted by Rev. Claude L. Chilton, of Montgomery, Ala. Our meeting at Ebenezer resulted in 20 conversions. Was assisted by Rev. Henry Catlin, of Johnson station."

Rev. R. E. Rutledge, P. C., Barlow, Miss., Sept. 11: "We have just closed a glorious meeting at Mehoboth. Bro. L. S. Jones, our presiding elder, was with us and did the preaching. The Holy Ghost was present at each service. There were 43 accessions to the church, 40 or more conversions. The joy of God's salvation was restored to quite a number and a number of family altars were erected. Hallelujah!"

Rev. Thos. J. Upton, Lisbon circuit, Louisiana Conference, Sept. 6: "Have held three protracted meetings on my work, at which much good was accomplished. The churches were greatly revived and strengthened, and quite a number were converted and added to the church. I was assisted in these meetings by Bros. R. Randle, May and Collier, and by Bros. Turner and Jordan, of the local ranks. Their preaching was full of faith and the Holy Ghost."

Rev. Ira B. Robertson, P. C., Gallman, Miss., Sept. 7: "We have recently held a very successful meeting of several days at Bethesda. Visible results are: Between twenty-five and thirty bright, clear conversions; eighteen accessions; a young ladies' prayer meeting, a young men's prayer meeting, to meet weekly; an increased attendance at the general prayer meeting, and a mighty uplifting in spiritual life in the church. Praise the Lord! Bro. K. S. Enochs assisted us most efficiently."

Rev. W. J. Porter, P. C., Indian Bayou, La., Sept. 8: "Our tent meeting at Bethel was a glorious success. Sixty-three conversions, twenty-nine sanctifications, and fifty-two additions. The meeting was followed by a Sunday-school Conference and Quarterly Conference of four days' duration, presided over by our beloved presiding elder. I praise the Lord for a presiding elder who does not oppose holiness or evangelists. Closed a meeting at Perrie's Point this week, which resulted in five conversions, one sanctification, and four additions to the church. Praise the Lord!"

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Binnsville, Sept. 5: "We are having a protracted meeting at this place, led by Rev M. H. Moore, of Terry, Miss. Here Bro. Moore was licensed to preach and made his first effort in the pulpit. Already there are 21 applicants for church membership, and the interest continues. Two weeks ago we had revival services of a week at Wahalak; Rev. D. Scarbrough, of Meridian, leading during four days with great success. The Epworth Leagues at Scooba and Binnsville are at work, and are learning how. The Fairview Male and Female College, of Binnsville, opens its session Sept. 11."

Rev. J. H. Freeman, P. C., Coffadelah, Miss., Sept. 6: "We closed our protracted meeting at Pine Grove yesterday. We had a most wonderful revival at Pine Grove this year. About 30 conversions, 10 additions to the church. To God be all the praise! Rev. T. B. Ormond, of Linwood circuit, and Rev. J. C. Long assisted. Bro. Frank Robinson, of Brandon, Rankin county, preached Sunday afternoon to the delight and pleasure of a very large congregation. As he was once the pastor of this charge, it was a source of pleasure to the people to meet him again. Neshoba charge is in a very good condition, spiritually, but badly behind, financially."

Rev. R. R. Randle, P. C., Ascension mission, La., Sept. 5: "We have held two meetings on this work up to date. Both of them were glorious successes; not much done on the onside; but, by the help of the Lord, and Bro. A. S. J. Neill, from the Lafayette work, Louisiana Conference, we straightened up the churches, and now—praise the Lord!—I can say they are in a growing condition. I want to correct a statement that has gotten into the public press about our meeting at Antioch Church. The statement read thus: 'The meeting was a success. Two converts, two killed, and four in jail.' Now, this is wrong in the main. We did have a very successful meeting and we did have two converts and accessions; but we did not have anything to do with the killing. There were two young men killed just in front of the church on Saturday night just as we had commenced service, and four men are in jail accused with the crime. This is a sad fact; but I want it understood that we, the church, had nothing to do with it. It originated (that is, the trouble) at a ball, an institution of the devil, and he, the devil, tried to use this means to break down the works of God; but—praise his holy name!—the victory was ours. Now, I do not intend that any man shall saddle this off on our church, nor on the cause of my Master. We shall commence a meeting at Meadows' Chapel next Sunday, Sept. 7. Pray for us, that God may own and bless our labors, and that this country shall be taken for God."

REVIVAL NEWS.

At the request of the pastor, Rev. S. B. Whatley, I pen for the readers of the ADVOCATE intelligence of a gracious meeting held at Prudhomme Church, on Prudhomme circuit, in which he was assisted by the writer. There were seventy-five conversions at least, though some estimate the number at one hundred; five sanctifications, and forty-three accessions, with more to follow. The meeting was in many respects a duplicate of one held in the same place by the writer and Bro. W. D. Pickens, just twelve months ago, when the church was organized with a large membership converted on the spot, with, perhaps, a few exceptions. At that time money was raised for a church-building, which has since been erected, and it was in the new building now nearly finished that this meeting was held. The church now has, I am informed, about one hundred and fifty members, representing one of the best communities in St. Landry parish, and from present indications it will pay as much as all the other three churches on the work to the support of the pastor. The writer has rarely attended a better meeting on Louisiana soil than that just concluded. Bro. Whatley, who is one of our best preachers and workers, is in favor with his people and is, perhaps, doing the best year's work of his ministerial life.

INDIAN MISSION.

It is now only three months until the Annual Conference, and I have received only a very small amount for the Indian Mission in our State, and only a very small amount on land debt, and only one dollar to help build that church. What is the matter? Have the people lost interest in it? Have we no, or but very few, friends to the mission? Are the souls of the Indians not worth saving? Did Christ not die for them? And did he not say, Preach the gospel to every creature? Surely he did, and it is our duty, and we can not expect to get to heaven and fail to keep the commandments. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Can we do that and leave the Indians out? No, surely not. Now, what we do must be done quickly. Let's do something right away; everybody do something.

Now, let me suggest. Just write me a postal card, telling me what you will pay by the first of December or the Conference, and then hand the amount to your preacher to carry to Conference and hand to me. How many will do that? Don't all speak at once, but let the postal card come at a lively rate. However, any that prefer to send money send as before. Postoffice money order on Vicksburg, Pearnix or Jackson, or draft or check on Vicksburg or Jackson, and be sure not to lay this paper down until you resolve to send something and let it get to me by Dec. 1.

Now, brethren and sisters, please help for Christ's sake and for the sake of poor, fallen humanity. Help, help right away, and all you can. We need eight hundred or a thousand dollars between now and Dec. 1. What is that among so many? Ought we not to get it almost without asking for it? We will see. Yours in love.

A. D. MILLER, Agent.

Family Prayer.

While visiting my children and attending upon my sick wife here and at Woodville, attending the camp meeting at Old Bethel, and hearing some good preaching, I have had also the pleasure of spending a day with Mrs. Nolan Dixon and her daughter, Miss Lucy W. Dixon, at the old Woman's Homestead; the one the daughter, and the other the granddaughter, of the loved and lamented Wm. Winans, the mention of whose name revives precious memories. I was entertained at their bountiful board in a hospitable manner, and a special treat was tendered me in the privilege of reading from the diary of Dr. Winans, who, for many years, was recognized as a father in the Mississippi Conference. No man came nearer being idolized by the Conference than this great and good man. For many years he stood at the head of the list as a delegate to the General Conference from Mississippi. He took an active part in the controversy that resulted in the division of the church into two General Conferences. Though born and reared in the North, he, like Bishop Soule, cast his lot with the South. His word was "law and gospel" with the younger members of the Mississippi Conference. He was a model man and minister of the gospel of Christ in his day, a giant in intellect, profound in his logic, never hesitating for a moment to condemn what was wrong and approve the right. He lives embalmed in the memory of all who knew him, or ever heard him preach.' I was privileged to read his diary, dating far back beyond the time when I knew him first in 1839. I was impressed with his invariable habit of praying with families that he visited. After giving the date, the record is, "Prayer with the family." Then next comes, "Rode to Br. S.'s," or to some church where he had an appointment to preach. Never did he leave the house of a friend, brother, or stranger, without praying for the family—a practice that should be kept up, but is often neglected.

The public ministry of the Word may not always move the heart, but prayer with a family almost always leaves a savor for good. I called once at a house where some of the family had never seen a preacher. I asked the privilege of reading a lesson from the Scriptures, prayed with the family, and distributed some tracts. Years after I met the man of the house; did not know him. He introduced himself to me, recalling the incident, and told me that his family had all joined the church, and that he was now a preacher. Oh, how glad I was to know that I had sown some good seed that day when I visited this man's house!

Another benefit of family prayer that is very precious to me I beg to relate: A dear little boy, five years old, who has lost his power of speech and sense of hearing from an attack of meningitis, by the force of example, and moved by the good Spirit of God, alternates with his father and myself in conducting family worship. He calls the family together at the hour, opens his Bible deliberately, and, by the movement of his lips, would seem to be reading a lesson; then, closing the book, and pointing upward, gives a sign for all to kneel before God and pray. Who but God alone could inspire this dear child?

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

Poverty of Spirit.

The disposition of mind and heart which in Christian theology we term "humility" is a thing unknown to heathen morality, yet it is the basis of all right action, the first among the Christian graces. Wonderful is the power of Christianity in transforming not only the lives of men, but also the meaning of words. In the Greek language the word which the gospel writers used to express humility meant originally "meanness of spirit;" but in the service of the truth what new dignity it has assumed! The grace for which it stands has redeemed and exalted the Word no less than the human being in whose heart it operates. And thus it has happened with a large number of Greek and Latin words. Their application in Christian teaching has given them new and higher shades of meaning, and rescued not a few from oblivion.

It is not a little remarkable that in pronouncing the beatitudes our Lord begins with "poverty of spirit." Human wisdom would never have pronounced a blessing upon lowliness of heart. Before Christ's coming such a spirit was almost always associated with fear and cowardice, and was regarded with contempt. But "that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." The better we understand human nature, the more do we see the wisdom of God in conditioning the acceptance of salvation upon self-abasement. The unregenerate heart is so full of pride and self-importance that, until it is emptied of these, there can not be that firm faith in God necessary to spiritual progression. Riches of grace can never be poured out upon us until we realize our utter helplessness and poverty apart from the Creator of all things.

As Matthew Henry forcefully says: "The foundation of all other graces is laid in humility. Those who would build high must begin low; and it is an excellent preparative for the entrance of gospel-grace into the soul; it fits the soil to receive the seed." Not only so, but there must be continual self-abasement, or the Christian will lose the ground he has already gained. "Pride goeth before destruction; and a haughty spirit before a fall." The kingdom of heaven is ours so long as we are poor in spirit, and no longer.

Humility, then, is the right estimation of ourselves, the conviction that in us dwells no good thing, and that all our help must come from God. Feeling thus day by day, even as Paul who esteemed himself "less than the least of all saints," we become rich in faith, and heirs of eternal salvation. To the worldling the subject of humility is utterly distasteful, "for the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit." This gracious disposition of soul, because so rarely exhibited in its purest form, is by many looked upon with coldness. And who would not turn with loathing from humility of the Uriah-Heep type? Alas! that it should be so, but base cunning and cowardice do occasionally assume the garments of meritorious lowliness.

Even in the very cultivation of lowliness of mind there lurks a danger against which we must be on our guard. Just about the time we fancy the work is entirely accomplished, we are startled to find a spirit of boastfulness which must be repressed. Benjamin Franklin, who early in life drew up a list of virtues for the regulation of his conduct, remarks of pride that even if he could conceive of having completely overcome it, he would be proud of his humility. His experience illustrates what is apt to take place in the life of every Christian. If we do not reach the point where we congratulate ourselves on our poverty of spirit, we are at least in danger of becoming like the self-righteous Pharisee, who thanked God that he was not as other men are, winding up his prayer with an enumeration of his many virtues. Let each Christian ask himself, as he recalls the parable, "Lord, is it I?"

It is only by looking often to the "rock whence we are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence we are digged," that we can have a just conception of the debt of gratitude we owe to God for all his benefits to us. When deeply conscious of our nothingness and unworthiness, we are then in the position where God can use us. Not until we are prostrate in the dust, not until we are ready to become all things to all men, are we in the true sense Christ's disciples. The real Christian does with his might whatever of good his hands find to do. He does not stop to question whether this or that act of benevolence will be easy and pleasant of performance; but into the haunts of vice, into the wretched hovels where filth and disease and want have their abode—into these he goes to carry food and clothing and physic, as well as the sunshine of God's love.

The willingness to be used is one of the best tests of humility. Church members nearly all are willing to do what suits their convenience, and what accords strictly with the proprieties; but when it comes to performing disagreeable duties or disregarding public opinion in carrying forward works of benevolence, many, alas! "are weighed in the balances and found wanting." Teaching in a mission Sunday-school, visiting the sick, speaking to sinners about their need of God—these are some of the things that not every church member having opportunity and qualifications for such work, is willing to do.

"Hast thou a lamb in all thy flock
I would disdain to feed?
Hast thou a foe before whose face
I fear thy cause to plead?"

"Would not my heart pour forth its blood
In honor of thy name?
And challenge the cold hand of death
To damp th' immortal flame?"

Happy the man who can answer as did Peter when our Lord put him to the test, "Lord, thou knowest that I love thee."

To the humble God gives grace and every blessing meet. Well has it been said: "As the lark that soars highest builds her nest lowest; the nightingale that sings the sweetest sings in the shade; the branches most laden with ripe fruit bend lowest, and the ship most laden sinks deepest in the water; so the holiest Christians are the humblest."

Irish Home Rule.

Irish Protestantism is solidly opposed to Gladstone's Home Rule policy for Ireland. A formal protest against it has been signed by nearly every Protestant minister in Ireland. It is claimed that the turning over of Ireland to Rome (for that is what Home Rule amounts to) would place the government on the hands of bad men, would most disastrously affect the material interests of the country and would imperil the civil and religious liberty and the educational interests of Protestantism. We have no doubt whatever that these men who are on the ground understand the matter far better than we in this country can do. Nevertheless, public opinion here is overwhelmingly in favor of Home Rule. This is only one of many illustrations of the fact that there is a strange perverseness in human nature which causes men to think they understand the political and sociological questions of a distant region better than those who are immediately affected thereby. It would be almost impossible to find a New Englander who does not understand the race question as it confronts the people of the South better than any man who lives in the South—i. e., he thinks he does.

North Carolina has an applicant for a pension who does not belong to the common herd of pensioners. He has been entitled to a pension for many years, but has hitherto refused to accept it, on the ground that he was able to take care of himself. Now, that he is 101 years old and unable to earn a living, he asks for a pension. He volunteered in the Confederate Army when he was sixty-seven years of age, —too old to be conscripted. His tribe is not numerous.

The Louisiana Epworth League Convention is near at hand. Let every League send delegates, and let every pastor who has no League organize one. The Epworth League in many sections is a tower of strength to our Methodism.

The Cuban War is proving a serious problem for Spain. It has already cost nearly thirty millions of dollars, besides many thousands of lives. It begins to look as if the rebels will prove too strong for the mother country. We are deeply pained to hear of the death of Rev. J. W. Ellison, of the Mississippi Conference, which occurred at Jackson on the eleventh. He was on a brief visit to Jackson when he was taken ill. A suitable memoir will doubtless be prepared in due time.

Rev. Samuel Wakefield, a minister of the M. E. Church, died at his home in West Newton, Pa., on the thirteenth. He is said to have been the oldest preacher in the M. E. He was widely known as an author, one of his publications, "Wakefield's Theology," having had an extensive circulation for many years.

The man who thinks that the Salvation Army is composed only of poor people has missed the mark. It has in its ranks men of large means. One of these, said to be a millionaire, George S. Montgomery, has organized a band for the invasion of Japan. The expenses of the expedition are to be borne by Mr. Montgomery. The commander-in-chief is to be a Jap, who was recently converted through the influence of the Army at Oakland, Cal. The project meets with the hearty approval of Gen. Booth.

A recent issue of the Texas Advocate has an able editorial congratulating the church upon the Cole Lectureship at Vanderbilt University. The first series of lectures on this foundation delivered by Bishop Wilson has been published in book form, and all hereafter delivered will be published. The next series will be by Bishop Galloway—subject, "Missions; Their Evidential Value." These lectures are to be kept up perpetually. We quite agree with Dr. Pierce that these lectures mark the beginning of a new era in Southern Methodism.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad made a test a few days since of electricity as a substitute for steam. A speed of sixty-one miles per hour was attained on an up grade, and that, too, by an engine that was not specially built for speed. The test was witnessed not only by the chief officials of the B. and O. R. R., but also by a number of practical electricians from various sections. It is believed that electricity will soon take the place of steam on all the great railway lines, and that, on a level track and with an engine constructed specially for speed, a velocity of a hundred miles per hour will soon be attained.

Among the celebrities who will attend the Epworth League Conference we mention the following: Bishop R. K. Hargrove; Dr. H. C. Morrison, our Missionary Secretary, and Dr. Carlos Martyn, of Chicago. Dr. Martyn will be recognized by our readers as one of the ablest speakers at the Chattanooga Conference, a large part of his address having been published in our columns. He is said to be a remarkably attractive speaker. His theme will be "The Devil in Politics." He might get materials for his lecture in this part of the world were it not that he hails from Chicago.

Rev. N. B. Harmon and family have been sojourning in the city for several days. Bro. Harmon reports that the new church at Bay St. Louis is approaching completion. It is quite a handsome structure, built according to one of Uncle David Morton's plans. We congratulate Bro. Harmon upon his success in this enterprise. A suitable house of worship has long been needed at Bay St. Louis. The Methodists in various parts of the State who have made contributions to this enterprise may congratulate themselves upon having made a first-class investment of the Lord's money.

The celebrated explorer, Henry M. Stanley, arrived in New York a few days since. He will spend three months in the United States and Canada. In an interview with a reporter he stated that his career as an explorer is at an end. He still feels a deep interest in the "Dark Continent," but he thinks he can do much more for the development of its magnificent resources by occupying the seat in Parliament, to which he was recently elected, than by continuing his explorations. He thinks Africa has a glorious destiny awaiting it. Its greatest need, he thinks, is railroads.

We predicted many months ago that Bishop Turner's African Colonization scheme would come to naught. We have all along believed that while a few educated negroes having some means might do well in Liberia, the importation of a large number of Southern negroes to that country would prove disastrous in the extreme. Our views on the subject are a recent deliverance from Rev. Edward Wilmot Blyden, D.D., a professor in the College of Liberia. Dr. Blyden has exceptional opportunities for forming a judgment upon this question, having filled the office of Secretary of State of the republic of Liberia for some years, and having also represented that government as a minister to Great Britain. He thinks it would be a most direful calamity if such a movement should become widespread.

Rev. Elijah H. Gammon, who died a short time since at his home in Batavia, Ill., had rather a remarkable career. His first charge was a poor circuit which paid him, all told, only $100. After he had done faithful work in the pastorate and the presiding eldership for several years, he was compelled to take a superannuated relation on account of throat affection. Delivered in this providential way from pastoral responsibilities, he engaged in secular business, vowing as he did so that his earnings, large or small, should belong to the Lord. His success was such that while he was still living he gave $5,000 to Maine Wesleyan Seminary, $10,000 to Garrett Biblical Institute, and $250,000 for founding and endowing Gammon Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Ga. There is a very old book which says, "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase. So shall thy barns be filled with plenty," etc.

Three of the five republics of Central America—viz., Nicaragua, Honduras and San Salvador—have taken steps towards the formation of a confederation of all the republics of that region. In fact, terms of confederation have already been agreed upon by the chief executives of these three governments, and there is no reason to doubt that the other two republics will join the movement in the near future. The confederation proposed is not by any means modeled after the United States government. The general government will have no such power as our government possesses. Each republic will manage its own internal affairs without any interference from the general government. One provision in the terms of agreement is highly complimentary to the United States. It is this: Whenever a dispute arises among the governments composing the confederation, the United States is to be called upon to act as arbiter. Any policy which will put an end to the internecine strife which has so long raged among these nations will be a blessing to them and to the civilized world. Central America has sufficient population and resources to take respectable rank among the nations of the earth, but will never do so under the present regime.

Off for College.

The pastor has no duty more delicate and important than to visit and encourage our young men just before they leave home for college. It is the turning-point in the life of our boys and affords the pastor a great opportunity to do good. Parents realize the importance of the occasion and feel the need of that help which the preacher alone can give them.

From all parts of Mississippi young men are preparing to enter Millsaps College, Sept. 25. I trust that every Methodist pastor in our State will see these young men as often as possible, especially those from the country. We can give them letters of introduction to the president or some other person, which will relieve them of any unnecessary embarrassment.

I hope to see the day when it will be an occasion like the departure of a missionary when our children start to our church schools. Thus we can teach them that it is an honor to attend our own colleges. Let us push the canvass until the news comes to us from Millsaps College that over three hundred students have matriculated.

Port Gibson Female College.

The 1895-1896 session of the Port Gibson Female College opened Wednesday, Sept. 11. The faculty has been completed by the addition of Miss Belle Person and Miss Ruth Drake to the literary department, and Mrs. B. E. Eskridge to that of music as instructor on stringed instruments, while Miss Eugenia Morris—beloved of all the children—will have charge of the little ones in the primary department. With this able help the school, under the direction of its capable and faithful principals, Mrs. M. H. Meek and Miss W. L. Park, is certainly deserving of the fullest confidence and patronage. We are glad that the present prospect and promise is for the best session of recent years. The terms are as low as any institution of like character and class, and anyone with a girl to educate will do well to send her to Port Gibson if they want it well done.

For further particulars write to Mrs. M. H. Meek, senior principal, Port Gibson, Miss.

East Mississippi College Opening.

The following note from President Holloman is certainly cheering. East Mississippi is one of our best schools, and we are rejoiced to know that it is receiving a good patronage.

First roll call, 81 present. Several boarders to report next week. Many local pupils not yet returned from Summer outings. Prospects exceedingly bright. Pupils coming may be classified easily up to Oct. 1.

The Advocate.

From a private letter received from Sister E. M. Montgomery, widow of the late H. H. Montgomery, of the Mississippi Conference, we make the following quotation:

The ADVOCATE is a first-grade paper to have in the family. Its pure moral tone elevates and refines; and to me it is invaluable, as it keeps me in touch with every advance church movement in my old Conference.

Whitworth College.

Whitworth College is opening well. About forty boarders present. Many more to come. Everybody is jubilant over the flattering prospect. Old Whitworth is herself again.

The above from Bro. R. D. Norsworthy is exceedingly gratifying. We hope to hear of the continued prosperity of Whitworth.

MRS. C. J. FOSTER,
Cor. Sec.

Asleep in Jesus.

The following will be read with painful interest by the numerous friends of Bro. Flowers. We bespeak for him the prayers of his brethren.

Our home is sad. The angel of death has visited us and taken away our only boy and my wife. Little Albert G. Flowers was born Oct. 3, 1890, in Clarke county, Miss., and died Sept. 6, 1895, at 4:04 A. M., near Jackson, La. Mrs. I. L. Flowers was born near Natchez, Miss., June 23, 1854; was married Jan. 11, 1887, and died Sept. 8, 1895, at 8:08 P. M. She joined our church while quite young, and died full of faith.

We laid the dear ones in the graveyard at Concord Church, 5 miles north of Jackson. Her last words were exhortations and messages to her friends and loved ones to seek Christ and to meet her in heaven. I have little Abbie with me, a girl of seven years, to cheer my heart. The dear ones are in heaven. Pray for me in this sad hour.

A. C. FLOWERS.

Gone Home.

The following note from Bro. J. C. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference, will be read with sorrow by many. We bespeak for Bro. and Sister Ellis the sympathies and prayers of the brethren of the Conference.

We are so sadly bereft. Jesus took our little darling, Lillian Lee, home yesterday at ten A. M. She can no longer throw her sweet little arms around us, but while she can not come to us, oh! God, help us live right so we can go to her. Heaven is more attractive now. One dear child on earth to stay with us, and one in heaven to go and stay with. Be sure to pray for us.

Her mama and papa,
J. C. AND JENNIE ELLIS.

Here's a Chance to Make Money!

I have worked hard all my life and never had a streak of good luck till the past year, and I think my experience may be beneficial to many others. I have cleared more than $20 a day for over a year selling Climax Dish Washers, and I think any man or woman can do as well as I have, if they only will, as I had no experience. It don't take long to get rich clearing $20 a day. Every family wants a Dish Washer, and you can sell them at home; no canvassing. That is why a lady can do as well as a man. I put a notice in the papers, and people send after the Washers. The Climax is far superior to any other Dish Washer. Everybody knows of the Climax now. For particulars address the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, and they will start you in business, if you will only push.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

A brother, in sending a list of new subscribers, writes: "I am remitting my commissions in order to circulate the paper. I believe that I shall have a better financial report by having your excellent paper in our Methodist homes."

Take Notice.

This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Sept., '97, can get this Bible at $1 35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE RAISING OF THE WIDOW'S SON
(Luke vii, 11-17.)

1. A sad condition, widowhood. Life complete in marriage. Now severance. The protector, support, gone. The strong arm on which to lean palsied in death.

(1) Dislike the special garb of widowhood. The wearer resembles the nun. It must be very uncomfortable. Some have called it the advertisement expressing meditated change.

(2) There are more widows than widowers. It speaks well for the men. Provided amply for wife. Women at watering-places; men perspiring in sultry counting-room.

(3) Widows do not fare badly in business. The laws of the land are in their favor. Chivalry aids them. Deference all around.

2. Approaching Nain, the Master and associates are met by a funeral. Who has not, broken-hearted, attended such procession?

(1) It is a heathen custom to make a funeral the occasion of a great pageant. The dead are made to feed the vanity of the survivors.

(2) Funerals should teach us that our end, too, is near. Death is but a question of time. 'Twill not be long until we will occupy the hearse.

3. The Master had compassion on this mourning widow. Told her not to weep.

(1) Sympathy is sweet. But when the heart bleeds profusely, words of men appear a hollow mockery. In such case the Holy Spirit alone can comfort.

(2) Jesus knew well the value of tears. Tears relieve, ease, allay. Thank God for tears! The advice here, not to weep, was based on his design of furnishing immediate relief.

4. Miraculously the Master restored the dead to life.

(1) He touched the bier. Wonderful touch! When he touches our heart regeneration will certainly follow.

(2) Similar to the resuscitation of Lazarus, the Lord called this youth to mortal life. "Arise!" he said, creatively. Death was ordered to surrender his prisoner, the robber his spoil, the fowler his game.

(3) Arise! Expressive word. Stand upright. In death, as in sin, men lie prostrate. Sinner, arise! Christians do not recline, recumb. Having risen from the life of sin, stand erect, walk uprightly.

As the time draws nearer, interest in the coming Epworth League Conference increases. The Union Epworth League of New Orleans is leaving nothing undone to make the Conference a complete success.

The program includes some of the best speakers in our church. In the next issue we hope to give our readers the program in full.

All delegates who expect attending will do well to write immediately to Rev. R. H. Wynn, chairman of the Committee on Homes.

HOME CIRCLE.

DOES ANYONE CARE FOR FATHER?

Does anyone care for the father?
Does anyone think of the one
Upon whose tired, bent shoulders
The cares of the family come;
The father who strives for your comfort,
And toils from day unto day,
Although his steps ever grow slower,
And his dark locks are turning gray?

Does anyone think of the due bills
He's called upon daily to pay?
Milliner bills, college bills, book bills—
There are some kind of bills every day.
Like a patient horse in a treadmill,
He works on from morning till night;
Does anyone think he is tired?
Does anyone make his home bright?

Is it right, just because he looks troubled,
To say he's as cross as a bear?
Kind words, little acts of, and kindness
Might banish his burden of care.
'Tis for you he's ever so anxious,
He will toil for you while he may live;
In return he only asks kindness,
And such pay is easy to give.

Don't Scold.

Husbands, do not scold your wives. Praise her. Do not be always telling her how much better your mother's victuals tasted than do those she prepares. A wife is very sensitive. More than one poor, little, timid wife after doing her best has given up in despair, and has become a slovenly gossip just for the want of a little timely praise.

Wives, do not scold your husband. They have faults, no doubt; who has not? Scolding never did any good, but millions have been harmed in this way. Many a kind-hearted husband has been driven to the dram-shop and gambling den because he could find no peace at home. Be cheerful; don't speak of every little pain. Make home the pleasantest place on earth. Keep the children neat and clean. Encourage them to run to meet and hug and kiss papa.

Fathers, do not scold your boys, and find fault with everything they do. Remember they have not had the experience of years as you have. Be firm, yet kind. Be a companion to them, not a stranger, and you never will regret it.

Mothers, do not scold your girls. Correct their faults pleasantly. Encourage them to confide in you, and to keep no secrets from you. Keep plenty of innocent games, and good moral and religious books and papers for girls and boys to read. Welcome their playmates, first ascertaining that they are the proper kind. Never mind if they do make disorder and confusion in the house. It will only take a few minutes to "set things to rights again." Better, far better, to keep them at home, dear, noisy, mischievous children, than to scold and find fault till they escape into the streets and highways, where evil lurks on every side.

We have brought our children into this world of temptation. Let us strive to bring them up strong to resist the evil, and willing to yield to the good influences that surround them.

Husbands, wives, fathers and mothers, be kind and loving now. Let us not wait until our loved ones are ruined, or are lying cold and dead before we show our love. Tears of regret or remorse will avail nothing then. Let us "do something for somebody quick." May we all try to make the world better and happier because we are in it.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

Growing Old Together.

It is wonderfully subtle, yet curiously simple, the interweaving of thought, feeling and desire in two who are growing old together. It is almost as if they had but one soul between them, so identified are the interests of both, so responsive are their sympathies, so instantaneous is their comprehension of each other's needs. Old husband and old wife neither very strong in these latter years, but mutually helpful and each the other's complement. One can see how incomplete would either character, either life, have been had the other been lacking, so perfectly do the two unite to make the rounded whole. If the children have grown up and gone away to their separate homes and their own work in the world, the interdependence of the old parents is the more touching, and their solitude is sweetened by a thousand associations, by uncounted memories, by a blended Christian faith and a certain indispensableness which has grown to be the very atmosphere of their being. It is lovely to see the children, and the grandchildren are an unspeakable pride and delight. When these come back to the old nest it rings with mirth and glad elation, but even the children are not essential to the parents in the sense in which they are essential to each other.

Time was when there were angles and sharp points which now and then caused a moment's pain, when the two hearts, passionately loving though they were, knew occasional antagonisms, or at least irritations which led to friction. But in the daily intercourse of many fruitful years the angles have worn away; they are no longer hurt by misunderstandings, their differences of opinion are gone. In growing old together they have grown nearer to each other.—Mrs. M. E Sangster, in the Congregationalist.

Influence of Books.

A Puritan divine named Sibbs wrote a booklet called "The Bruised Reed." A copy of this was given by a humble layman to a little boy at whose father's house he had been entertained over night. That boy was Richard Baxter, and the book was the means of his conversion. Baxter wrote his "Call to the Unconverted," and among the multitudes led to Christ by it was Philip Doddridge. Doddridge wrote the "Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul," and "the time would fail us to tell" its blessed influence. By it Wilberforce was converted, and of his life and labors volumes could be written. Wilberforce wrote his "Practical View of Christianity," and this not only led Doctor Chambers into the truth, but also Leigh Richmond to Christ. Richmond wrote "The Dairyman's Daughter," which has been published in a hundred different languages, and over five million copies have been sold.

Carey's compassion for benighted men was first awakened by reading Cook's "Voyage Round the World." Buchanan's "Star in the East" led Judson to be a missionary, and untold has been the influence of the apostle of Burmah in heathen lands and at home. Some one has said, "The debt of literature to Christ is that of vegetation to light;" and so we may say that all helpful and religious books derived their potency from the Book of books, the Holy Bible, "which is able to make us wise unto salvation." — Rev. John Gordon.

Making the Best of It.

Not long ago a bedraggled bumble bee taught us a lesson. We found him on a sunshiny morning, after a night of storm, perched on a flower, trying to get the tangle out of his legs, and free his wings from their agglutinated condition, and meanwhile bathing in the sunlight and extracting a bit of honey from the blossom. That flower was for the time his little world, and he was making the best of it. Small as was his sphere and forlorn as was his condition he had found sweetness and sunshine to cheer him after the darkness and the tempest. As we watched him we saw him grow more cheery and lusty, and in a little while he spread his wings and flew on his way rejoicing. We would spoil the incident were we to homilize upon it, but it did seem to us that the bee's message, appropriated and applied, might find a voice in the poet's admonition to himself:

"Rise, my soul, and stretch thy wings,
Thy better portion trace;
Rise from transitory things
Toward heaven, thy dwelling-place."

— Central Advocate

A More Kindly Judgment.

How the good traits of our loved ones become magnified in our sight after we have laid them away to rest! We almost forget that they ever had any faults. How much better it would be if we would see less of the faults and more of their good traits while they are with us!—Kansas Christian Advocate.

Cherish Your Girlhood.

Dear girls, don't be so often wishing you were grown-up women that you will neglect your girlhood. In the rush and hurry of these fast times, there is danger that you will reach and strain after "young ladyhood" too much.

Be girls awhile yet—tender, joyous, loving, obedient and industrious. Womanhood, with its privileges and power, its burdens and its trials, will come soon enough. On this point one has said: "Wait patiently, my children, through the whole limit of your girlhood. Go not after womanhood; let it come to you. Keep out of public view. Cultivate refinement and modesty. The cares and responsibilities of life will come soon enough. When they come, you will meet them, I trust, as true women should. But, oh, be not so unwise as to throw away your girlhood. Rob not yourself of this beautiful season which wisely spent will brighten all your future life."—Christian Intelligencer.

Lord Macaulay paid a very tender tribute to the memory of his mother:

"Children, look in those eyes, listen to that dear voice, notice the feeling of even a single touch bestowed upon you by that hand! Make much of it while yet you have that most precious of all good gifts, a loving mother. Read the unfathomable love of those eyes; the kind anxiety of that tone and look, however slight your pain. In after-life you may have friends; but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which none but a mother bestows. Often do I sigh in the struggles with the hard, uncaring world, for the sweet, deep security I felt when, of an evening, nestling in her bosom, I listened to some quiet tale suitable to my age, read in her untiring voice. Never can I forget her sweet glances cast upon me when I appeared asleep; never her kiss of peace at night. Years have passed away since we laid her beside my father in the old churchyard; yet still her voice whispers from the grave, and her eye watches over me, as I visit spots long since hallowed to the memory of my mother."

Parents sometimes imagine that there is no use in educating their children except for the professions; that a boy who intends to be a farmer or a mechanic or a day laborer needs no training in the universities. This sort of reasoning implies that the parents' judgment is infallible, and that their foreknowledge is absolute. None but God can tell what is before a child. There is probably no branch of knowledge which a sensible person, whatever his vocation, may not turn to some excellent purpose. The day is past when ignoramuses can expect to accomplish much in the battle of life. The popular idea is to develop everywhere educated farmers, trained workmen, and skilled laborers. Every person should seek to excel in his own calling. It is well to acquire learning which is adapted to the requirements of our chosen vocation, but all kinds of culture help us more or less. It is better that a clod-hopper should know Greek than that a minister of the gospel should be untaught in the classics.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

The surest way to spread evil is to abuse evil doers. The world can be tolled almost anywhere; but crack your whip as you may, you can not drive people into anything—except politics. We never thought bloomers would outlast a season until some preachers got to calling bloomerites ugly names.—Richmond Advocate.

HYGIENE.

Indigestion.

BY RACHEL SWAIN, M. D.

The cure of indigestion comes largely through right thinking, through moderation in all things, and through plain, wholesome living, with well-selected, well-prepared food in proper combination. The habit of masticating the food thoroughly should be formed; life in the open air, keeping the surface of the skin and bowels clean, will also facilitate the growth toward health. In short, the observance of the following rules, together with judicious selections in the matter of diet, will greatly facilitate the health processes and tissue changes of those suffering from indigestion.

Select your food in moderation, from grain, fruits and nuts; also eat regularly. Use freely of well-baked bread, made from the best quality of Graham flour. Abstain from all stimulating foods and drinks; from fish, flesh or fowl, and from alcoholic fluids. Three-fourths of the human system is fluid, and can be replenished with pure water or juicy fruits. Organic fluids are as needful as the solids in building up the body.

Observe regularity in all things, in sleeping as well as in eating and drinking; and sleep at least three hours before midnight. Let your underclothing be of light, all-wool material, suspended from the shoulders, and equally distributed over the body. Keep the skin clean by judicious bathing, or by daily rubbing the body with a Turkish towel wet in cold, hot or warm water, according to the power of the system to react. Avoid getting chilled during or after a bath. Practice deep breathing through the nostrils, keeping the mouth closed.

Live in the open air and sunshine as much as possible, and exercise systematically and daily every muscle, but not to weakness or exhaustion. This will stimulate the action of the capillaries, and eliminate morbific matter from the system before disease germs have time to get a foothold. Let your occupation be one that is the least injurious; one that is useful and to your liking, and employ yourself at it about eight hours daily, but not until fatigued. Cultivate a spirit of healthfulness; a determination to be well. Do not worry; do not get angry, these feelings interfere with the natural secretions. Be self-controlled, and hopeful.—Health Culture.

The Value of Sleep.

Women who sleep a great deal and comfortably, who are addicted to "cat-naps," and regard nine hours of wholesome rest as absolutely requisite to their physical well-being, are the women who defy the frosting hand of time. These are the women whose wrinkles are few and far between, and whose eyes remain the brightest and cheeks the rosiest for the longest period after the bloom of youth has fled. No less notable a beauty than Diane de Poitiers, who retained her irresistible loveliness until her seventieth year, recognized the value of sleep as a preventive of wrinkles. Indeed, so fearful was she of losing a moment of perfect rest that, mistrusting the beds of her friends, she carried her own with its splendid fittings on all her journeys.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SAVORY STEAK.—Put several thin slices of nice bacon in a hot frying pan, and when beginning to curl, add two good-sized white onions, or a single small Spanish onion cut in rings; when beginning to brown, add a pound of lean steak out into collops, and beaten with the back of a knife until the fiber is somewhat broken; season with pepper and salt, and when this, also, is cooked a rich brown, add sufficient water to form a rich gravy; simmer until the meat is tender, sprinkle over a tablespoonful of minced parsely and the juice of half a lemon. The fact that this recipe was given a friend by a native cook of Brazil will not, we hope, prejudice anyone against it as a "foreign mess" until they have tried it.—Selected.

SPINACH SALAD.—Take a quart of young, tender, spinach leaves, put in a salad-bowl with spring onions cut up fine and a sprig of mint, adding a little chopped-up parsley. Pour on the dressing and garnish with hard-boiled eggs and some slices of beet.—Ex.

In Memoriam.

Dr. W. H. Lyon, long a local preacher in this country, was born in Putnam county, Ga., in 1809; moved to Chambers county, Ala., in 1843, and to Holmes county, Miss., in 1858; and died at his home near Lexington, July 14, 1895, in the eighty-seventh year of his age.

Dr. Lyon did much to plant and much for the upbuilding of Methodism in this country. Though driven to the necessity of practicing medicine and preaching school for the support of a growing family, he never lost sight of the fact that his chief business in life was to preach the gospel of Christ. As a preacher, he was remarkably gifted. In the days of his strength he had few equals. Eloquent, strong, powerful, realizing that his message was from God unto perishing men, his appeals were often sublime. Many have been awakened and brought to Christ by his ministry. Bro. Lyon was also powerful in prayer. A man of faith, he would wrestle until he prevailed with God. The whole sixty years of his ministry were spent in the local ranks, though he traveled much as a supply.

In 1891 he lost his wife, to whom he was much devoted. This, to him, was indeed a heavy stroke; but, like the good man he was, it appeared to make him even more heavenly minded than before. "In age and feebleness extreme," unable to preach, he spent much of his time with his pen. Among other things, he had written some beautiful tributes to the memory of his wife, in which were some of the finest thoughts that the writer remembers to have ever read. Had they not been consumed in a fire that rendered him homeless last December, we would like to see some of them in print.

After the usual church funeral services, he was buried by the Masonic fraternity, of which he was long an honored member, and by whom he was held in the highest esteem, at Hebron Church, on the spot he himself had selected as his last resting-place.

"Servant of God, well done,
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

OBITUARIES.

FULMER—L. D. FULMER was born in Pickens county, Ala., Sept. 30, 1832, and died at his home in Lafayette county, Miss., Aug. 13, 1895.

He was the youngest of ten children; leaves the other nine, a wife, and two little ones, to mourn his death. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church at Free Springs years ago, and lived faithful in Christ to the last. When he died his feet were set firmly on the Rock of a living faith. His last words to the bereaved companion were giving her the blessed assurance of entering into the joy of the Lord. He was taken with typhoid fever Aug. 1, and gradually grew weaker until the morning of the thirteenth day, when the death angel called him home.

After brief, but very appropriate, services by Rev. N. F. Metts, witnessed by many friends and relatives, his remains were buried in the family cemetery with Masonic ceremonies, he being an honored member of that body.

His life on earth will be long remembered, and his place in the family can never be filled; so we mourn his loss most grievously. It fills our hearts with aches and pains when we think of the loved one that is gone, though there is joy in the divine Lord's promise to comfort those who seek to live with Christ again.

May the bereaved companion and little ones live in that perfect peace which springs from a consciousness of right to where all conflicts with the flesh shall cease, and then join the loving husband and gentle father in that spirit-land where joy doth never cease!

Drift of Population to Cities and Its Significance

The closing decades of this century are witnessing no more remarkable phenomenon than that shown in the migration of population, not so much from country to country, as from place to place in the same country. This interior migration is most noticeable in the most progressive lands. In Australia, for example, the rural districts prosper and a few great cities grow enormously, while all the intermediate communities are relatively stagnant; but in the United States the drift is unmistakably from the farms to the nearest village, from the village to the town, and from the town to the city. The newest portion of the Western States, which are still in progress of settlement, have not as yet felt the full effect of the centripetal attraction, for population tends to spread out into a more or less uniform density; but wherever immigration has ceased the new forces quickly begin to tell, and throughout the older settled States, in New York as well as in Illinois and Iowa, a universal and all-powerful current has set in, sweeping everything toward the centres. This transplantation has most far-reaching effects. Politically, it transfers a preponderance of power to the great cities, changing the results of important elections, and increasing the urgency of municipal problems. Socially, it swells the number of the classes most exposed to agitation and discontent, intensifies the dangers to be apprehended from social upheavals, and widens the growing chasm between the classes. It concentrates the wealth of the nation into fewer hands, and reacts profoundly upon the material, social and political life of the entire nation. The importance of this migration, therefore, is hardly to be overestimated. It is a striking characteristic of our period—that it is a period of universal transition, in which large masses of people, apparently against their own interests, leave the country, where homes are cheap, the air pure, all men equal, and extreme poverty unknown, and crowd into cities where all these conditions are reversed. When this movement has proceeded too fast, and the cities have become swollen with a surplus population for which there is no employment, when urban expansion has far outrun the growth of the contributory territory, and this condition has become excessive and universal, a panic interrupts this concentration for a time, until the proper balance between town and country is re-established. The more rapid, therefore, the process of centralization, the more frequent and intense must be the periods of depression needed to correct it.—Forum.

The Color Line.

We transfer to our columns, i this impression, what the Ep worth Herald, the Epwort League organ of the Method Episcopal Church, says on th color line in the Leagues, grow ing out of the incident at Chatta nooga. Just as well face th facts at once, for the war is on and a break in the relations no existing between Leagues of th two Methodisms is inevitable What they propose is that w shall accept, without even th right to question its propriety their dictation of policy, eve though they do not follow themselves. By their fanaticism on a similar line, they forced division of the church in 1844 and now they will dictate term of friendship among Leaguers or destroy the pleasant relation already existing. Southern Leaguers will not wear the yok which they have constructed fo their necks, hence the labor ha been in vain. In this matter w speak from our well-know knowledge of the feelings o Southern people, and from ex pressions which have come t us, leaving no doubt of their p sition at this point. A word t the wise is sufficient.—Centra Methodist.

VOL. 42.—NO. 39. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1895. WHOLE NO. 2040

Rev. W. C. BLACK, D. D., Editor and Publisher. } PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH. { ENTERED AT THE POST-OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

"Local Preachers—And Evangelists."

The editorial of Dr. Hoss on this subject is timely and strong, and deserves to be read by the whole church. But there are other reflections on this great question that need airing, in order that these people may the better understand themselves and the church. Not to speak of the great flood-tide of worldliness they are pouring into the church on a mere show of hands, they are constantly meddling in the most delicate and complicated local church matters. All that any of them need to make them equal to the gravest emergency is to be invited into the church where it exists. The prudence and prayers of the wise and careful pastor, who knows all the facts and knows the dangers, are all matters of contempt in the wisdom and methods of this self-constituted hero of the occasion. He sneers and ridicules the factions into unity, and then some enthusiast catalogues the marvelous results in the nearest church paper, and that is all the general public knows of the matter. The ill-fed pastor—and church, too—suffers the terrific rebound of evangelistic cheek and imprudence in silence. These things can not be published in church papers, as the act would only intensify differences, and render more hopeless all efforts to effect genuine reconciliation.

But let God be praised, and the church thanked, that she has men and women who are watching the trend of things, and who have the courage of their convictions. These evangelists sound in their direful threats of what the next General Conference will do for them, and against those who oppose them. It is a matter of consternation on all sides that the council of last resort is composed of an equal number of laymen and preachers, and can afford to abide the decision.

Another point that demands careful thought is the assumption that the administration of the church is at fault, because the Holy Spirit honors the irregularity of the evangelist by converting souls under their ministry. Bishops, presiding elders, preachers, laymen and churches are held up and censured as fighting against God because they presume to require respect for law, and the most solemn vows that man can make to God and to the church; and they are threatened with the most direful vengeance of God for their resistance of his approval. To hear them talk, and to read their press communications, one might suppose the whole church was gone after strange gods, while only a small handful were standing near the cross. There is at least some comfort in the statement of Scripture that the vagaries of the ego do not make facts of mistakes. Elias thought he was the only good man left in Israel until God informed him there were seven thousand other men as good as he.

But what of the fact and of the charge? Suppose the conversions were ten times as many as they are, must we accept that fact as proof that the Holy Spirit approves their disregard of the vows they have vowed to obey, and that disproves the administration that requires obedience? If so, it also follows that the law, the vow and the administration are all wrong, and that the Holy Spirit can not approve them, and it will never do to assume that the Holy Spirit approves a wrong that evil may come. But if the unparalleled growth and development of the M. E. Church, South, is not a proof of the Holy Spirit's approval of her laws and the loyalty of her membership, can it be claimed that the success of evangelists is proof of their discipline being accepted? But is the appeal to effect proof that the Holy Spirit approves the cause? In Phil. 1 Paul tells us of a certain class of bold men who preached Christ for more than pure motives, and yet the "truth of Jesus Christ" turned their preaching to good account to him. Many contend that Paul or the Holy Spirit approved these men and their preaching because good came of it.

Few years ago there was one of the worst of the vile of impostors imposed upon the Mississippi Conference, and was in charge of one of the first circuits, and an almost unparalleled success attended his ministry of the people. Are we to accept his great success as proof that the Holy Spirit approved the vile man? The thought is blasphemous!

It will be understood that I do not say, nor yet so much as intimate, that evangelists are bad characters; but I do hold that the fact the Holy Spirit uses their work for good to souls can not be accepted as proof that he approves the fact that they are laboring not only without law, but against the law they have vowed to keep. The Holy Spirit stands pledged to enter every heart, and to do his perfect work where resistance is not offered; and whenever that resistance is yielded in good faith, the Holy Spirit stands pledged to honor the fact, regardless of the antecedent cause or causes by which it is produced.

Letter from Switzerland.

Several days ago we left England. After crossing the channel, which was smooth and beautiful, we landed at Calais, and were soon passing swiftly through the sunny slopes of la belle France. I have never seen a fairer land. In every direction the eye was gladdened by the most brilliant landscapes, flower-covered plains, picturesque hills, calm little lakes, and limpid streams. The soil is divided with as much precision, and cultivated to as high degree, as in Great Britain. The trees seem to have been planted, every one, as they grow in the most stately rows not only about the handsome country houses, but on the farms. Aboundosk we reached the town where Joan of Arc met her unhappy fate. A wretched night was spent locked up in a compartment with seven ladies in a continental car, which is such a horror to all travelers who have ever enjoyed the luxury of a sleeper on our great American lines of railway. We decided to forgive Mr. Pullman for his connection with the Chicago strike if he would come to Europe and introduce his magnificent system.

Next morning we passed over into Swiss territory. We realized at once that we had got into finer atmosphere and on higher ground. The cars here are very much like ours, large and comfortable. The felt upholstery gives them quite an air of elegance. At noon we crossed Lake Thun, which lies like an exquisite gem in the heart of the great mountains that surround it on all sides. The scenery of Switzerland surpasses in beauty and majesty any conception that can be formed from the description of travelers. Its waters are the bluest, clearest, sunniest, shiniest, most opalescent; its mountains the grandest, wildest, most stupendous; rock-ribbed, rugged, and crowned everlastingly with snow. Grindelwald is a famous resort high up in the Bernese Alps. The town consists of several hotels, a few stores, many bazars where curios are sold to tourists, and a few charming "chalets." Among the last is that of Madame D'Aubigne, the wife of the great writer. The adjacent hills are covered with the quaint huts of the peasants. One little church, antique in structure, occupies a prominent place, and adds to the generally striking effect. The mighty Jungfrau and Matterhorn keep eternal watch over the hamlet and its kindly, simple people. It is here that Dr. Henry Luun, the editor of The Review of the Churches, has established a European Chautauqua. The leading purpose of this is to accomplish church unity. Ministers of every religious faith gather here through the Summer months to discuss in a brotherly way their beliefs and creeds, with a view of coming nearer together in thought and purpose. For four delightful, never-to-be-forgotten days we have been in these rarified regions, growing nearer to God with every breath, and abounding in health and thankfulness. Each night services are held, where prominent speakers entertain a cultivated audience. With every sunrise parties begin excursions through the mountains, some riding on horseback, others in carriages or on railways. To-day we have been to the very edge of glaciers, and have looked down into the clefts of interminable blue ice; we have climbed to the tops of peaks; have walked over beds of snow; have watched avalanches fall in a splendor of misty whiteness, and have listened to their thunderous reverberations. Up to a wonderfully high altitude flowers of every hue and shape blossom luxuriantly. The further we climb the fewer they appear, but rarer in quality. Below are daisies, buttercups, cowslips, and alpine roses in great quantities; beyond are violets, pansies, and forget-me-nots, while at the summit, in the midst of snow and ice, is found only the edelweiss. The grass grows green and luscious along with the flowers. The herdsmen drive their cattle higher and higher up the mountains as the Spring advances, and build temporary homes in which to live and guard them. As the Winter approaches they are driven into the valleys below. The women work in the fields as regularly as the men; at this season they are cutting hay. Often one sees women hitched to carts, with men drawing heavy loads of hay, or bearing burdens on their backs. Recently I saw a man between two women drawing a wagon. The women dress in the costume peculiar to their country, except a few who appear much like the rest of the feminine world. The men, while working, wear colored blouses which reach to their knees. We have been into the homes of the people, and wonder how they manage to live through the terrible Winters. Their homes are no better, as a rule, than the negro cabins on our Southern plantations in the United States. They do not use nails in building their houses. The roofing is held down by stones. Many of the people of the earth live like sparrows, but our Father in heaven knows and cares for them all.

Grindelwald Switzerland, June 27, 1895.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jno. R. Countiss, P. C., Lehrton, Miss., Sept. 11: "We have just closed our protracted meetings on Lehrton circuit. The Lord was with us in great power. Twenty-five persons were added to the church. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. A. Randolph, and Revs. D. M. Miller and J. C. Woodruff, local preachers, rendered valued assistance. Praise the Lord for his great work among us."

Rev. Herman W. Knickerbocker, Lake Providence, La., Sept. 12: "Have just closed a meeting in which my brother, Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker, assisted. Although I was sick most of the time, the Lord was with us, and we had a good time. Membership revived, about fifteen conversions, and eight accessions to the church. Have a good Sunday-school, good congregations, good parsonage, a liberal-cultured people, and the Lord is with us."

Rev. E. E. Laogford, P. C., North Kemper charge, Sept. 20: "I have just finished my round of revivals for this charge (six in number) with glorious results. Thirty or 35 conversions, with 27 additions to the church, and three for other churches. I received able assistance from Rev. K. J. Jones, P. E., Meridian; Rev. G. H. Thompson, Lauderdale; Rev. C. M. Crossley, Lauderdale; Rev. D. Scarborough, Meridian, and Rev. H. W. Van Hook, DeKalb. Spiritual state of charge good."

Rev. Jno. D. Ellis, Anguilla, Miss., Sept. 18: "The Lord has greatly blessed us this year. Up to date meetings held by the preachers in charge, and others assisted in by Bro. W. W. Hopper and Slater Snell, have resulted in the conversion and sanctification of 150 souls, and 55 accessions to the Methodist Church. We have other meetings yet to hold, and expect victory. The church is in good condition, comparatively, and we will have a good report for Conference. Prospects good to build a new church on the work and a parsonage at Rolling Fork."

Hineston, La., Sept. 19: "Have just closed a warm meeting at this place. Results: Two conversions and accessions, and the church waked up, and many under deep conviction. The sinners here are indeed hard cases, and are not easily moved. They are what we call, in a certain sense, moral people—righteous in their own conceit. Bro. Grace did most of the preaching, and preaching it was, too—full of pith and point, and set on fire of the Spirit. His were 'thoughts that breathe and words that burn,' and it was a gracious treat to hear him. Bro. P. Swann, a local preacher, and Bro. Monroe, of the Congregational Church, also rendered me efficient service in declaring the glad tidings. Spring Creek circuit is improving. We are building a neat, substantial and commodious church at the Rapides Camp Ground, which we hope to complete before Conference. Pray for us."

Rev. J. P. Moore, P. C., Okolona, Miss., Sept. 15: "We are through with all our meetings except one. Have had 85 professions, 63 accessions, 30 new family altars, doubled the membership at some points. The Lord be praised for his presence with pastor and people of the Okolona circuit. Many thanks to Bros. Shumaker, B. B. Sullivan, Bogan, East and Parrott for their earnest help. May God bless them in their labors!"

Rev. C. C. Grisham, Sept. 12: "We are closing our protracted meetings on the Tooooopola circuit. We have had about 50 conversions and about 40 additions to date. We will hold one more meeting. This has been a hard year for revivals. Politics have run high. We have had but little help on the work, as there is no local preacher. Bro. J. W. Honnoll, of Holly Springs, preached four days and nights at Tooooopola, and endeared himself to us all. We would be glad to see him here again. Finances behind. We are improving the parsonage this week. God bless the ADVOCATE!"

Rev. J. F. Wynn, Baker, La., Sept. 20: "Am glad to report another successful meeting. Our services at Deer Ford embraced the second and third Sabbaths. Bro. R. W. Tucker preached three sermons, which were highly appreciated. On Tuesday evening the Lord sent Bro. Lallance, whose faithful labors were crowned with success. Bro. Anders came in and conducted the last service. Christians were quickened, backsliders reclaimed, and penitents were pardoned. As nearly everyone in this community is a church member, only two were added to our list. I have never served a kinder people than I find on East Baton Rouge circuit. I think our collections will all be in full."

Rev. W. G. Borks, P. C., Jonesboro, Miss., Sept. 21: "We have held our last two meetings on the Jonesboro circuit for this season, resulting in 16 conversions at camp ground, where Rev. L. A. McKeown did the preaching 'with the demonstration of the Spirit and of power;' and in 6 conversions and 3 accessions at Ebenezer, where the pastor had no assistance. At camp ground there were 12 accessions; others may join. Jonesboro is moving up. We expect to report at Conference two new churches building and a good parsonage secured during the year. Besides this, we will paint and repair one church. Collections behind, but we are doing what we can to raise them. Think we will excel last year's report. Pray for us, brethren."

Rev. W. G. Roberts, P. C., Franklinton mission, Sept. 18: "We have held two meetings up to date; one at Tally's Chapel. We had a good three-days' meeting. Rev. W. H. Benton came to help me on Monday. No help Saturday or Sunday, but the Lord was with us. Five accessions to the church at that place. We closed a meeting at Pleasant Valley on the sixteenth. We had a good meeting at that place. Ten accessions to the church. One mother seventy-two years of age joined the church, and a son and granddaughter. Three generations were received in the church by Rev. W. H. Benton. He did some fine preaching. I will close before this goes to the waste-basket. We have received eighteen in all. Pray for us."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Summit, Miss., Sept. 19: "I am at home sick with fever, caused, I suppose, from overwork and overheat. I hope to be up and at work again in a few days. My meetings have been held with good results. Quite a number of our people, both old and young, have had a wonderful spiritual uplift, and are beginning to realize something of the saving and sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost. Too many of our people are satisfied with a mere nominal profession of religion, and are not seeking after the 'fullness of the blessing of Christ.' Bro. C. L. Chilton, of Montgomery, Ala., did most of the preaching in two of my meetings, and he did it well. People of all denominations were charmed with him and his preaching. About twenty have united with our church on profession of faith. Several bright conversions and quite a number sanctified. Upon the whole, so far we have had a pleasant and prosperous year. One new church built at Norfield, three miles south of Bogue Chitto. Finances behind."

Rev. Wilson Moore: "We have about completed our protracted meetings, and, while the results are not altogether satisfactory, a goodly number have been converted and added to the church. Our first meeting was in the town of Winfield, where we had several conversions and 7 accessions. We were assisted the first week by Bro. Roy, of Columbia. Bro. Roy preached a straight gospel, but it did not fall very sweetly on the ears of those who were contented with a sinful life. Our next meeting was on the Saline, where we witnessed several conversions and 6 accessions to the church. We were assisted in this meeting by Bro. W. F. Sanders. Our next meeting was on Fish Creek, which did not result satisfactorily. Our next was at Atlanta, which also was a drag. Our next meeting was at Liberty Chapel, where we witnessed 7 or 8 conversions, and 3 accessions. It was the opinion of some that Liberty Chapel was dead, but such allimers were given to hyperbole. Our meeting at Liberty lasted eight days, and the Lord was with us at every service. The presiding elder was with us three days, during which time he did some efficient preaching. Bro. Davies grows in favor with the people. We have one more meeting to hold, which we hope will be a success. We will close for this time."

Rev. J. H. Smith, Olive Branch, Miss., Sept. 18: "I send some account of Olive Branch circuit. I am just through with protracted meetings for the season. Have had some good meetings. The meeting at Oak Grove, just closed, was a decided success. Church revived, backsliders reclaimed, about 20 conversions, 16 joined the church. All praise to the Lord, who must give the increase, though Paul preach and Apollos water. We had some good help in the way of preaching. Bro. G. H. Jacobs, our faithful pastor at Mt. Pleasant, was with us, and did valuable work. His only business here below is to cry, Behold the Lamb!' The simple story of the cross is the great saving and drawing power with him. No clap-trap methods are respected with him. May his like ever remain among us to hold and give success to our Zion! We had also a young preacher, Bro. C. P. Moss, of Byhalia, with us; son of Bro. John Moss, of precious memory, whose dying prayer was not lost when he asked that his two boys be preachers of the gospel, and truly the father's mantle has fallen upon this son. His soul is aflame with love to God and his fellow-men, and he has a message that he confidently believes will be a benefit, and the people gladly hang on his earnest words. Conviction melts the hardest hearts, and mourners shout their sins forgiven, and Christians rejoice for the same grand old gospel that has been the charm of their lives. Bro. Moss will come up to our next annual gathering for admission on trial into the traveling connection. I am ready, with both hands up, to vote for all such young men, with strong bodies, vigorous minds, and consecrated lives, to have a place in the vineyard of the Master, that is so white to the harvest. We have worked under difficulties on Olive Branch circuit this year; but, praise the Lord for granting success to our labors! Among other things, I think we will report two new churches at Conference."

Rev. S. B. Myers, Arkabutla charge, Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, Sept. 17: "We have just finished our round of revival meetings. God has done for us more than we were worthy. We are not able to give the number of conversions, in and out of the church, but we have about 45 accessions, most of them on profession of faith. Old feuds were settled, family altars erected, and a general uplifting and moving out to higher attainments in the divine life. We are indebted to Bros. Dye, Lagrone, Porter, McKeown and Clifford for valuable service rendered. Bros. Dye and Lagrone are too well known to need commendation. Bro. Porter is a young local preacher of great promise. Bro. McKeown is also a local preacher of the Corinth district, whose labors, for years past, speak for him. No more worthy or earnest man belongs to the ranks. Bro. T. B. Clifford, of Courtland, one of our noble Englishmen, is making for himself a record of which he need not be ashamed. He, with his precious, consecrated wife, make a team. Bro. Clifford is earnest, enthusiastic, full of fire, and preaches with power and in demonstration of the Holy Ghost. He uses no clap-trap methods, but preaches the gospel as it is in Christ, and under it men repent, resolve, believe, and are saved. His wife is a thoroughly consecrated Christian worker, fully adapted to the work of conducting prayer, praise, and children service. They will ever live in the hearts of this people. Our meeting here may well be called a union meeting. While it was conducted in a Methodist Church and by Methodist preachers, I never saw more hearty co-operation by people of all denominations. Our meeting here was in all respects a grand success, and these people certainly enjoyed a feast of good things. The work is moving very well along all lines, and we are praying and trusting that these things are but a beginning of what shall be. Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, P. C., Walden, North Mississippi Conference: "We have a great revival in Walden. Our town is literally redeemed. Nothing like it ever in Walden before. About 90 conversions outside the churches, and more than that inside of them. Many nominal Christians took on positive character, and since you have good fellowship in determining whether they belong to the church. All old difficulties settled, all old feuds wiped out, all old wounds healed, all old tomahawks buried, and all old sinners, with the fewest exceptions, converted and brought into the church. The people have loved each other into peace, and full confidence is now restored. The town and community have closed up their long-divided ranks, and now present a solid front to the one common foe. That earnest, consecrated man of God, W. M. McIntosh, held the meeting under his large tabernacle. There was much doubt, even among the best people in town, as to the anticipated results of his labors among us. They looked forward to it with hope, and yet with fear and trembling as so many efforts had been made in Walden, and seemingly all in vain. But Bro. Mac came on time, and the Lord was with him in mighty power from the very first service. He preached the gospel which is always the 'power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth.' Some, still mocking, said they would freeze him out in four or five days; but you can't freeze a man out who is in vital touch with God. You had as well try to put out the sun with an icicle. Mac is a good, strong gospel preacher. He cries aloud and spares not. No sin or vice escapes his notice and keen rebuke. Before him all no little sinners or good moral fellows; no colonels or majors. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God. He is plain, practical, simple, pointed, earnest, and powerful; sometimes becoming eloquent under the heat and fervor of great thoughts. He is thoroughly in sympathy with the Methodist Church, her doctrines and polity, and does his work in harmony with connectional and conservative spirit. He will build up and strengthen any pastoral charge, and leave the people with a fonder love for the Methodist Church. We have many new family altars, many new Sunday-school pupils, many new people."

FIELD NOTES.

I have recently paid Rev. Ben. P. Jaco, of the Abbeville circuit, Holly Springs district, North Mississippi Conference, a ten-days' visit, including the last Sunday of August and the first Sunday of September. I helped him in a five-days' meeting at Liberty Church, twelve miles east of Abbeville, and in a two-days' meeting in the town of Abbeville. As results of the meetings, both churches seemed to be considerably revived, spiritually, and four sinners came out upon the Lord's side. I never met a more hospitable people. Bro. Jaco is a live man, and is doing a fine work all along the line. Abbeville has a good normal school; and Bro. Jaco, who seems to be especially associated for winning the love and confidence of young people, is doing a great work there, developing and utilizing the fine talents of the students and other young people of the town through a lively, working Epworth League.

I was accompanied by Bro. S. J. Wallace, a zealous young licentiate of this place, who is canvassing for the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Bro. Wallace is a young man of ability, being a graduate of the A. and M. College at Starkville, Miss. To better equip himself for the ministry, he now desires to take a two-years' course at Millsaps and a three-years' course at Vanderbilt. His means are limited, but he will soon have his one hundred, and maybe two hundred, subscribers to the ADVOCATE, and will thus avail himself of the liberal offer of free board made by the editor. Such young men are bound to succeed.

FAITH.

BY ANDREWS NORTON.

My God, I thank thee! May no thought
Ever deem thy chastisement severe;
But may th heart, by sorrow taught,
Calm each wild wish, each idle fear.

Thy mercy bids all nature bloom,
The sun shines bright, and man is gay;
Thine equal mercy spreads the gloom
That darkens o'er his little day.

Full many a throb of grief and pain
Thy frail and erring child must know;
But not one prayer is breathed in vain,
Nor does one fear unheeded flow.

Thy various messengers employ,
Thy purposes of love fulfill;
And midst the wreck of human joy
Let kneeling faith adore thy will.

Our Troubles.

We are in a world of trouble. Troubles beset us from the earliest dawn of our existence to its close. Troubles come not only upon those who do not reverence the name of God, but also upon those who are trying steadily to do his will.

Many of our troubles are purely imaginary. A diseased mind and a diseased body have a strong bias toward the unreal. A mother confined to her room from affliction, and deeply impressed with the thought that she will never recover, is very deeply concerned about her children, and what will become of them when she is gone. I knew a woman who objected seriously to her daughter's marrying a preacher on account of the hardships of itinerant life; and yet that undesired son-in-law became one of the most eloquent preachers in the church, and most successful educators in the Southern States. Her daughter's hardships were imaginary. I knew a preacher who married into a certain family much against the will of the parents, and yet he alone, of all the sons-in-law, ever attained to anything like rank, or acquired much of this world's goods. In course of time the old people had to look to him for their food and raiment. Imaginary troubles give more real pain than real ones.

Many of our troubles are the results of our own choice and doings. I choose to take a wrong step when I might have avoided it, and that same step involved me in apprehensions of danger, in moral mistakes, in physical affliction and financial disasters. Had I taken time to think, or consult the Word of God, I should have avoided such consequences, and the unhappiness of mind consequent upon my own action. We often charge our troubles to others with the greatest self-complacency. It is painful for us to acknowledge it, but it is nevertheless true, that many of our troubles are self-procured.

What use can we make of troubles? Troubles, if received with the right spirit, will wean our affections away from earth. We love the world, we seek after its wealth, and we lay ambitious schemes for our personal promotion, but our troubles sweep the virtue of these away, like the chaff before the wind. They show the utter nothingness of all sublunary things. These make heaven more dear to us. By so much as it destroys our love for earthly things, by so much does heaven become dearer to us. As we receive them, so do we find in Christ greater virtue. His mercy and goodness stand out in the fullest sense to cheer and comfort us. Christ before us endured them, and out of them has poured forth the aroma of eternal life. Life has been made sweeter on account of them; but instead of receiving them with the spirit of Christ, we often make them the occasion of murmuring. Our condition is not thus made any better, but worse. If we submit to them with love, they will be robbed of their bitterness. The bitter cup will be sweetened, and we shall find a real pleasure in them.

When they are past we are surprised how we were troubled and distressed in mind over them. They were of short duration, and were really of no great moment, and yet we felt as if the world were centered in them. We are surprised at our own weakness, and how easily we were thrown off our balance. After a few months have elapsed we laugh at our own folly and misgivings; we wonder at our cradility. But amid them all the only support we can have is the assistance of divine grace. Whether great or small, we shall find that our weakness must be supplemented with the strength of God; and when we would sink in despair, our heavenly Father will not leave us to a sad and ruinous fate. He will help us in our time of need. He who takes his case out of the hand of God will make a sad failure. He who puts himself into his arms shall gain his favor.

"Systematic Study"

The valuable article in the ADVOCATE, of the fifth of September, is of sufficient worth, to my mind at least, to call for this further notice of the subject. The requirements of the age in which we live, and the diligence enjoined upon us, insist upon study, and a great deal of it.

Bishop Keener remarked to a young preacher, at one of our Conferences lately, that an experience and observation of fifty years had shown him that when there was little study, the throat suffered from the delivery of the sermon. It is true. This is possibly the reason of some sore throats. But this is a digression.

The Methodist Church has been very lax in its requirements of ministerial candidates. The times, however, are changing. Written examinations are required in some of the Conferences, and the licensing of preachers is no longer with the Quarterly Conferences, but at the District Conferences. The reason of this is to get the best men. The time has about come when the man who habitually makes glaring grammatical blunders will be retired to the backwoods. There is nothing that reveals the man so well as his language—his past, present and future (if he remains the same). With the easy methods of instruction now pursued, any person of common sense can learn grammar and rhetoric, which, outside of the Bible, are the greatest helps to a Methodist preacher. A preacher should not sing his sermons, nor shout, and then whisper, as some do. Alas! alas! Then, in the matter of writing, great care should be exercised. A preacher has to do a great deal of writing from time to time. His writing should be clear, concise, well-punctuated, and properly capitalized. Of course, the spelling is an item also.

There is need of more systematic study on the part of many of our preachers in these simple matters, in which it is no excuse to say, "Well, my parents never sent me to school."

In their preaching and writings the apostles used language without a blemish. It follows, then, that the men who read daily the Scriptures and the choice books of theology should use good language in their preaching.

PREACHER.

Who Are Authorized to Preach Among Us?

I suppose, Mr. Editor, the answer must be, "Those who have been duly licensed to do so." If they must be licensed to preach in order to preach among us, then none but licensed persons can lawfully preach among us. This seems to me logical and clear. Who, then, is empowered to license and authorized to preach in our church? Answer: The applicant must be recommended by the society of which he is a member; by the Quarterly Conference of his circuit or station to the District Conference, which alone has power to license and authorize to preach. If, then, a preacher should invite and request an unlicensed person to preach to his congregation and conduct divine service as a preacher only is authorized to do, is not such a preacher "mending our rules" instead of "keeping them," as he promised to do? Is he not arrogating the sole prerogative of the District Conference by authorizing an unlicensed person to preach?

Such a precedent is fraught with danger and mischief. People without proper qualifications, possibly heterodox, may, by young and inexperienced preachers, be asked to officiate as ministers. As such persons are not members of Quarterly Conferences, how are we going to reach and control such people? It seems to me that our next General Conference ought to ask and answer some such question as this: 'Who shall preach among us? Answer: Only such as are licensed and in good standing." This would prevent dangerous irregularities.

Prof. Thomas Huxley.

The epitaph that has just been put on the tomb of Prof. Thomas Huxley, the great English evolutionist, who died June 29, is as follows. It is interesting for its intrinsic beauty, but especially so for the abiding faith it expresses in an overruling Purpose in spite of a lingering doubt about the hereafter.

And if there be no meeting past the grave,
If all is darkness, silence, yet 'tis rest.
Be not afraid, ye waiting hearts that weep,
For God still giveth his beloved sleep,
And if an endless sleep he wills so best.

Can there be rest where there is no life? Does a rock rest? Can there be sleep where there is no life? Does a rock sleep? What abiding faith can there be in an overruling Purpose that could purpose "endless sleep," utter annihilation, for Huxley's intellect? Remove the false metaphors, and what remains of the "intrinsic beauty" of Huxley's epitaph? E. M. N.

The cross of Christ does not make God love us. It is the outcome and measure of his love to us. He loves all his children, the clumsiest, the dullest, the ugliest, the worst of his children. His love lies at the back of everything, and we must get upon that as the solid foundation of our religious life, not growing up into that, but growing up out of it.—Mark Guy Pearse.

Correspondence.

Letter from Nashville.

BY REV. W. M. LEFTWICH.

It is not an easy matter for one in my work to find time to write for the press. Whenever I can snatch a little rest from this intense toil and unrelaxed labor, I am willing to give my impressions to the press for whatever they are worth. But no man knows the intense tension of brain and nerve and heart in constant revival work who has not tried it. It tests a man's powers of endurance at every point; and unless he makes up his mind to become artificial or mechanical, he will have his very bones set on fire by the zeal of the Lord's house. A passion for souls baptized by the Holy Ghost is necessary to success; and this is better than all the clap-trap methods and sensational attractions that can be substituted for it.

My circuit this year has been of good size, extending from the Ohio to the Gulf, and from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. The journeys that cost Asbury many months and great hardships I can accomplish in a few days in palace coaches. He worked upon the foundations; we work among the golden fruits of an ever-widening harvest. He was an apostolic evangelist, burning his way through primeval forests with apostolic zeal for souls, following the trail of the pioneer to his rude cabin, and planting the seeds of Methodism with the first grain that was put into the virgin soil. To "do the work of an evangelist" now is to be under fire from start to finish, and to disturb the peace of Zion. Has it ever occurred to you that all of this strange discussion of evangelists, and still stranger administration concerning local preachers, has a deeper providential significance than we have yet discovered? While some wise men are saying that we have too much law now on the subject of evangelists, and others, equally wise, are saying that we have not enough law, that we need special legislation to regulate the functions of this class of preachers; and while some are saying that recent decisions in District Conferences by those in authority are extra-judicial, and others are waxing hot in their invectives against evangelists, has it ever occurred to you that we are not wise enough to see the movement of a power that we dare not resist? We need less discussion and more patient, prayerful study of this singular movement that has come in our day in the church of God, and which seems to be irrepressible. What does it all mean? The wise counsel of the famous rabbi may well be applied now: "And now I say unto you, refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to naught: but if it be of God, ye can not overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God." There may be irregularities in it, and evils; but the evils may be increased by the methods adopted to remove them. Of one thing we may be assured: the measures adopted in some quarters and by some officials to remedy the evils complained of are evidently multiplying them, while they complicate the administration of the law. When men undertake to so construe the law of the church as to make it support their prejudices against a class, they bring the administration of law into contempt. St. James speaks on this wise: "But if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge." We have many such. Suppose we call a halt and go to asking God for wisdom, that we may know what Israel ought to do. The church is being seriously divided in some places and disturbed in more places by the discussion; but God is reviving his work and saving sinners through it all.

"Get Away from the Crowd."

The following from Robert Burdette has been a source of help to some. I give it, thinking, perhaps, some other young man may get some good from it: "Get away from the crowd a little while every day, my dear boy. Stand one side, and let the world run by, while you get acquainted with yourself; find out all you can about yourself. Ascertain, from original sources, if you are really the manner of man people say you are; and if you are always honest; if you always tell the square, perfect truth in business deals; if your life is as good and upright at eleven o'clock at night as it is at noon; if you are as good a temperance man on a fishing-excursion as you are at a Sunday-school picnic; if you are as good a boy when you go to Chicago as you are at home; if, in short, you are really the sort of man your father hopes you are, and your sweetheart believes you are. Get on intimate terms with yourself, my boy, and believe me, every time you come out from one of these private interviews you will be a stronger, better, purer man. Don't forget this, Telemachus, and it will do you good."—Selected.

Blistering Our Feet for Satan and for Christ.

A preacher, who is well-known throughout the United States, in walking the length of the hotel piazza at a Summer watering-place, met a lady friend hastening toward the breakfast room. It was late in the morning. A casual remark of the gentleman as to the lateness of the hour for breakfast, led to the following remark: "I am late because I was tired. I danced last night until I blistered my feet."

"May I ask one question?" the preacher said, and with consent he asked: "Did you ever blister your feet in the service of your Redeemer?" A scornful look and a hasty retreat were the result. A bystander and mutual friend remarked that the question was faithful, though rather severe. The two wondered what would come of it.

For several days the lady avoided her friends, and, in fact, was invisible. Nearly a week passed. Then followed an interview at the request of the offended lady, who, with real distress, confessed that, although angry at the preacher's question, she had been unable to justify herself, nor had sleep been possible since the morning of her confusion. "God has forgiven me," she said, "I come to ask your pardon, and that you will tell me how I can blister my feet in the service of Christ. I am ready to do it now, and before I do anything else; I want to do it very much indeed; I want to make myself weary in his service. I will do anything to atone for the waste and folly of the past. It has been so heartless of me."—The Conporture.

Take Time for the Bible.

As we drift along the swift, relentless current of time toward the end of life; as days and weeks and months and years follow each other in breathless haste, and we reflect now and then for a moment that at any rate for us much of this earthly career has passed irrevocably, what are the interests, thoughts—aye, the books—which really command our attention? What do we read, and leave unread? What time do we give to the Bible? No other book, let us be sure of it, can equally avail to prepare us for that which lies before us; for the unknown anxieties and sorrows which are sooner or later the portion of most men and women; for the gradual approach of death; for the period, be it long or short, of waiting and preparation for the throne and face of the eternal Judge. Looking back from the world, how shall we desire to have made the most of our best guide to it! How shall we grudge the hours we have wasted on any—be they thoughts or books or teachers—which only belong to the things of time!—Canon Liddon.

I do not believe any man ever yet genuinely, humbly, thoroughly gave himself to Christ without some other finding Christ through him.

When I see society conceiving no higher purpose for its activities than amusement; when I consider how many of our brightest men have written the word agnostic on their banner, as if not to know anything, or to consider anything incapable of being known, were a condition to shout over, and not to mourn over; when I see all these things, I can not help feeling as if there came something very like the echoes of the old Hebrew cry, "Let not God speak to us, lest we die."

Great is the power of a life which knows that its highest experiences are its truest experiences; that it is most itself when it is at its best. What a piece of the man was for that shining instant, it is the duty of the whole man to be always.

Our creed is not what we have thought, but what our Lord has told us. The true creed must come down from above, and not out from within. Make your creed simply and broadly out of the revelation of God, and you may keep it to the end.—Phillips Brooks.

We are every day photographing ourselves on the minds and memories of the people we meet. Some one will forever remember you and estimate your character by the glimpse he gets of you to-day. This applies especially to preachers in the pulpit. Every time you preach some one is likely to hear you for the first and last time. But it applies to us all. Every day, therefore, we should aim to be at our best, and do and speak and write our best. Every day, every word and deed is to bear fruit for time and eternity.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

Spurgeon tells of a man who stopped at an inn while traveling in England, and when his bill was presented to him, said: "I never thought of a bill, and have made no preparations for paying." The inn-keeper replied: "You must either be a fool or a knave if you have made no provision for your reckoning." Yet how many are traveling towards the end of their earthly journey without making any provision for reckoning with God.

The main reason why there are not more good boys is because there are not more good fathers.

In the boy of to-day already walks the man of to-morrow. The shaping of the career of the man depends upon the training which the boy is receiving in his home. The parents who do not maintain a constant supervision over their boys; who, if not directly, yet indirectly, permit them to associate with evil companions, to spend much of their time on the street, to run about of nights, are sowing seed which they will one day reap with sorrow and confusion of face.—Mid-Continent.

Christ built no church, wrote no book, left no money, and erected no monuments; yet show me ten square miles in the whole earth where Christianity is not, and where the life of man and the purity of woman are respected, and I will give up Christianity.—Lowell.

Our safety is in having lofty ideals and in constant labor to secure their realization. Let the getting of money be a man's ideal, and he will of necessity grow toward the dust.—Joseph Parker.

One excuse for not being a Christian is that there are so many sects one does not know which to choose. That is like the donkey that starved to death between the haystacks for the same reason.

If the church in America should go into the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians and live there six months, this country would be revolutionized for Christ.—D. L. Moody.

Ruskin says: "Whenever you see want or misery or degradation in this world about you, then be sure either industry has been wanting, or industry has been in error."

Jesus did not spend his life in trying not to do wrong. He was too full of the earnest love and longing to do right—to do his Father's will.—Phillips Brooks.

Be not disturbed by infidelity. Religion can not pass away. The burning of a little straw may hide the stars, but the stars are there and will reappear.—Thomas Carlyle.

Do not consider any vice as trivial, and therefore practice it; do not consider any virtue as unimportant, and therefore neglect it.—Chinese.

Never speak when your silence will do more good, never be silent when your speaking will do more.

The mistake of a moment may be the sorrow of a lifetime.—Exchange.

Let us prayerfully consider these burning words of the home secretary: "To enlist every woman and child in the church should be the desire and aim of all workers. If these members could be secured, and one dollar and forty-five cents paid in by each, our funds would be ample for support in the field and at home, and for extension. After all that may be said or done to effect results so desirable, only the anointing by the Holy One can help us to do full service. We may present dire necessities of our sisters afar off with a tongue endowed with all the powers of eloquence; we may paint, with ready brush, the destitution of heathen lands, the misery of homes without the gospel, the desolation, the sin, the fearful forecasts of the future; we may do all this and move no heart to action. I have listened, as you have, to appeals that seemed to us would melt the most stubborn soul, and yet many about us — women we know, women of seemingly warm hearts and liberal education—would appear as indifferent as though no responsibility rested upon them.

"Prayer, unceasing trust, and faith that takes God at his word, must be the means of success in an enterprise like foreign missionary work. At home we have the incentive of sight. The misery we see our hearts are quick to relieve; the misery we hear of and do not see appeals to our faith; and in proportion as we exercise this faith, we work and are blessed—blessed abundantly, above measure. The wise-hearted women must spin for themselves, and do much that the unwise leave undone, if the tabernacle of God is supplied with the blue and purple and scarlet and fine linen.

"Only those whose hearts have been stirred, whose hearts the Spirit of God makes willing, can expect much success. The acceptable servant must do his Lord's will; must, if necessary, suffer, if he have an eye to the recompense. Love must impel, love of Christ constrain, if love for the world nerve the arm to action when self-sacrifice and self-denial are involved. You remember Garibaldi's appeal to his countrymen when Italy was to be redeemed. Said he: 'Soldiers, I have nothing to offer you but cold and hunger and rags and hardships.' The love of Italy filled their hearts, and thousands flocked to his standard, and Italy was saved. The conflict in which we are engaged is with the powers of darkness; and Christ, our leader, bids us dispel the darkness, redeem the daughters of men, lead captivity captive. We have placed ourselves under his banner, and the promise of triumph is sure." MRS. E. D. JONES.

Hindrances.

No one but a busy woman can appreciate the many interruptions our sisters have in their efforts to accomplish church work without neglecting home duties. Only one who has had a like experience can understand the discouragement that comes when one's "best-laid schemes" "gang agley" from some seemingly unnecessary hindrance. When the wants of husband and children have been attended to, household duties discharged, and, in the leisure hour secured by strict economy of time, she sits down to write a letter important to the work, or to prepare a paper requested for a district or annual meeting, or is about to put on her bonnet to go out for some home mission work, a sudden peal of the door-bell is followed by the entrance of some inopportune visitor, who, having more time than other gifts, is inclined to waste it upon her friends. Perhaps an agent comes in who can not be hurried off without great incivility, or messages from neighbors demanding immediate attention, with countless other interruptions until the precious time is all gone, the thoughts that her brains had garnered passed from her mind, and the routine of daily duties to be resumed. When at last, the wished-for opportunity does arrive, it often seems too late, and her effort, of whatever nature, she feels to be but an imperfect one, with the fresh enthusiasm taken out of it, and too often she regards it as the work of duty instead of love.

These thoughts are suggested by letters that frequently come to me from our Parsonage and Home Mission workers, showing plainly the self-denial some of our sisters have had to exercise to accomplish the encouraging work which has given us such grand results. Several of them are teachers, some widows with little children, and others have the care of invalids. To all true women must, they acknowledge that these God-given duties have the first claim, and discharge them with loving hearts. The rest is a free-will service, only rendered possible by a systematic care of time; and when that is delayed or prevented by seeming valueless interruptions, it is indeed discouraging.

The question is, How can we convert these hindrances into a blessing? I can not understand why they are permitted; why the service we desire to make a perfect one should so often be unfinished. We can not tell. It may be the very service we deplore as imperfect may be the more acceptable because we do feel it unsatisfactory, because there is no self-gratulation in it. If we can only learn to think these little trials as sent to us by a tender Father who watches every step of our pathway, and to hear his voice saying to us:

"These hindrances that made you fret,
These 'interruptions,' one by one,
They were but sudden tasks I set,
My errands for your feet to run."

Some of these interruptions seem meaningless and unnecessary to our view; but we, who have given our lives to Christ, must know that nothing can come to us that is without meaning, and we should strive to so accept them so uncomplainingly and cheerfully that they may answer the purpose for which they were sent. If we can only see that they are God's "errands," and do them gladly for his sake, we will only be the stronger and better for them. Some of our dear Parsonage and Home Mission workers have certainly learned this lesson. My heart goes out in love and sympathy to those who are doing so faithfully and effective work in spite of many hindrances. I feel sure that great will be their reward.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. W. Williams, Decatur, Miss., Sept. 18: "During the past month we have three protracted meetings that resulted in great good. The one at Union was especially effective, as it brought the Christians together of all denominations and permitted us to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Some said it was the best meeting they ever had. These three meetings resulted in 23 accessions and a number of conversions. To God be all the glory."

Rev. J. W. Raper, P. C., Nettleton, Miss., Sept. 14: "The Lord is doing much for us on the Nettleton circuit. We have just closed our fourth meeting on this charge. It was held at Carolina Church. About forty conversions and thirty-two accessions to the church, with more to follow. The church revived last week. We were at Mt. Zion. We had thirteen additions to the church, with more to follow. This charge is getting all alive to God and his cause. To God be the praise!"

Rev. Ben. P. Jacc, P. C., Abbeville circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "I am at home run down and sick. I have just ended my revival campaign of seven weeks. We have held five meetings on this work this Summer, and assisted in three others elsewhere. Our meetings have been few. Not as many conversions as we hoped for, but success on other lines. Bro. M. D. Fly ably sustained his already attained high reputation as a preacher at our Oxford Camp Meeting, and whose labors there will long be remembered. May God bless him! Bro. Tom Porter, of Senatobia, Miss., rendered able assistance at Liberty and won all hearts. Our own local preacher, Bro. W. A. Fitzgerald, has been faithful. He has done fine work, having had quite a revival at Harris' Chapel, resulting in about 15 conversions and several accessions. Our new church at Abbeville is going up rapidly."

Rev. R. A. Tucker, Booneville, Miss., Sept. 11: "Owing to the failure of the health of Bro. Sullivan, preacher in charge of Blue Springs circuit, I was sent one and one-half months ago to take charge of the circuit and hold the protracted meetings. The people received me kindly, and co-operated with me, and, as a result of five meetings held, we are able to report a revival in every instance and forty-nine conversions. The Quarterly Conference was held during the time, and the charge made a good financial report. I feel specially indebted to Bro. W. R. Ramsey, a layman of the charge, who rendered efficient service in all the meetings held. Thanks to all the brethren who aided in the work. I am now at home preparing to leave in a few days for school, where I hope to prepare for my life work. Bro. Sullivan is improving, and it is hoped that he may be able to take charge of his work in a few days. To God be all the praise."

Rev. W. L. Anderson, P. C., Ethey, Miss.: "Our meetings (six in number) have all been held. This has been a season of great refreshing to many of us. One meeting was a decided failure, there being no converts. Four were nominal successes, while one was a decided victory. Twenty have been converted, sixteen joined our church. Quite a number reclaimed and the whole church revived. We received needed help from local brethren—D. A. Lowe, of this charge, and M. Ward, of Atlanta charge, at Sharon Church. Both did efficient, faithful work. Many thanks. At Hurricane we were assisted by Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporter and Sunday-school agent, and by Rev. Bro. Hollingsworth, visiting brother from Aberdeen circuit. These brethren did strong and effectual preaching. A faithful steward indeed is our colporter over his Lord's goods. Not being slothful in business, he was not slow to discover that he was on missionary territory here, and, while supplying many with good books, he assisted some who needed much. Many yet remain in need of help, for 'the poor ye have always with you.' Arrangements are made for Sunday-school literature for the entire Winter at one church. Pray for us."

Rev. M. H. Moore: "We have some signs of progress on this work. Forest Hill Church has been repaired and painted outside and inside. This church is on the up grade. We had a splendid meeting there. Twelve infants were baptized. Thirteen accessions to the church. The church was very much revived. Some of the older members of Spring Ridge Church say the meeting at that place was the best they have had in several years. Only two accessions there. The church at Byram is, I think, permanently improving. At the close of our meeting there we organized an Epworth League with eighteen members. The Ladies' Aid Society, organized at this place in the Spring, has been busy and helpful to the church. The good ladies have raised money, and had some necessary improvement done on the inside of the church, and furnished the church with new pulpit, chandelier, etc. We had a gracious meeting at Terry early in the Spring. The Ladies' Aid Society here has been busy furnishing the parsonage, and raising money to pay off the debt on the church and parsonage. We have some as large-hearted and true men and women on this work as are to be found anywhere. We are doing our best to bring everything up in full by Conference."

Rev. W. T. Woodward, Simsport, La., Alexandria district: "Our third Quarterly Conference was held at Marine appointment on Aug. 17 and 18. This appointment was established in the early part of the year 1893 by Rev. Robert C. Grace, who was with us on this occasion. Through his instrumentality we have a thriving congregation at this point. He started on nothing, save that missionary zeal that characterizes the Methodist itinerancy. Within a few months he organized a society with seven members. Ere he left for Annual Conference his flock had increased to nineteen. Rev. J. R. Roy followed. He and Bro. Davies held a revival meeting last Summer, which resulted in twenty-three accessions to the church. This year the writer, assisted by Rev. Dan C. Rawls, had a fine revival and eleven to join the church. In the above congregation we have eleven families represented—eight of the eleven hold family prayer; four NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATES taken. No other paper taken, save circular papers. I want to have an ADVOCATE in each family before I leave for Conference. Bro. Grace preached four times for us—good, plain, practical sermons, which made us sit together 'in heavenly places in Christ Jesus.' Bro. Grace knows nothing but Christ and him crucified—a friend to sinners, the Savior of the world. I think I can truthfully say that he has less of self in his preaching than most of us. He loves his Lord and church with his whole heart, soul and mind and strength and his neighbor as himself. As to the other part of the circuit, everything is moving along nicely. Fully ninety-five per cent. of my membership attended regular services."

Rev. P. H. Howse, P. C., Woodville, Miss., Sept. 14: "Since my last report we have held two Children's Day services. The one at Bethel I believe was the banner Children's Day service of the Natchez district. We had a long, but very interesting programme. The children were well drilled by our efficient Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. R. M. McCranie, and his wife, our organist, and they executed their pieces admirably. The verdict of a number of prominent Methodists was, 'It was the best service of the kind I ever witnessed.' The collection amounted to $15. Our Children's Day at Macedonia was a nice exercise under the superintendency of Bro. Hines Petty. It was a success. Recitations were all good. Collections, $7.55. I have not heard of anything better in this line on this or any other district. We have recently passed through a delightful ten days' camp meeting at Bethel. The following ministerial brethren with us: Rev. L. S. Jones, P. E.; Fitzgerald S. Parker, M. J. Miller, B. S. Rayner, J. A. Bishop, B. F. Lewis, T. A. Luster, L. E. Witoht, G. M. Hull, R. W. Tucker and a young Bro. Parker from Jackson, La. The preaching was very fine. The results can hardly be told. From twenty to thirty conversions, eleven accessions, and the general tone of the church improved. One brother has paid the pastor $75 since the camp meeting, and I believe that the people are going to meet the liabilities of the church. This is a good people, and I expect good things of them. 'A good tree can not bring forth corrupt fruit.' Money has been scarce, but they have been true, many of them; and now they are beginning to handle some money, and their preacher will not be forgotten. May the Lord be with us as we work together both people and preacher!"

Rev. Wm. M. Stevens, Rocky Springs, Miss., Sept. 7: "We began our series of protracted meetings on the Rocky Springs charge, Mississippi Conference, Sunday, Aug. 4, at Shiloh Church. Rev. J. D. Ellis, of Anguilla, reached us Monday morning and labored among us, preaching twice a day until Thursday. There were no great demonstrations, but the Spirit's presence was manifest, and good was accomplished. There were some who professed conversion, and there were two accessions by profession of faith. Our next meeting was held at Centre Grove, near Rocky Springs, beginning Aug. 11. Bro. Simmons, of Fayette, was with us during the entire meeting, and Dr. Andrews, of Vicksburg, reached us Monday morning. These brethren—faithful servants of God—preached with power and demonstration of the Spirit. How we all enjoyed the presence and preaching of these godly men! Thank God the Word preached became 'a savour of life unto life' to some! We also here received two into the church by profession of faith. Aug. 17 we began a meeting at Cayuga. This being the time fixed for our third Quarterly Conference, Bro. Weems was present to the delight of all. Rev. J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth College, was with us also for a few days, working faithfully for the college. Bro. J. P. Drake, of Edwards, came to us Monday and gave us two very earnest discourses. Our interruptions were such at this place that, regardless of the faithful efforts of these brethren, we closed the meeting Tuesday with no visible results. The following Sabbath we began at Hickory Ridge Church. Bro. H. M. Ellis, of Port Gibson, was put in charge while I went out to fill his pulpit. Upon my return I found Bro. Ellis sick and unable to preach; but, by resting him one day, he rallied from his indisposition and we moved along nicely. Bro. Ellis is a practical, forceful preacher. Though we were interrupted, yet we had a good meeting. The Lord was with us and blessed us. There were several conversions and one accession during the meeting. Several were received into full connection who had previously applied for membership. Grand Gulf next became the place for intrenchment and warfare. As Grand Gulf was a scene of mighty struggle, some thirty years ago, in the bloody war between the States, so now it becomes a scene of conflict between right and wrong, sin and holiness, Satan and God. Bro. Ellis, by his genial disposition, won many hearts to himself, and by his strong, convincing sermons won, we trust, many souls to Christ. Thank God for his blessings and for the manifestation of his saving power! We now return to our regular routine work, and pray God's richest blessings ever to rest upon these brethren in their labor of love. We are very much behind with our finances at present, but expect to make a full report at Conference."

Don't conclude that you have said good-by to the devil because you have joined the church. You may find him there on a front seat.

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. Served Them Right.

The Chicago Methodist Preachers' Association a short time since invited the English socialist, Keir Hardie, who was then in Chicago, to address them. He, of course, accepted. The character of his speech may be seen from the following quotation:

The early Christians were criticised for their religion, and the press of that day—if there were such an institution, which I hope there was not—held them up to ridicule, but the truth they taught was extinguished. They were crucified and burned at the stake, and felt it an honor to die in the cause which they indorsed. The world could not see the truth of their teachings. And is it not possible the men hanged in Chicago a few years ago (the anarchists) may be pioneers of a new gospel.

This utterance raised such a storm of hisses and jeers that the speaker could not go on with his speech. We think he served them exactly right. They knew his principles beforehand; and if he had refrained from saying what he did say, it would have been out of courtesy purely. What business has a body of Methodist preachers to invite an anarchist to address them? Imagine a body of Southern Methodist preachers doing such a thing! Impossible. Munchausen's imagination would not be equal to the task.

Two Were Chosen.

At the Marshall, Texas, District Conference, held a short time since, four unordained local preachers were charged with insubordination in refusing to work under the authority of their pastors. After a full statement of the facts in the case, and considerable discussion with reference thereto, the following question was propounded by the chair to each of these brethren: "Will you promise this District Conference that you will hereafter work in harmony with the pastors of our church?" One of the four, Ulig by name, replied with a defiant air, "I am so constituted that when I get orders from the General (meaning God) I pay no attention to corporals" (meaning the church). Another, of the name of Tucker, replied in a similar strain. The other two, Black and Pardo, made answer in the affirmative. The licenses of the last two were renewed. The other two were left without license. All four of these brethren are advocates of the second blessing.

More Infidel Bosh.

We had occasion not long since to call attention to some miserable bosh in the editorial columns of the Times Democrat concerning the achievements of Prof. Huxley as a champion of infidelity. Last Sunday's issue contains an editorial headed "The Bible and Popular Infidelity," which is of a piece with its former infidel deliverance, with this difference—that it has less foundation to rest upon. We quote as follows: "Col. Ingersoll, who may be cited as the most conspicuous incarnation of popular infidelity, has never shown any considerable power in attacking the fundamental tenets of Christianity. . . . This notable agnostic HAS WON HIS ANTI-THEOLOGICAL TRIUMPHS ON THE PLATFORM, AND IN THE MAGAZINES, ONLY WHEN HE HAS ASSUMED THAT THE ESSENCE OF CHRISTIANITY IS ABSOLUTELY IDENTIFIED WITH BELIEF IN THE TOTAL INFALLIBILITY OF EVERY HISTORICAL STATEMENT AND EVERY ETHICAL UTTERANCE WHICH MAY BE FOUND IN THE SIXTY SIX BOOKS BOUND TOGETHER AND NAMED THE BIBLE." (Small caps ours.)

Now, according to the Times-Democrat, Col. Ingersoll HAS TRIUMPHED over his adversaries, the votaries of Christianity, both on the platform and in the periodical literature of the day. Taken in its connection, this means, if it means anything at all, that INGERSOLL HAS DEMONSTRATED THE FALSITY OF SOME OF THE STATEMENTS MADE IN THE BIBLE. Now, this we deny in toto, and call upon the Times-Democrat for proof. What historical statement of the Bible has Ingersoll ever disproved? The man who makes such an assertion as this only proclaims his own profound ignorance of the Bible. Ingersoll's criticisms of the Bible are very few of them new. Most of his objections were urged long before he was born, and have been answered time and again. Will the learned editor of the Times Democrat, who takes such delight in glorifying Huxley, Ingersoll, et id omne genus, be so kind as to go into details? If it be true that Ingersoll has shown the Bible to be false in its statements, it will be an exceedingly easy matter for the aforesaid editor, who evinces extensive acquaintance with the literature of infidelity, to point out some of these false statements, giving us chapter and verse. Will he do so? We trow not. He will pursue the same policy of dignified silence as when we made a similar challenge a few months ago in regard to the Bible-demolishing achievements of Prof. Huxley. Silence is the best policy when a man has made an assertion which he can't prove.

As a Christian journalist, we here and now enter a respectful, but earnest protest against such deliverances as the above. A great majority of the readers of the Times-Democrat are Christians who have implicit faith in the inspiration of the Scriptures. Many of them are grieved to see this great, enterprising journal use its editorial columns for the propagation of infidelity. The fact that it seeks to sugar-coat its nauseous pill does not mend the matter in the least.

What do our readers think of the following: "SO LONG AS CHRISTIANITY IS IDENTIFIED WITH A BOOK, JUST SO LONG WILL IT FAIL OF ITS MISSION. It can never be what it might be and do what it might do, until the character and life of Jesus Christ are given first and permanent place in the foreground of Christian vision. His religion when he taught it was not based upon a book; was not confined within a book; it was based upon an ideal, a life, a personality."

So the Christian Church has been for eighteen hundred years failing of its mission, and the causes of its failure is too much faith in the Bible; and this failure will continue until the church is revolutionized in this respect! But, lest this dose of downright infidelity should prove too much for his readers, the aforesaid new light in the theological world hastens to give it a thin sugar-coating by professing great reverence for Jesus of Nazareth. Who are they that most revere Jesus of Nazareth—those who accept the Bible as the infallible Word of God, or those who regard it as a cunningly devised fable? Such a question is answered in the asking. From the beginning until now faith in the Bible as the inspired Word of God has been the sine qua non of the church's triumph over the powers of darkness, while, on the other hand, a loss of faith in the inspiration of the Bible has always been accompanied by a decay of spirituality and a low standard of morals. No. What the church of the present day needs is not less, but more faith in the Bible as the inspired, infallible Word of God. Our greatest trouble is that we have too many church members who have imbibed these infidel sentiments. Such members are always a source of weakness to the church. The men who can be counted on for aggressive spiritual work are those who believe that the Scriptures are "given by inspiration of God."

If the Times-Democrat's theory is correct, there ought to be some foundation for it in the teachings of Jesus. He ought somewhere to have said something like this: "Believe in me; but beware of putting faith in the Scriptures. These books which men call sacred are purely of human origin. They contain a modicum of truth hidden away in a vast heap of error and superstition. Therefore accept nothing which they contain unless it suits your fancy." Did he ever make such a deliverance? On the contrary, he constantly, both in public and in private, quoted and referred to the Scriptures, and always spoke of them as the Word of God, inspired and infallible. Either the Scriptures are the inspired Word of God, or else Jesus of Nazareth was the veriest imposter the world ever saw.

The fact that there are many books in the Bible written by different authors in different ages of the world does not alter the case. Each and every one of these authors "wrote as he was moved by the Holy Spirit." And these sixty-six books, with all their variety of authorship and style, make one book which is entirely consistent with itself from beginning to end. No one of these authors when properly understood contradicts any statement made by another. There is the utmost harmony of aim and purpose among them. While there are subordinate ends aimed at, it is the supreme purpose of the book, as a whole, to point dying men to "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." The atonement made by Jesus of Nazareth and the reconciliation of the world to God through him, this is the burden of the book through all its parts. The contradictions of the Bible, which are so flippantly talked of in the infidel literature of the day, exist only in imagination as the offspring of ignorance. No man who has carefully studied the Bible as a whole, with a sincere, prayerful desire to know the truth, has ever found these contradictions.

The most dangerous, because the most insidious, foe which confronts the youth of the present generation is this sort of sugar-coated infidelity. Scarcely any greater calamity can befall a Christian household than for its youthful members to embrace that form of infidelity (or faith, if one insists on calling it such) which professes great reverence for Jesus of Nazareth, while at the same time it regards the Bible as a merely human book, containing a small amount of truth hidden away amid a vast amount of error. The universal acceptance of such teachings would result in the utter overthrow of all the institutions of Christianity. True reverence for Jesus Christ as the Savior of the world is impossible without faith in the Bible as the inspired Word of God. A profession of profound reverence for Jesus of Nazareth, while one in the same breath proclaims the untrustworthiness of the Revelation which He gave to fallen humanity, reminds us very strikingly of a certain individual who "betrayed the Son of man with a kiss." From such reverence, good Lord, deliver us.

Dollar for Dollar.

Every pastor should make it his aim to raise his assessments, dollar for dollar. The assessments do not represent the amounts which the church really needs in order to carry on her work. They are simply the amounts which the powers that be think there is some probability of raising. More than twice the sums assessed for the different claims could be used most advantageously. Our Mission Board could use twice as many men as we have in the foreign field, and the men can be had if the means for their support were in sight. The same state of things exists in our home mission fields. New fields could be occupied if the necessary means were provided. Not only is this the case, but it is also true that the appropriations to our home missionaries are exceedingly meagre. This being the case, a failure on the part of a Conference to meet its assessment for home missions entails hardship and privation on the men who are serving these mission charges and upon their families. As a rule, we have no more heroic men among us than the men who serve mission charges in our midst. They ought to have every single dollar appropriated to them. Let every pastor see to it that this assessment is raised in full; and if a number of the wealthier charges should go a little beyond the assessment, so much the better.

Then, there is the Conference Fund. Who believes that any Conference has ever made an assessment for this fund that was excessive? The aged veterans who preached the gospel to our fathers; does anyone begrudge them the pittance they receive? Who is there that would not be glad to see the church make such provision for them as would enable them to enjoy the ordinary comforts of life while they linger among us "in age and feebleness extreme"? And then, the other claimants upon this fund, the widows and orphans of the men who but yesterday stood by us in the thickest of the fight; who so penurious as to raise the cry of excessive assessments on their account? Who is there that would not be glad to see them receive far more than it is our custom to pay them?

Then, there is our Church Extension Fund. What lover of our Zion does not feel a thrill of holy joy as he contemplates the glorious results of our labors in this department of church work? All over this fair land, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, men are to-day worshiping God in neat, tasteful houses of worship which would not have been in existence but for the Church Extension Fund. Our beloved Methodism never built more wisely than when she made church extension a part of her permanent policy. Every dollar assessed for this cause is needed, and a much larger sum could be used with vast benefit to the church.

The Bishops' Fund it is scarcely necessary to speak of. Every true Methodist will admit that our Bishops ought to receive their salaries. And yet it is sometimes the case that we are largely in arrears with them.

Last on the list we mention the Education Fund. This cause has never reached the hearts and consciences of our people as it should do. To assist young preachers in obtaining an education in order that they may be properly qualified for the noble work to which God has called them; can any man make a better use of the Lord's money than this? Then this fund is used in part to assist young men of moderate means who are not preachers in acquiring an education. Good work has been done in this line, and much more could be done were the means provided.

There is not a single one of these claims which a pastor or a charge can afford to ignore. The church asks for nothing which she does not need, in order to do the work which the Lord has committed to her hands. Let every pastor, then, make an earnest, persistent effort to raise the full assessment for every claim; and let stewards and other officials co-operate heartily with the pastor. With the increased prosperity which is now everywhere visible, most of our pastoral charges ought to be able to pay their assessments in full.

At Obion, Tenn., a few days since, Rev. W. H. Evans, during a protracted meeting, preached a sermon in which he gave offense to a person in the congregation of the name of Brown. After the sermon Brown walked up to Evans near the pulpit and struck him with such force as almost to knock him down. Evans did not strike back, but said, "Strike the other side." Brown then called the attention of the audience and made a statement in which he said that he had no apology to make. As Brown is a tutor in Vanderbilt University, it is probable that the end of the affair is not yet.

The State Census of Massachusetts, which has just been completed, indicates that the process of change from the country to the city still continues. Town growth is constant—growth in the agricultural regions is slow, and sometimes the population decreases. This is not well. Congestion of population is not a whit more healthy morally than is congestion in the human body. We hope that a turn in the tide will come speedily, and that the crowded dwellers in our large cities will seek the fresh air and freer life of the country. The worst misfortune which could befall us would be the decay of the rural population.—Northwestern Advocate.

We are informed that at the Quarterly Conference of First Church, St. Louis district, of which Dr. B. Carradine is a member, Dr. Messick made complaint against Dr. Carradine. On the vote being taken, his character passed by a unanimous vote. Whereupon Dr. Jarrell presented the ruling by the presiding elder the following question of law: "Is it improper and illegal for a local preacher to adopt and to devote himself to the work of a general evangelist?" The presiding elder ruling that it was illegal, Dr. Jarrell appealed from his ruling to the Bishop presiding at the St. Louis Conference, Sept. 25, thus seeking up this vexed question for settlement. The end will be awaited with interest.—Tennessee Methodist.

In the Living Present.

Justice Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, laments, a la Shakespeare, the laws' delays. Says that the legal profession has degenerated into legal obstructionism. Unfit men at the bar of justice everywhere. Wishes that some Noachian deluge would engulf the large herd of pettifogging practitioners.

"The Druggist" holds that, though drugs become lamentably numerous, true remedies continue to be very few. The prolific products of chemistry tended to bewilder the practitioner. Only few physicians knew how to derive benefit from the new discoveries. In the meantime patients suffer. Concludes with saying, that so-called new remedies are added every day for the benefit chiefly of those who do not know how to use them.

The Congregationalist assures that the church it represents has an oversupply of preachers. This plethora was caused by other denominations. In and around the neighborhood of Boston one-third of the Congregationalist pastors have formerly been Methodists. Said church is hence a fine safety valve to Methodism. Our church is benefited by the loss of the over-fastidious and scatheads.

Incompetents abound. Found in shop, counting-room, at the bar, bedside, in pulpit, government offices. Apprenticeship scarcely known. In the matter of schools, graduates abound; but knowledge is neglected. Superficiality, pretense, arrogance, dash, carry the day. Thoroughness is ridiculed. Are drifting towards social collapse

It has been computed that in the United States alone twenty million dollars are being annually spent for chewing gum. Principally women, but some men, too, are addicted to the vice of using said drug. It is said that defective cookery is responsible for this pernicious habit. Food not sufficiently solid for proper exercise of chewing apparatus.

The influence of women in politics is well known. Who knows not of Catherine de Medici, Pompadour, etc. Now it is said that the present Czar of Russia is controlled by his mother. That means friendship for France. Said Emperor Augustus that, though he ruled Rome, his wife ruled him. Happy that nation and that family when said rule is wise.

Where Care is Required.

Keep a careful eye upon the baking powder sent you by your grocer to see that an inferior brand is not substituted for the Royal. There are many cheap imitations of this necessary leavening agent, sold under some other name, which are sometimes sent to the customer when Royal is wanted, because of the greater profit which they afford to the dealer.

Carefully avoid, also, all so-called baking powders offered under misrepresentation. Alum powders are invariably sold as pure and wholesome cream-of-tartar goods. A baking powder now notoriously advertised as having published upon its labels all the ingredients used in it, is shown by recent investigation to have in its composition four different substances not upon its label, two of which are lime and sulphuric acid.

Protection from such frauds, and from all alum baking powders, can best be secured by the consumer looking carefully at the label, and declining to accept any substitute for the well-known, well-tried Royal, which all public tests show to be absolutely pure and wholesome.

Institution for the Education of the Deaf.

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI.

The next session of this school opens Wednesday, Oct. 2. There are a great many deaf persons in Mississippi who are entitled to the privileges the Legislature has so liberally provided and who are not taking advantage of them. The reason of this generally, is, that they do not understand that their children can be educated free, practically. There is no man in the State who is so poor but his children can be educated here, and given the knowledge of a useful trade. We will admit any uneducated deaf person, of good moral character, sound in mind and body, who is not too old to learn, and who is not too young.

We have two institutions, about one and a half miles apart, for white and colored.

I have just read Dr. Chandler's letter in regard to Seoulton, and Minister Yan's appeal for Corea, and the offer of his relative to accommodate a missionary in his family until he can get a house. GEORGE JACKSON.

Lecompte, Sept. 14, 1895.

Magnolia and Oaks.

The third Quarterly Conference for this charge, for this year, was held Sept. 21 and 22, at Magnolia. Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, our faithful and efficient presiding elder, was with us in the Spirit of the Master. He gave us three very excellent sermons. Our people were highly edified and profoundly impressed. His preaching gave evidence of a vigorous mind and a well-stored heart. His presence and counsel will abide as a benediction. We pray that he may live long to serve and bless the church which he loves and honors so devoutly.

Our reports were all gratifying. Spiritually, we are slowly, but constantly improving. Class and prayer meetings are means of much good. W. P. and H. M. S. just organized, and full of holy enthusiasm. Much good is expected to result from this society. Finances are about up to date, except Conference claims, which are provided for in good subscription. Paid on demand to-day to presiding elder twenty-one dollars' assessment on district parsonage.

We will build a new and handsome church soon on one of the most beautiful and eligible lots in our city. This lot was secured by our consecrated women and their former faithful pastor, Rev. V. V. Boone. A Building Committee, composed of such men as L. L. Lampton, H. B. Ford and P. H. Enochs, was appointed by the last Quarterly Conference to raise the funds and erect the church. These men are a guarantee of success, being staunch, successful business men. And what they will, they can do. So, realizing the dire need of a more suitable and comfortable house for God, they will doubtless push the enterprise to an early and successful completion. The Lord is blessing us.

To Whom It May Concern.

I am sometimes written to by persons contemplating moving to Wesson in order to get work for themselves or their children in the Mississippi Mills. To save postage and letters, my advice to all such is, Stay away. There is abundance of labor here. Wages are very low. There has recently been a further "cut," or reduction, in wages. Many of the operatives are going to Waco or Galveston, Texas, because they can't make a living here. Operatives who used to make $35 and $40 per month are now making only $15 or $18, and sometimes not so much. Some—not children—are making only $11 or $12 a month. Children make much less. House rent, though low, has not been reduced with the wages. The merchants are growing tired of advancing supplies to people who, though they work ever so hard, are unable to pay for necessary supplies. Stick to your farms. T. L. MELLEN.

A Typical Case.

How poorly Mrs. —— looked at the opera! Nervous, pale, fagged-looking—a mere suggestion of her recent self. Fact is, one look showed that she was suffering with "Woman's Trouble," and no one had thought of suggesting that great specific for Uterine Ailments—CREOLE FEMALE TONIC. It always cures.

The Bible Institute Colporiage Association.

BY MR. D. L. MOODY.

We publish the following by special request of Mr. Moody:

My attention has recently been called to the lack of wholesome religious literature in this country, especially for the use of gratuitous distribution among prisoners.

Upon investigation, I learned that there are about 750 000 men and women in this country who are looked upon as belonging to the criminal class, and that, on the whole, comparatively little organized religious work is being done among them. Especially is this the case in the 2 700 county jails of the country. The necessity for good reading is so imperative that we have thought it wise to organize a society for the distribution of good books among prisoners, and the Colporiage Association connected with the Bible Institute for Home and Foreign Missions, Chicago, has now a "Prison Fund" for that purpose. We have suitable books ready, and now desire to distribute them economically throughout the country. They consist of writings of the leading Christian workers of this and other lands, putting the way of life plainly before the reader.

Will not those who do Christian work in prisons, who wish to have some religious literature for free distribution in their respective fields, correspond with me? We will send packages of books to such friends by mail, free of charge, to any place in the United States, Canada or Mexico. When writing please give references, or enclose some card showing that you are engaged in the work. Also mention the prison for which the books are intended. The co-operation of ministers of the gospel, Y. M. C. A. secretaries, and Christian Endeavorers is earnestly desired.

We can furnish books of 128 pages, or a pocket edition of the New Testament, for about seven cents each.

Any friend desiring to assist in this fruitful work may send contributions to my address, East Northfield, Mass. For books, address me at the same place.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

RAISING OF JAIRUS' DAUGHTER.

(Matt. ix, 25; Mark v, 23; Luke viii, 41.)

1. Jairus sought help for an only daughter. Perhaps, she was an only child.

(1) An only child frequently spoiled. Is unduly indulged. Thus physically, mentally and morally frail.

(2) Having only one child is very harrassing to parents. The least ailment causes the abyss of childlessness to appear. Horrid abyss!

(3) But an only child need not necessarily suffer loss because of its condition. Isaac was an only child. So was Samuel.

2. The only daughter of Jairus being sick, he applied to the Master for help.

(1) Men should more familiarize themselves with physiology, materia medica, for necessary self-help.

(2) In case of actual need, it is proper to seek the aid of a good physician. Have a family physician.

(3) But neglect not also to inform the preacher of the sickness. He can not know without such information. A prayer may do more good than medicine.

3. We admire the modesty of Jesus. He well knew that the maid was dead. Saying that she merely slept, was to prevent undesired prominence.

(1) Modesty! Said the poet:

"Oh, to be little and unknown,
Loved and prized by God alone."

(2) Modesty is admired by all. It is more precious than diamonds. Strange that this ornament is not more frequently worn.

(3) True worth is usually modest. The consciousness of its possession avoids publicity. Sham delights in parades, bunting trumpets.

4. Jesus restored the dead child to life. Wonderful word: Talitha, cumi—"Damsel, arise."

(1) All unconverted are dead in trespasses and sin. Arise. Said the ship captain to Jonah: "What meanest thou, O sleeper, arise, and call upon thy God." May conversions multiply!

(2) It is no less a momentous miracle to make sinners Christians, true children of God, than to restore the physically dead to life.

Louisiana Epworth League Conference.

A week from to-day many leaguers from this city and the interior of our Pelican State will assemble in Louisiana Avenue Church for Conference. Association will give information. Information begets enthusiasm. The Epworth League is a necessity. Our young people require special attention. Too long Methodism has surrendered its youth to other denominations. This the League designs to remedy.

The speakers chosen to address the Conference are specially fitted to throw a flood of light on the movement.

In nearly all other States our leaguers have held Conferences the same as the one designed by us at this time. We fall loyally in line. New Orleans Epworth League Union, whose worthy president is Bro. John T. Crebbin, has taken the initiative in this matter.

Of course, you will attend. Make haste, to be here in time.

Notice.

All delegates who expect to attend the Epworth League Conference (Oct. 3 6) are requested immediately to notify Mr. Harry B. Russ, corner Camp and Aline streets, New Orleans. Delegates, on arriving, will please report at Conference headquarters, Louisiana Avenue Church, corner Louisiana Avenue and Magazine streets, that homes may be assigned them.

HOME CIRCLE.

WORDS.

One day a harsh word rashly said
Upon an evil journey sped,
And, like a sharp and cruel dart,
It pierced a loud and loving heart;
It turned a friend into a foe,
And everywhere brought pain and woe.

A kind word followed it one day,
Flew swiftly on its blessed way;
It healed the wound, it soothed the pain,
And friends of old were friends again;
It made the hate and anger cease,
And everywhere brought joy and peace.

But yet the harsh word left a trace
The kind word could not quite efface;
And though the heart its love retained,
It bore a scar that long remained;
Friends could forgive, but not forget,
Or lose the sense of keen regret.

Oh, if we could but learn to know
How swift and sure one word can go,
How would we weigh, with utmost care,
Each thought before it sought the air,
And only speak the words that move
Light white-winged messengers of love!

An Actress Converted.

The following incident was first published as related by the Episcopal Bishop of Michigan, in E. P. Hammond's meeting in St. Louis:

A young, talented, and tender-hearted actress was passing along the street of a large city, and, seeing a pale, sick girl lying upon a couch within the half-open door of a beautiful dwelling, she entered, with the thought that she might cheer, by her vivacity and pleasant conversation, the young invalid.

The sick girl was a devoted Christian; and her words, her patience, her submission and heaven-lit countenance so demonstrated the spirit of her religion that the actress was led to give some earnest thought to the claims of Christianity, and was thoroughly converted, and became a true follower of Christ.

She told her father, the leader of the theatre troupe, of her conversion, and of her desire to abandon the stage, stating that she could not live a consistent Christian life and follow the life of an actress.

Her father was astonished beyond measure, and told his daughter that their living would be lost to them and their business ruined, if she persisted in her resolution.

Loving her father dearly, she was shaken in her purpose, and partially consented to fill the published engagement to be met in a few days.

She was the star of the tronpe, and a general favorite. Every preparation was made for the play in which she was to appear. The evening came, and the father was rejoiced that he had won back his daughter, and that their living was not to be lost.

The hour arrived; a large audience had assembled. The curtain rose, and the young actress stepped firmly forward, amid the applause of the multitude. But an unwonted light beamed from her beautiful face. Amid the breathless silence of the audience, she repeated—

"My Jesus, I love thee! I know thou art mine;
For thee all the pleasures of sin I resign;
My gracious Redeemer, my Savior, art thou;
If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now."

This was all. Through Christ she had conquered; and leaving her audience in tears, she retired from the stage, never to appear on it again.

Through her influence her father was converted; and through their united evangelistic labors many were led to God.

Tact.

May we not describe tact fairly well as the antithesis of clumsiness? Etymologically, as we know, tact is touch, and it may be called, therefore, the deft way of handling people. It is born with some men and women, like the supple, delicate fingers of the artist's hand, and those who have it use their gift instinctively. It is not measured alike to those who have it—men possess it in different degrees, while others, again, are wanting in it altogether.

Tact ought not to be confounded with savoir faire; it is not merely the English equivalent for that term; one may have a large acquaintance with the world and its conventions and be perfected in the practice of social duties, great and small, and yet be lacking in this fine sixth sense, so invaluable to its possessors and to all with whom they come in contact. It is the outcome of intellectual and of temperamental qualities, and implies the possession of clear perceptions, quick imagination, and delicate sensibilities; it is these that give the tactful person his subtle intuition of another's mental processes and moods of feeling, and in the same moment the exactly right mode of dealing with these. Tact, it is true, like any other natural gift, may be consciously exercised and brought by use to a higher perfection. Practiced on a large scale, with experience and foresight aiding, it makes the successful diplomat. It is impossible not to feel a certain pleasure in the use of special faculties, of whatever kind; and it is not to be wondered at that a person possessing the gift of dextrous touch should regard with a mingling of amusement and compassion the unfortunate individual who goes on his blundering way through the world, forever stumbling against people's idiosyncrasies, bruising their small foibles, overgetting their cherished prejudices, when a little adroitness might save all the damage. There are men and women who are always doing this, just as there are those whose awkward motions and clumsy fingers are continually bringing disaster upon themselves and whatever they handle.—Selected.

Dr. Parkhurst's Early Training.

THE HOME HE WAS BORN, LOVED, AND CHASTISED IN.

If I speak confidently and feelingly upon this point, it is because I know how much I owe personally to the fact of being brought up in a home where I was taught to appreciate the greatness of righteous authority, the vastness of its meaning, the advantage of submitting to it, and the serious risk of resisting it, writes the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in the September Ladies' Home Journal. No anarchist could ever have graduated from the home I was born, loved, and chastised in. Such experience makes me pity the children who know no discipline but that of caresses and sweetmeats, and makes me more than pity the parents who have neither the discernment in their mental constitution nor the iron in their moral constitution to perceive that nothing which a child can know or can win can begin to take the place of sense of superior authority, and of the holy right of that authority to be respected, revered, and obeyed. The moral strength of a man is measured pretty accurately by the cordial reverence with which he regards whatsoever has the right to call itself his master. Estimated by this criterion, the average American boy is a discouraging type of humanity, and is a severe reflection upon the crude attempts at manhood manufacture evinced by the typical American home. If our homes can not turn out children that will respect authority, there will be no authority in a great while, either at home, in the State, or anywhere else, that will be worth their respecting.

A Sunny Face.

Wear it. It is your privilege. It has the quality of mercy; it is twice blessed. It blesses its possessor, and all who come under its benign influence; it is a daily boon to him who wears it, and a constant overflowing benediction to all his friends. Men and women, youth and children, seek the friendship of the sunny-faced. All doors are open to those who smile. All social circles welcome cheeriness. A sunny face is an open sesame to heart and home. By it burdens are lightened, cares dispelled, sorrows banished, and hope made to reign triumphant where fear, doubt and despondency held high carnival.

Get the glow and radiance from such nearness of the throne as God permits to his own. Bring from a holy and divine communion a face luminous with light, and let it glow and shine on all around. A little child on the street of a great city, wishing to cross at a point where the surging throng and the passing vehicles made the feat dangerous to the strong, and especially so to the weak, paused, hesitated, and then asked a sunny-faced gentleman to carry her across. It was the sunny face that won the child's confidence. Childhood makes no mistakes.

A Noble Hearted Boy.

One day a gentleman saw two boys going along the street of a large city. They were barefooted. Their clothes were ragged and dirty, and tied together by pieces of string. One of the boys was perfectly happy over a half-withered bunch of flowers, which he had just picked up in the street.

"I say, Billy," said he to his companion, "wasn't somebody real good to drop these flowers just where I could find them? And they are so pretty and sweet. Look sharp, Billy; maybe you'll find something by-and-by."

Presently the gentleman heard his merry voice again, saying:

"O, Billy, if there ain't half a pear, and it ain't much dirty, either! 'Cause you haven't found anything, you may bite first."

Billy was just going to take a very little taste of it, when his companion said:

"Bite bigger, Billy; maybe we'll find another 'fore long."

What a noble heart that poor boy had, in spite of his rags and dirt!—Selected.

Small Courtesies.

In this hurrying age it behooves us all to cultivate a habit of being generous in the bestowal of small courtesies, especially upon the aged and lonely. One who is in the whirl of a busy career may never miss the slight attentions, but another who sits apart and sees life's "great occasions drifting by" is apt to feel hurt if notice is withheld. It is the sign of a gracious spirit to cherish such persons in thoughtful remembrance and to recognize them in all possible ways. "What a beautiful letter-writer your friend is!" said a dear old lady, in a pleased tone, to her daughter. In point of fact, it was a quite ordinary epistle, but it contained a cordial message to the old lady, whom the writer had never seen, and the unexpected attention brought sunshine into the dull monotony of her days. In our correspondence, and in all the interchange of social life, let us take more pains to notice the unnoticed.

The Girl and the Wife.

It is a wide-spread error that the gay young girl need not be taught anything practical before marriage; that by a kind of magic she will develop into the good manager, the skilled housewife. Here is an ally of the divorce court. The art of true homemaking is not much thought of when all those pretty and useless presents are spread out for inspection. The theory is that the bride is to live in a bower, and know no more of baking and brewing than the birds of the air. But nature's common sense pierces through all our silly fictions, our shallow pretenses and make-believes. If we could present a little capacity for making home homelike, we might block at least one of the side paths that lead from the church to the divorce court.—Christian Register.

Frederick the Great once wrote to his Senate: "I have just lost a battle, and it's my own fault." Goldsmith says that this confession shows more greatness than his victories. The world needs more great men who will say: "I was wrong, I erred." The first manly impulse of the Prodigal Son led him to resolve to go home, and say: "Father, I have sinned."

Labor Good for Delicate People.

BY SIR ANDREW CLARK.

Labor is the life of life. And especially is it the life of life to the delicate. When any organ is sick it is then truer than in health that even in sickness and delicacy it is better for it to do what work of its own it can, provided it can do it without injury. And I can say to you from a considerable experience in consumption, that those who have got on the best have usually been those who have occupied themselves the most. I never knew my own parents. They both died of phthisis.

At the age of twenty-one I myself went to Madeira to die of the same disease. But I did not die, and on coming back I had the good luck to get into this great hospital; and in those days they were not very well pleased to have Scotchmen coming to London to occupy such appointments. The members of the staff had heard that I had tubercles, and they wagered one hundred to one that I would not live six months at most. The reason given for this was that I did not eat and worked too hard. I got the appointment. Thirty-eight or thirty-nine years have gone by since that time, and it is all the other doctors that are gone. Only I am left here on the staff—an old gentleman—not dead yet.

Worry is killing. It is bad management that kills people. Nature will let no man overwork himself unless he plays her false, unless he takes stimulants at irregular times, smokes much, or takes opium. If he is regular, and obeys the laws of health, and walks in the ways of physiological righteousness, nature will never allow him or any other person to work too hard. I have never yet seen a case of breaking down from overwork alone, but I admit that it is necessary above all things to cultivate tranquility of mind.

Try to exercise your wills in regard to this—for will counts for something in securing tranquility—to accept things as they are and not to bother about yesterday, which is gone forever; not to bother about to-morrow, which is not ours; but to take the present day and make the best of it. Those women who will continually peer into what lies beyond never have any present life at all—they are always grizzling over the past or prying into the future, and this blessed to-day, which is all that we are sure of, they never have.—Journal of Hygiene.

Money Value of Relaxation.

I have learned from observation that three things happen to a man who works steadily without relaxation. In the first place, he becomes nervous, irritable and hard to get along with. In the second place, the grade of his work falls off, his services are worthless, and he is liable to err in his judgment. In the third place, he dies suddenly. It is an incontrovertible law of nature.—Chauncey Depew.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

WHITE CAKE.—Beat one-half cup of butter to a cream; add one cup of granulated sugar and stir until light and creamy; add one-half cup of milk or water, and one-half pound of flour. Beat until light and smooth; add the juice of one lemon, and, when mixed, the whites of four eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Stir in gently with one tablespoonful of baking powder; turn into greased tins and bake thirty minutes in a moderately quick oven. If used for a layer cake, bake only fifteen minutes in a quick oven.—Table Talk.

Stuffed bananas is a recipe given at a late lesson of the Boston Cooking-School. They are to be served on a doily and tied round the centre with a narrow ribbon. Remove carefully one section from the side of a banana, then scoop out the pulp and mash it fine. For four bananas add two-thirds cupful of powdered sugar, a cupful of cream whipped and one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice. Mix well. Then fill the banana skins and replace the section that was pulled back. Pack these bananas in a tin box or deep pail surrounded by ice and salt, and let them stand two hours, when they will be well chilled.—Selected.

OBITUARIES.

WILLIAM.—We don't always have music and joy in our hearts. Sometimes these are mixed with sorrow. Such has been the case lately. We have lost by death our noble friend and brother, HUGH G WINNHAM, who had just entered upon active life, both as a farmer and merchant, with bright prospects before him, but that fearful disease, typhoid fever, laid hold of him, and, notwithstanding all that medical skill and kind friends could do, he had to succumb and go hence. "We weep not as others who have no hope." He was the ever-faithful and affectionate son of Walter D. and Mary Wadham. He was born Sept. 15, 1873, and died Aug. 20, 1895. He joined the Methodist Church when but a boy, to which he belonged at his death.

Hugh (as we called him) was an extraordinary young man. In his growing up to manhood he was as patient as a tried Christian. He bore all things, believed all things, hoped all things, endured all things," and without effort seemingly. He won the admiration of all who knew him. He always had a smile and a kind word for all; stood for the defense of all good character from a boy; never neglected his prayers, either as a traveler or at home. How we had planned for him to work in the church of his choice; but just as he entere the threshold of usefulness he leaves us. It may be that he will save more in his death than he would in his life. We submit to a wise Providence, and "kiss the rod that smites us." Will we miss Hugh? Yes, we will miss him at prayer meetings, Sunday-school, the regular service at God's house, and at every pleasant turn of social life in our little village. May his loved ones overtake him in the good world!

D. W BAAB.

PAINE.—Mrs. EMMA CORNELIA PAGE (nee Ballard) was born in Clark county, Miss., Sept. 22, 1853, and died at Conehetta, Miss., Aug. —, 1895. She was the daughter of J. S. and Laura S. Bullard. She professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in her fourteenth year; married to Thomas H. Page, February, 1895, with whom she lived until after the birth of her third child, when he left her to raise those three children, which she has done as none but a Christian mother could. The father has helped to educate the two girls. Sister Page has had a hard and painful struggle through life. She had been afflicted with a very painful cancer for some time before her death. She was confined to her bed for about six months before her death, and suffered as much as anyone I ever saw. But with all this she was ever submissive and cheerful. She loved to talk about heaven and Jesus. She would have her friends to read to her from the Bible for hours at a time. She would frequently send for her near neighbor to come in and sing for her. Whenever her pastor would visit her, she enjoyed his songs and prayers and comments on the Scriptures very much. It was so refreshing to hear her talk about how happy she would be when she got to heaven, and could see Jesus as he is. She lived a consecrated life, and died in the faith, and has received her crown. She leaves a sad mother, three children and several brothers and sisters to mourn her loss; but they sorrow not as those that have no hope.

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Decatur, Miss.

PAINE.—THOS H. B PAINE was born in Natchez, Miss., in 1842, being the youngest child of Thomas and Eliza Paine. His father died when he was only three months old. He was married, July 21, 1861, to Miss Sarah J Higgins. He enlisted in the Natchez Fencibles for the Confederate War, and served the four years until taken prisoner after the surrender of Vicksburg.

He was a devoted and loving husband and father. Modesty and refinement were his characteristics. When the death angel warned him to come, it was with a calm and resigned mind he said to his wife: "I want to join the church which I have neglected so long. God has forgiven all my sins, and I feel that the Savior is mine." According to his request, the holy communion was administered unto him. His soul was in ecstacy of enjoyment, and he exclaimed: "Glory to God! The next time I take the sacrament it will be with Jesus and the saints. All is light and glory. I am safe in the arms of Jesus." He called each member to his bedside, and gave to each his parting injunction. The scene was very affecting. When he came to his little son, his only son, he bade him pray a last prayer for his suffering father. Together they repeated "Our Father in Heaven," and "Now I lay me down to sleep." His mind then rested quietly, and every few moments, until his spirit took its flight, he would clasp his hands, and say: "Come blessed Jesus, take me. Why do I stay? I am ready."

The above tribute has been furnished mainly by his devoted and sorrowing wife.

C. G. ANDREWS.

HAMPTON.—HARRY HERBERT HAMPTON, son of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Hampton, of Vinton, La., was born Oct. 25, 1894, and died Aug 21, 1895, aged nine months and twenty-eight days.

This sweet babe, being very delicate, was the center of affection in the family until death's angel snatched him from their midst and bore him away to the land where angels dwell. He left behind him a heart-broken mother, a sorrowing father, and many who deeply mourn the loss of this precious little jewel. He is greatly missed by his five sisters and a brother, but a wiser than they has called him from this world of sorrow and strife, and transplanted him in the bright beyond, where grief, toil and care never come. Let us not think of little Henry as gone forever, but only in that beautiful city above, waiting with outstretched arms, beckoning papa, mama, brother and sisters to come home.

W. D. PICKENS.

Vinton, La.

ROGERS.—Master RICHARD SNEED ROGERS was born Oct. 17, 1879, and died Sept 12, 1895, at half-past one o'clock A. M. He suffered eleven days with remittent fever, which resulted in inflammation of the stomach. It was a stubborn case from the beginning. He joined our church last year under the pastorate of Bro. Roy, and lived a good Christian boy to the end. He was a true and an affectionate son. His schoolmates all loved him. May the Holy Spirit that made his death-bed so easy, bring mama, papa, and his two brothers unto eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord!

W. T. WOODWARD, P. C.

MILLER.—Mrs. MARY E. MILLER was born near Richmond, Va., June 1, 1834, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ida M. Owen, Rosedale, Miss., Aug. 16, 1895. At an early age she removed to Mississippi, where the remainder of her life was spent. On Jan. 12, 1858, she was married to James E. Miller at Pontotoc, Miss. Not many years after her marriage she was left a widow, and to her own hands was committed the responsibility of rearing her children. She had a sunny disposition, and bore the burdens of life with remarkable fortitude. For many years prior to her death she was sorely afflicted, but not a complaint escaped her lips. She said to her daughter, "God has been so good to me." She was a fond mother, tender and thoughtful about the welfare of her children. She begged her children, as she was dying, not to grieve for her. She said if it was God's will, she was ready to go.

Because of her afflictions she was deprived of the privilege of visiting her friends; but in her own home she could always be found cheerful and happy.

In her last illness she manifested a sublime faith in God. While breathing her last she said, "Quietly and gently passing away."

To her widowed daughter and her son we extend our sincere sondolence, praying that He who doeth all things well may overshadow them in this dark hour with His gracious providence.

E. S. LEWIS.

MCDANIEL.—Mrs. REBECCA MCDANIEL, an excellent Christian woman, well beloved by all who knew her, passed away from earth to glory after a long illness. She died of that long, lingering disease called consumption. She was confined to her bed about ten months, but amid all the afflictions and sorrow she was never known to murmur or complain at the providence of God. Among her last requests was for her pastor to pray for her children. We shall always remember her sincere candor, her true friendship, her faithfulness as a member of the church, and devotion as wife and mother.

She was born Oct. 20, 1826, in Lowndes county, Ala., and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1856, at old Pilgrim Rest Camp Ground, afterward moved to Pine Grove, Neshoba county, Miss., and died Aug. 31, 1895. Her funeral was preached the next day by the writer to a large congregation at Pine Grove Church. She leaves a husband and several children to mourn their loss. They mourn not as those who have no hope. May God bless their lonely home!

NEWSOM.—Miss KATE NEWSOM, daughter of Rev. J. D Newsom, of the North Mississippi Conference, was born Aug. 3, 1859, at Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss., and died at Arcola, Miss., Sept. 1, 1895. She professed religion at the age of thirteen, and joined the M. E Church, South, at Lexington, Miss., under the pastorate of her father. It was my pleasure to have been her pastor for the past three years. During this time she was sorely afflicted with that terrible disease, consumption, which resulted in her death. She bore her sufferings patiently, always keeping cheerful. She told me about ten days before her dissolution that she would not survive the Summer; said her faith was strong, and that she was ready to depart this life and be at rest. Her friends and sympathizers were many—a noble lady. Her body was laid to rest in the Arcola Cemetary to await the resurrection morn. We ask the prayers and sympathy of the church, specially the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, in behalf of her bereaved father.

Arcola, Miss.

RICKS.—Died at Cairo, Miss., little LEX, son of S. H. and B. B. Ricks. Closed in eternal rest are the beautiful soft eyes; folded in everlasting peace the baby hands; stilled forever the sweet baby voice. God's angels were bidden to make little Lex fair; so they fashioned his baby eyes, so blue and deep, like twin violets, and wove the sunshine in his hair. He was but one year and ten months old; yet he was possessed of an intelligence far beyond his years. He was a bright, promising, and sweet child. Words are inadequate to express our deep grief at the loss of the little one we so loved. Medical skill nor faithful nursing could not stay the hands of the reaper, and as pure as the lily was the flower he has transplanted in the loved Father's garden inside the pearly gates. Our Father, guide the sorrowing father and mother and brothers to that better land where hearts laden with anguish shall rest forever, is the wish of

A FRIEND.

EASTERLY.—SELON HAUCK, infant son of Eliza and S. B. Easterly, died Aug. 16, aged three months. He was a well-developed and promising little fellow. He leaves a sad home behind him to find a happy home in heaven.

We all miss him, and feel in his departure a personal affliction. God bless the bereaved parents! May they find infinite comfort in the assurance that their little darling sleeps "safe in the arms of Jesus." May the sweet thought constantly constrain them to live to meet it where the white wings have wafted its pure little spirit! Good by, little darling, till we meet again.

AUNTIE.

FLOWERS.—ALBERT G. FLOWERS, little son of A. C. and Irene L. Flowers, was born in Clark county, Miss., near Shubuta, Oct. 3, 1890, and died near Jackson, La., Sept. 5, 1895, aged four years eleven months and two days. Four days later the mother followed the little son to the city whose builder and maker is God. Therefore, I only point the bereaved father and little sister to him who is able to heal the bereaved and console the disconsolate. Live, dear father, so you may meet those gone before.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, does not love ex Senator Butler, not even his name. The Constitutional Convention named a new county Butler a few days ago. This angered Tillman, and he has managed to have the name of the county changed to Saluda.

The Rev. Dr. H. W. Thomas, of Chicago, caused somewhat of a sensation, on Sunday, by declaring from his pulpit that the time has come for America to say that the oppression of Cuba by Spain must come to an end. There was a large attendance of the best people of the city, and the speaker was frequently interrupted by outbursts of applause.

In the presence of thousands of veterans of both the Northern and Southern armies, and of men who held high command on both sides, the battlefield of Chickamauga was last week formally dedicated and turned over to the government in perpetuity as a national park, sacred to the memory of the heroes who fought and fell on that historic and bloody field.

A rather onrious state of affairs has turned up in the district attorney's office at New York. Only a few days ago a batch of 2,000 untried indictments which had been "mislaid," turned up quite by accident, and now there has been found a great pile of police court complaints, which had been referred to the grand jury, and have never reached that body. They cover all sorts of crimes, except murder.

Since the easy conquest of China, Japan has been rapidly growing in power and influence, and some of the European powers are watching with a jealous eye the rapid strides made by the Island Empire in all the arts of civilization. Semi-official denials that the change in the imperial chancellorship is impending are accepted as settling, for the present, the question of Emperor William's intention of displacing Prince Hohenlohe. The fact must not be forgotten, however, that the agitation against Prince Hohenlohe proceeds from the same quarters and is prosecuted upon the same lines, significantly enough under almost precisely the same circumstances, as the agitation which preceded the fall of Count Von Caprivi.

K. S. ENOCHS, P. C.

We see it quoted from the Japanese Buddhist Magazine that—

The greatest move of the twentieth century will not be a commercial one, nor yet a military one; but the nations of the West will invade the East with great armies of Christian missionaries, backed up by the wealth of Christendom. We must arouse ourselves to meet them.

Considering the source, this is a remarkable statement. It shows that heathenism is no longer passive, but that it is fully aroused, and that the lines are being drawn for the decisive battle. When it is considered that there are already 1,200 places where Christianity is taught in Japan, and 700 Protestant schools, and about 2,000 young persons going out from these schools every year, it is not strange that a leader of thought on the ground, one, too, who is in perfect sympathy with the old institutions and customs of the country, would give the alarm. Japan, after the slumber of centuries, has just been awakened in a military and in a political sense, and now they say authoritatively that Christianity will command their thought and challenge their energies next century. What hath God wrought! — Pacific Advocate.

JUBILATE.

(A Hymn to Methodism.)

BY EUNICE R. FOSTER.

O glad and glorious p an
Ringing the wide world through!
O shout of joyful millions
In victory ever new!
Hosanna! while the echoes
Repeat the mighty thought;
In thrill of wonder asking Amazed What God hath wrought!

The tree in sorrow planted,
And watered long with tears,
Hath spread its beauteous branches
Through the victorious years.
To-day we lift our voices
With prayer and praises fraught,
And sing in joyful wonder
Again, What God hath wrought.

O blossom of the ages!
O Church beloved of God!
Thy feet are on the mountains,
Thy glory shed abroad.
Thou art bringing in the nations,
The isles thy light have caught;
They lift their hearts in gladness
Shouting What hath God wrought!

Grace, grace then be unto it!
And glory be our song,
And praise to Him our Father,
Where grace and praise belong.
This stone cut from the mountain
With heavenly wisdom taught,
This is the mighty wonder,
This is what God hath wrought.

But not till time has ended
And that blessed hour has come,
When the new earth uprisen
Glows in her sinless bloom;
Not till the new-born heavens
Shall fill our perfect thought
Can angels grasp the wonder,
And say what God hath wrought.

THE RISE AND PROGRESS OF THE WOMAN'S PARSONAGE AND HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

BY LUCINDA B. HELM,
Editor of "Our Homes."

It is a law of nature that to every demand there should be a responsive supply. And the origin and growth of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society is an instance under this rule. Church extension, meaning the extension of the spiritual church by the building of houses of worship, soon developed the fact that parsonages also were necessary to its permanent establishment; for often the necessities of the man compelled the church to fall back from an advance hopefully made. The Church Extension Secretary, Rev. David Morton, D. D., declared he found the building of parsonages even more necessary, if possible, than the building of churches. Bishop Hargrove found the progress of the church in the new West hampered on every side by the lack of shelter for the preacher and his family. Bishop McTyeire pronounced parsonages the greatest need of the church. Here, then, was a demand for the sense of Christ.

The work of providing these homes was, naturally, allotted to the women offering, as a Woman's Department, to aid in extending the spiritual church. That the right means of supplying this demand had at last been found was proven by church statistics, showing that during eight years one-half as many parsonages had been built as had been built in the whole one hundred years prior to this movement.

But should the coming of our Lord's kingdom depend on the personal labor of ministers only? Will it not come more rapidly when each servant of the living God goes to work individually to save souls? So thought those who framed the Constitution of the Woman's Department of Church Extension. The women should not only build parsonages, that the gospel might be preached with more ease, but form a body of helpers around their pastor, and labor directly for the salvation of sinners. This demand expressed in the command of our Lord, "Preach the gospel to every creature," can only be supplied when every individual called by the name of Christ shall throw his whole heart into the work of seeking and bringing home the lost. Witness the triumph of sin around you! See the multitude going down into death! Will you cry, "Save them," and not reach forth your own hand to save one creature from eternal death? Too long, too long, have men and women sat idly in pews, listening to the man of God exhausting all his heaven-born zeal in telling and retelling to them the story of Him who loved them, and giving no heed to the pleadings of that Savior for help from each one of them to save the world—"every creature"—for he does not want one to perish.

In view of this, the Constitution and By-laws of the Auxiliaries to the Woman's Department of Church Extention read as follows: "It shall be the duty of the Visiting Committee to report to the pastor the names of strangers, and all cases of sickness and destitution they may find. The members of the committee, in their rounds, should also endeavor, by the reading of God's Word, to comfort, strengthen, or bring to church those whom they may visit." These were to be no meaningless visits, but to be made with a spiritual purpose. The little children of the society were given certain Scriptures each month to read to 'some one;" and many touching reports were sent in, showing the children were truly being used, as mouthpieces of God, to speak his words to dying men and discouraged Christians. Thus the Word of God was brought to the front as "the sword of the Spirit," and "church work" deepened into truly spiritual labor for the salvation of souls. The Visiting Committees, distributing church literature, visited charitable institutions and went into jails, bearing the Bread of Life "to those in prison." On these committees were often put old members of the church, who had never before visited jails, or other houses of correction, where the sinners most needing spiritual help are to be found. This personal effort and contact with the sinners deepened the spirit of missions and aroused a desire for more enlarged work along this line.

The individual must work, but systematic organization gives power. Each year it became more apparent that from those that built the parsonages could not be withheld the privilege of supplying the urgent wants of their inmates, and of aiding the servant of God so sheltered in the direct work of his Master. There came from the heart of the society a general demand for more liberty. The Woman's Department of Church Extension was authorized by the General Conference of 1886. By the end of the first four years it had become clearly apparent to the General Secretary that this demand from His people was a call from God to go forward, and that it would be criminal to ignore it. The authority for broader work was given by the General Conference in 1890, with the more comprehensive title of "Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society." The result has proven the wisdom of this yielding to natural growth, natural development, in response to needs as they presented themselves.

The quadrennial report, at the end of the second four years, showed a wonderful advance. More than twice as many parsonages had been aided than during the first four years. The value of boxes of supplies sent to needy fields, and money, as personal gifts, amounted to $2 000. Many souls had been brought to Christ, Sunday-schools had been built up, and missions opened, to more effectually reach those who refused to come to church. Nearly all our large cities were prepared to set to work city missionaries, as several had already done, with glorious results. Work for the mountain regions had been projected, and was progressing. Everything was now ready for rapid growth. A strong foundation had been laid deep in the Rock—the Word—on the demand of a dying world for the best, most loving efforts of Christian women to show the way into the life given by the Son of God. The foundation was waiting for the superb structure, wherein the glory of God might be fully revealed in the multitude that shall be brought to Christ.

One more year passed, and the ninth annual report showed progress in all lines, as many parsonages had been helped, and the Loan Funds for parsonages had been greatly increased, while decided advance had been made in other branches of the work. Two schools for the Cubans flooding Florida had been undertaken. The interest in the mountain work had deepened and become more general. Supplies and personal gifts had been sent to needy places to the amount of $2,670.62. Eight city missionaries were employed, and six industrial schools in operation. In every way the organization had grown and strengthened. We have the promise that the Word of God shall not return to him fruitless. Confidently we count upon his blessing, and prophesy that as the second quadrennial in the history of this society exceeded the first, so shall the third exceed the whole past of its existence.

Like a goodly tree planted by the rivers of water, it has sent its tap-root down deep into the commands and promises of God, and is now, through the spiritual life within, reaching out its branches, spreading out its leaves, and lifting up its precious fruit—an humble offering to the Sun of Righteousness, which alone can perfect it.

MOUNTAIN WORK.

(Paper read by Miss Belle Bennett, of Kentucky, at the P. and H. M. Conference, held at Asheville, N. C., Aug. 23, 1895.)

The mountain work projected by the P. and H. M. Society comprises that section of the Appalachian range of mountains which extends from the northern border of the Virginias to the Black Hills of North Carolina.

Scientists tell us that heredity and environment are the master influences of the organic world; that these have made all of us what we are, and that these remain the great natural forces which "shape our lives." Accepting this as true, let us look for a moment at the people and conditions of life in these mountain parts of our country, and learn, if we can, what it is that makes this mission ground and places a peculiar obligation upon every individual Christian and conscientious citizen. In doing this, you will pardon me if I direct your attention especially to the people who live in that section of the Alleghanies known as the Cumberland Mountains. Its ridges and foot hills extend over nearly one-fourth of the area of my own State—Kentucky—and with the habits and customs of these people I am comparatively familiar. Mr. Shaler, who has given us the best short work on the settlement and development of Kentucky, says: "At the close of the Revolutionary War, Virginia found herself with a large population that had long been separated from the ordinary pursuits of life. Their places had closed behind them. The best and richest lands of the State had been greatly worn by a shiftless agriculture, and life in the 'Old Dominion' was stagnant." These circumstances led to a very large exodus of her population to the Westward—to the recently founded settlements in Kentucky, where land in abundance, and of the most excellent quality, could be had for the trouble of possessing it. The same writer says: "By far the most important element of the Kentucky colonists came from the soldiers who were disbanded at the close of the war with Great Britain. The number of Revolutionary soldiers who emigrated to Kentucky may be judged by the fact that in the year 1840, nearly sixty years after the termination of that struggle, the pension returns showed that there were about nine hundred of these veterans still living in the State—their ages, according to the record, varying from seventy to one hundred and nine years. This, of course, was but a small part of the host that had found a dwelling-place within the State. Probably, at the least, ten times this number had gone to their graves."

These disbanded soldiers were, for the most part, the direct descendants of that large class of rural Englishmen who came voluntarily to America, settling on the rich agricultural lands of Virginia, not generally under the influence of political or religious persecution, but with a view to bettering their condition, as tillers of the soil. Another factor which entered into this colonizing force was drawn from the families of those hardy Scotch pioneers who came to this country after the rebellion of 1745, several thousand of whom made homes on the lands beyond the Blue Ridge, close under the shadow of the mountains. "Such men were, by their native strength and their deeds, the natural leaders in the new colony, both in peace and war. Thus the Kentucky spirit was the offspring of the Revolution. The combative spirit left by the Revolution was elsewhere overwhelmed by the tide of commercial life; here it lived on, fed by tradition and by a nearly continuous combat down to the time of the Civil War."

In the last few years several learned gentlemen have written voluminously to prove that the people who now live in the southeastern portion of Kentucky, in those counties that are distinctively mountainous, and also in that part of West Virginia immediately bordering on them, are not a people having the same ancestry and the same blood as those who live in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky and in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. These gentlemen prove quite conclusively to themselves that these "poor mountain whites," as they are called, "are the descendants of that destitute and semi-criminal class who were sold into service to pay their fines and the cost of their transportation into the colonies." As so many of their names begin with Mc., they get their descent direct from that Scotch-Irish element that located in the Blue Ridge counties, moving back as the number of negro slaves increased and the country developed.

We, who live in the more favored sections of these two States, under the very shadow of the mountain peaks, know the fallacy of these theories. It is true that the rigid caste system which slavery always engenders between the slave-holder and the non-slave-holder had its effect in driving back into the mountains many who, through poverty or for conscience sake, belonged to the latter class, but Kentucky was never a large slave-holding State, and to the present day her foreign-born population, and the number of her citizens whose parents were foreign-born, is insignificantly small. These people have the same ancestry and the same inheritance as we. Surrounded by the same conditions of life, they would be the same people; or let me reverse the picture: Take from us, or from you, in whatever section of the country you may live, the churches, the school-houses, and the good roads which make contact with your neighbors and the outside commercial world possible, for one hundred years, and think, if you can, what the result would be. Three generations of poverty, isolation and neglect have left them where we find them to-day—dwarfed, physically, mentally, and morally. Their homes the same rude one- or two-roomed log cabins, lighted by the open door, that the early settlers found sufficient for their meagre and temporary wants. Large families of men and women, girls and boys, living in a single room, sixteen to eighteen feet square, with filthy earthen or dilapidated wooden floor, in which the average farmer of the Blue Grass would not begin to stable his work-horses, and scarcely to bed his pigs. Their food is of the coarsest and the most ill-y prepared kind, calculated to remind the unfortunate "stranger from the settlements" of the tortures which Hunter's sea-faring bird must have experienced while feeding on land-food before its crew became a gizzard. In Summer the little garden patch, which the woman has made, some bacon, and occasionally a little fish or game, "if the men about the place are not too shiftless" and the river is "nigh," make a full larder. In Winter, generally, the bacon, some hard, sodden cornbread, varied by a nondescript thing which they call bisque, made from the heavy black flour that has been ground on the old water-mills; some coffee, sweetened with honey, sorghum, or "no sweetnin';" the ever-present "chaw" of tobacco, and that scourge of the mountains, "moonshine whisky," supply the cravings of the inner man. What shall I say of the household furniture? Perhaps it were better left unsaid, as it rarely consists of more than a bench, a rickety table, a chair or stool, and some beds. These, if there be other than a pile of leaves in one end of the room covered with a linsey quilt, to describe would be to disturb recollections of a vast army of crawling aborigines, whose right of possession no sane man or woman unaccustomed to such associations would willingly dispute a second time. These miserable, squalid homes are the most prolific sources of degradation and vice with which the missionary or the philanthropist has to contend in trying to better the condition of these people.

In calling your attention to these facts, I would not have you understand that all, or even a large majority, of the people in these mountains have suffered such degeneration, or live as I have described. Far from it. Possibly one-half of what are called the mountain counties on both the Virginia and Kentucky sides of the Cumberland range have made a wonderful advance movement in the last fifteen or twenty years. Good roads, churches and school-houses have been built; villages and towns have sprung up, or increased their population and business until even the "back counties" are beginning to be aroused from their lethargy, and to feel the tremor of an impending change. Always, even in the darkest and most inaccessible parts of this large section of country, in the county seats, and scattered here and there throughout the counties, there have been some men and women of strong intellect and character. They have made comfortable homes, good estates, sent their children away to school, and held an acknowledged leadership in politics and business; also in the barbarous feuds that have terrorized this whole region of country.

The Methodist circuit rider has had his appointments among this people for three-quarters of a century, working under untold difficulties, but sowing the seed—some on stony ground, some among thorns, and some, thank God, in good ground; but the "rocky ground" has been the largest part of this harvest field. The stubble of revival fires is always burning; but the great mass of the people still remain unchanged. Along the heads of the rivers, in the coves and narrow valleys, one-half of the people can not read. The Holy Scriptures are an unknown tongue, and no man interprets. The Primitive, or "Hard-Shell Baptist," is the ruling denomination, and in one county their leaders preached for seventy years with a "church-house." The preachers of this church can often neither read nor write, and it is no uncommon thing to hear it said of one of them, "He took out a license to keep from working on the road."

In the last ten or fifteen years the public school system is beginning to make itself felt in these mountain wilds, and the members of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society who have been appointed to investigate, or who, by reason of life-long proximity, are familiar with the conditions and needs of this section of country, believe that a wise and Christian use of this great governmental force is the best and surest channel through which to civilize and redeem this neglected people. Each of the different States through which this mountain chain extends annually spend from one to two millions of dollars on its public schools. By recent enactments some of them have made it possible for the school commissioners to put a special tax on each district, to build and furnish the school-house. These mountain people, even in the darkest localities, are by no means oblivious of the potent influence of money; and the brightest boys and girls, the most influential families, want to secure the salary paid to the district school teacher. In the thirty-two mountain counties of Kentucky alone there are two thousand district schools. In very many districts of the interior counties the local surroundings are such that only the native-born teacher can fill the place. Of course, they are totally unqualified, and the rude people whose children they are supposed to teach recognize that a fraud is being perpetrated on them. A sufficient awakening to this condition of things has taken place, to make a change possible and to prove a golden opportunity to the church, if she will but seize it. The mountains are demanding better schools; the teachers, many of them, earnestly desire to be better qualified to hold their positions.

The States do not furnish training-schools for these teachers; and if they did, in some of the large towns or cities the poverty, want of proper clothing, and fierce pride engendered by life-long seclusion would prove an insuperable barrier to these mountain folk. To evangelize and educate them, Christian people must establish high-grade schools in some of the principal towns or county seats, adding, where possible, a few industrial features, and seeing to it that the teachers are well-equipped, progressive teachers, and earnest Christian men and women, who can put their spirit, the Spirit of Christ, into these boys and girls, who, going back to their respective homes, can have, through the district schools, opportunity to come into personal contact with every child and every household in the mountains. Let the houses in which these high-grade schools are taught—their furnishings, the teachers, their clothing and surroundings—be object-lessons to the students, arousing in them the desire for better things, and creating a dissatisfaction with the old home life.

Believing this to be the most effective way in which we can work as a Mission Board, our Society has enterprised a school of this kind in London, Ky., the people of the town and the women of the Kentucky Conference furnishing the money for grounds and buildings, the same to be given in fee simple to the Society, which is to maintain and control the school. Other points in this mountain range are pleading for the privilege of obtaining schools on the same terms, and are urging that they will be entirely self-supporting in a few years. Our church needs nothing so much as a united advance along all educational lines. These schools ought to be established, and, with the co-operation of the Board of Education, correlated with such Conference institutions as it may direct, with a membership of 1,300 000, 900,000 of whom are women and girls, the Southern Methodist Church ought to do this work, and do it now.

Our Society is young, and its collections small. Money we must have; and if the church could be aroused to its opportunity and its duty, this would be poured into our treasury until we would not have room enough to contain it.

OUR TREASURY AND ITS NEEDS.

BY MRS. A. A. NORRIS,
Conl. Treas. W. P. and H. M. S., Louisville Conf.

What are our needs? What methods pursued in filling our treasury? Is God's way our way? What new methods have been tried, and with what success? What mistakes discovered, etc.?

We grieve over the fact that, proportionately, our work is so small. People who are not informed can not realize the great importance of our work, nor the immense possibilities within the reach of the women of our church. Truly it hath been said, "Knowledge is the mother of zeal; lack of knowledge, our greatest foe."

I would recommend that a live and industrious agent for "Our Homes" be appointed in every Auxiliary, with a sample copy ever on hand. Anyone sent on God's errands is a missionary, whether the service be great or small, in the home field or the uttermost parts of the earth, and a successful Auxiliary must have missionaries at both ends of the line.

As you all know, the regular plan for filling our treasury is the ten cents per month paid by each member. Every treasurer should also be impressed with the important fact that she must be a "model treasurer," and be filled with enlightenment and enthusiasm. What a wonderful impetus it would be to the work! When we think of the magnitude of this work, our ten cents seems absurdly small and inadequate, and yet if every member would pay this small amount monthly, their treasurer, at the end of each quarter, could make a full report to the Conference treasurer, and at the close of the year she would not have to keep her book open till the last minute, hoping for delinquent dues. And the Central Committee would know earlier the amount of appropriations they could make, for, after all, their work depends upon this insignificant ten cents a month from every member of your Auxiliary. "A wheel within a wheel," each one moving smoothly, keeps the whole machinery of missions in motion. Let every member of each Auxiliary take the following formula for a successful Missionary Society:

"Information plus enthusiasm; minus self; multiplied by activity; divided by every member of the Auxiliary, equals—a successful society."

Our "Special Donations" include everything else—"Loan Funds," "Mutual Building Funds," "Angel Band Fund," etc. These are all to be remitted through your Conference treasurer, that your Auxiliary may have full credit, and every dollar you raise during the year will then be incorporated in the "Annual Report." God has richly blessed our efforts in behalf of these various enterprises. We are profoundly grateful to Him, and extend our heartfelt thanks to all for their liberal encouragement. May He who loveth a cheerful giver abundantly bless in body and soul, in basket and store, all who have contributed to these various calls in His name!

But the demand is far larger than the supply. What has been done is an encouraging evidence of how much good a few consecrated women can do. It indicates spiritual health, and shows that the heart is beating true to the privileges inculcated by our Lord and Savior, "for whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"—for, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."

It is not just to the memory of our beloved dead, nor is it profitable to the living, that the influence of our glorified ones should soon pass away. The inspired record, for good reasons, declared of righteous Abel that "he being dead, yet speaketh." When our dear ones pass over to a brighter land, leaving us so desolate and full of gloom, then our hearts turn to this "Angel Band Fund" as a thank-offering from a chastened spirit. We gladly pay the twenty dollars to make some loved one, whom God has taken home, a member of "Our Angel Band." It may seem a paradox to say our purest thank-offerings are the offsprings of our deepest sorrow; but sometimes in the night of bereavement, or under the dark cloud of a heavy sorrow, our eyes become more sensitive, and we discern causes for gratitude which we never saw before.

OUR WOMEN WHO WORK.

BY MARIA TAYLOR PIPKIN.

I see them pass by as the morning mists rise,
Weary-faced some, some with laughter-lit eyes;
Some wearing youth's garments, heribboned and bright,
Gaily swaying from the left to the right;
Other some clothed in the drapery of woe,
With lip corners drooping, with eyelids hung low;
All passing along in an ever-changing stream,
Though many a busy brain's hope-freighted dream
Runs lightly ahead of the task of the day,
Bright flinging the hours of work with the play
Of fancies that lighten the toil and the pain,
That lay their hard touch on the heart and the brain,
Whilst the hands work away and the feet rarely rest,
Till the sun's sleepy smile fades away from the west.

Ah! our women who work, how noble they seem,
As ever onward they move, a pulsating stream
Of life that makes better our world and our day,
Though some have grim skeletons hidden away
In closets whose doors sometimes swing open wide,
Disclosing the ghosts they are striving to hide;
Who ask for God's blessing or little to eat,
Whose teeth rarely close on a morsel of meal,
Lest an invalid parent, or husband or child,
Feel the fangs of the wolf, gaunt, hungry, and wild;
Lest the robing that hides nether poverty be Cast for fastidious passers to see,
And the drawing sallee with a jest or a jeer,
Or the face, half-averted, scarces hiding a sneer.
Start the warm blood to surging in billowy red,
Whilst the lips press back firmly the anger unsaid,
Whilst the wells of hurt feelings rise quick to the eye,
And they think 'twould be better for their sort to die
Than to live in a world where pity lies low
And mercy seems frozen to immaculate snow.

There are blessings for all in the world beyond this,
Where fullness of joy makes life-throbbing bliss,
Where pleasures supernal unceasingly roll,
And God's smile is a feast that ne'er palls on the soul;
Then, brave ones, push on through the heat of the day,
For the evening will come when the fountain will play,
And the sweet, cooling waters will wash away care,
When earth's weary workers heaven's diadems wear.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FOR ORPHAN CHILDREN IN THE BOUNDS OF HOLSTON CONFERENCE.

BY MRS. E. E. WILEY,

Vice President P. and H. M. S., M. E. Church, South.

No need, of course, to argue the necessity for the best possible environments in the rearing and training of children, for everyone knows that the home or family life is the pivot upon which turns the destiny of Church or State. It matters not if the child be reared in the lap of luxury, or first see his mother's smile by the light of pine knots. With proper religious care to foster and develop the god-man of her child, both church and nation will be the richer for his life. I believe the exceptions will be rare. If womanhood had long ago realized this; if her open eye had seen the hidden rock of her parental oversight; if only her ear had caught the sullen roar of "breakers ahead" when she turned her child's future with the care of an alien, or forgot him in the demands of society, or forgot him in the out of his garments, he would have planted as a Gibraltar the soul of that child the eternal principles of Christian citizenship, around which mad counter-currents would have swirled in vain. There would have been no occasion for a "new woman," nor for the shame of a new Bible." As it is, the very elements are all a-quiver. Instead of the cry, "How long, O Lord!" we hear, "What next, O man!" God knows. The influence of a holy Christian home life is the salt that would have kept its savor. It is not so much a Deborah we need to lead out our national Israel as a million Deborahs in many families where militant hosts meet to measure swords in the child heart of the home. The Deborah needed is the mother who can draw on heaven's armory for a full panoply in the home where the wearer is a living, struggling soldier for the victory over the world, the flesh, and the devil. If family religion is the least discussed, the most neglected and the most vital problem appealing to the church today for her settlement," it behooves the church to help those who, seeing the danger, are trying, in the fear of God, to warn the life-boats drifting hitherward. Else, God send us the Deborah!

Oh, that every mother-heart were a spiritual "power-house" where forces forged which would bear humanity back to the place where it walked and talked with the Lord. Our children must be brought to the Savior, and will there. Our children! Oh, yes; of course. But what of that great throng of little ones who are motherless and that other host whose orphanage were a blessing! They come before me, a pleading, hungry, haunting crowd. Hundreds like them have been given up and found a home in a fellow's cell—the best, perhaps, they have ever known. Little hands like theirs have grown strong for theft and murder. Lives, once like theirs left to neglect and poverty, have gone out and down forever. God's eternal judgments will follow the priest and Levite, who are forever "passing by on the other side." Whose "heritage" are they? "Behold thy mother!" Belshazzar's vision were not clearer.

And the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Holston Conference accepts the charge, and has contracted for a farm of fifty acres, on which are to be erected brick cottages capable of accommodating fifteen or twenty children. Each cottage will be in charge of a good, consecrated house-mother, who will also be fitted to teach. The farm has for a building site twenty-one acres of fine oak trees. One cottage is almost finished. We do not go in debt, and we insure as we build. There will be a large central building to contain dining- and recitation-rooms, kindergarten and chapel. The many acres of farming land is in good state of cultivation. As the children will be given a thorough industrial, as well as scholastic and technical training, all possible labor will be done by them. They will be taught that service—highest only at its best—ennobles, and that the only happy life is the useful one. Not a mite will the first installment of cows, pigs, horses, chickens, etc., cost us. God is moving kind hearts to give these and more. Already our Parsonage and Home Mission women are making quilts, blankets, sheets, pillows, etc. We want to make it as the dear little girl put it, "a truly home." Will we succeed? Yes, by prayer, faith, and work. "He is faithful that hath promised." If you are passing Greenville, East Tennessee (whose big-hearted citizens have subscribed $9 000 to the enterprise), look just across the railroad from Andrew Johnson's monument, and you will see our farm, with its grove and cottage; and when you see it, you will not wonder that we "thank God, and take courage." And the endowment will follow.

MATIN.

BY SALLIE GEORGE FULLILOVE.

Across the plain, sad night departs
With stealthy tread;
Within the lake, the pale light starts
And flushes red.
Aurora, in gauzy purple and grey,
Whispers the birds of coming day;
The mocking-bird with dreamy note
Wakes, and his heart springs to his throat
And silvery clear,
Sings far and near,
As he shakes the dew from his dainty coat.

THE NEWSPAPERS OF LOUISIANA.

This great agent and engine of popular education and enlightenment is represented by 171 serial publications, of which 14 are issued daily; 2 semi-weekly; 147 weekly; 3 semi-monthly; and 6 monthly. Of these, 7 are printed in both French and English; 3 in French wholly; 3 in German; 2 in Italian, and 1 in Spanish. They are for the most part well-conducted and are excellent exponents of the local interests of the several parishes and districts in which they are printed. The intending settler can thus learn all that he desires short of a visit to the locality which he proposes to examine, and, therefore, they should be carefully consulted by persons at a distance. The State's press is made up of secular, religious, trade, professional and literary publications representing all classes and every important interest.

The leading newspaper published in Louisiana is the New Orleans Picayune. It was started in January, 1837, and has attained its 58 h year. It is the oldest English paper in the city, or in the State, its age being surpassed only by that of L'Abeille (the Bee), which is ten years older and is printed in the French language, and with the two exceptions of the Bee and the Deutsche Zeitung (or German Gazette), it is the only paper in New Orleans that has survived the Civil War.

The Picayune has always been an able, conservative, enlightened representative of the best interests of Louisiana and of the great Southwest in whose progress and development it has had a large share, and no paper in this country has been so close to the people themselves. It is their great tribune and advocate, ever standing against political trickery and official dishonesty; and being free from all corrupt jobs and selfish schemes, it has always maintained the highest place in public confidence and favor.

The Picayune was started by the brilliant and famous George Wilkins Kendall, one of the most distinguished wits of his day, and, perhaps, the first journalist in the world who played the part of a correspondent for the press from military headquarters in the field, Mr. Kendall having accompanied the United States Army of Invasion to Mexico during the war of 1846 47, sending to the Picayune the first and freshest news of all the military operations of that important war.

Since then, the Picayune has been conducted by many able and often distinguished men, constantly improving its excellent qualities as a newspaper, and always growing in influence and ability to represent and work for the people of New Orleans, Louisiana, and of the South, until under its proprietors, Mrs. E. J. Nicholson and Col. George Nicholson, it has reached the summit of journalism and is the leading paper in the great Southwest.

A volume could be filled with accounts of the Picayune's enterprise in getting news, the time of the Mexican War down to the present, but what has been said will suffice. Its complete offices of publication, containing the most improved machinery and perfect appliances which science has provided for the production of newspapers, and its able and skilled corps of thinkers and workers, combine to make it what it is, one of the great American dailies and the chief of all the journals of the Southwest.

THANKS.

The Business Manager and Treasurer breathes a sigh of relief as our paper goes forth today freighted with valuable matter that means money for our Tchoupitoulas Street Mission, and wishes to thank all those who have contributed to its success, by giving us their ads. in so prompt and generous a manner, those who have donated money, as well as those who have subscribed for papers.

We hope none of our friends will feel hurt because they were not called upon to give us their advertisements; but our genial and accommodating foreman, Mr. Pflug, informed us that our space was filled and caused us to halt. I know he rejoices that the "Woman's Edition" is out, for we fairly loaded him with advertisements. After this he will not have such a weight to carry.

We owe many thanks to Dr. W. C. Black, who so generously donated this issue of the paper to our use. The gentlemen of the Advisory Board, whom we had to consult many times, Miss Tillie Mitchell, the office boy and all in the ADVOCATE office, have given us their assistance most cheerfully.

We thank each and everyone who has aided in this good work.

OUR TITLE PAGE.

It is scarcely necessary to call attention to the charming title page of this issue of the ADVOCATE, as its own attractiveness speaks for itself; but the ladies interested in this Christian enterprise desire to express publicly their high appreciation of the assistance which our talented young artist, Miss Kate Riggs, has given towards the successful completion of the paper. We are sure that all its readers will thoroughly enjoy the artistic merit of the design, its dignified grace, and entire suitability in all details to the end in view. It is beautifully suggestive of our palm-grown Sunny South, and the refined delicacy of the whole effect shows the touch not only of the artist, but the gentle and cultured Christian woman; and the crowning merit of the perfect whole is the well-chosen and most precious utterance of the blessed Master, the "Inasmuch," which comprehends the sum of all effort to serve Him, however small or great. For these, His "brethren," and for the great, lost and shepherdless flock, has this special effort to further His cause been made. E. K. P.

GREETING!

The Woman's Edition of the "P. and H. M. Society" "send greeting to all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity." Do not think, dear readers, that we have entered this sanctum without a sense of grave responsibility. As we look around at the portraits of some of the distinguished editors that adorn this office, and call to mind others who are not represented, but whose labors are recognized and appreciated by the paper, we are profoundly conscious that we have not measured up to the standard set by them. But with all its imperfections, we commend our paper to you. May it be a comfort and blessing to some one! If we have unconsciously caused disappointment, or given offense to any, we pray their forgiveness. Our chief object in publishing this edition is the salvation of souls and the glory of God. Our association as editors, business manager and Publishing Committee has been helpful and encouraging, occasionally "provoking each other to good works." And now we resign our brief editorial life at peace with everyone connected with this office and the dear old ADVOCATE. May it live long, and prosper, and continue to be a mighty influence in the "pulling down of the strongholds of Satan," and in "building up the kingdom of Christ!"

"EARTH HAS NO SORROW THAT HEAVEN CAN NOT CURE."

The religion of our Lord Jesus Christ is the cure for all the ills of life. "Without money and without price" this remedy may be obtained. Men and women have made pilgrimages of many weary miles to secure this priceless treasure, and been disappointed because they were unwilling to comply with the plain, simple terms of the gospel; repentance toward God and faith in Jesus Christ being the only conditions required. In Isaiah lxi the office of Christ is so touchingly described: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

If we are Christ's followers, we must imitate His example. We must walk in his footsteps "where'er they go." Are we willing to do this, dear sisters? Have we heard the voice of the Savior calling, "Take your cross and follow me?" Are we wholly consecrated to his service? If so, then, in the language of Bishop Galloway, "Christ hath no other hands, no other feet, but yours and mine." Let us, then, with renewed diligence," "work while it is called day, and improve every opportunity of pointing men and women to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

"O Christ, Redeemer, Master! I who stand
Beneath the pressure of thy gracious hand—
What is the service thou would'st have from me?
What is the burden to be borne for thee?
I, too, would say, though care and fear exhaust:
'What matters it? Love counteth not the cost.'"

The Louisiana Epworth League Convention will be held at Louisiana Avenue Church, Oct. 3 to 6. Distinguished speakers are expected, and every arrangement made for a successful meeting. A number of delegates have been provided for, and it is earnestly hoped there will be a grand rally of young Methodism. Unusual preparation has been made for good music. Mr. Adams, of Carondelet Street Church, has been appointed to lead the Epworth choir, and Miss Nonie Jones will preside at the organ. Let everybody attend, and make the meeting a memorable one in the history of Methodism in Louisiana.

P. AND H. M. WORK IN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

In the year 1886 the General Conference authorized the Church Extension Society to organize a Woman's Department of Church Extension, to collect funds for parsonage-building. At the General Conference, held in St. Louis in 1890, the more definite title of "Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society" was bestowed, and its powers so enlarged as to allow the new society to do any work coming under the head of home missions.

Mrs. Linus Parker was the first secretary appointed for the Louisiana Conference. Through her influence two societies were organized and a foundation for the future work was laid. Owing to ill-health, she resigned, and Mrs. S. S. King became her successor. Mrs. King traveled and organized sixteen societies in the Louisiana Conference. Through her zeal and devotion the work prospered, and in December, 1892, Mrs. King called the workers together at the Carondelet Street Church and organized a Conference Society with Mrs. F. A. Lyons, president; Mrs. C. W. Carter, recording secretary; Miss Mary Werlein, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. K. Widney, treasurer. Soon after this Mrs. King removed to North Carolina on account of failing health, and many prayers were offered for her recovery.

At the second annual meeting Bishop Galloway was invited to deliver the address in Felicity Street Church. It was full of inspiration, and set forth the need of this new society in unmistakable terms. At this meeting Mrs. Widney resigned, and Mrs. J. H. Campman was elected treasurer.

The third annual meeting was held in Louisiana Avenue Church. At this time Miss Mary Werlein was elected solicitor for "Our Homes," and Mrs. Florence Russ was elected corresponding secretary. Dr. Walter Lamtuth delivered the annual address on city evangelization, which so aroused all who were present that immediate steps were taken to do more aggressive home mission work in New Orleans.

Acting on a recommendation from the Central Committee, it was decided to change the time of holding our annual meeting from December to February.

During our Week of Prayer, held at Rayne Memorial Church, we had the pleasure of having our honored president, Mrs. E. E. Wiley, with us. It was a season of great profit. God blessed his people. Everyone who attended was impressed with Mrs. Wiley's deep spirituality. At the close of this week's service Miss Mary Werlein was elected organizer for the Louisiana Conference.

In January, 1894, we organized an Industrial School at the Tchoupitoulas Mission. In June the work had become so important that at a meeting of the New Orleans District Auxiliaries it was decided to engage a home missionary. Miss Susie Burbank, a consecrated young lady, consented to undertake the work, the different anxiliaries in New Orleans agreeing to contribute to her salary. Her usefulness can not be overestimated. No one doubts her fitness or call to the work.

Last October, through the cooperation of our pastors and leading physicians, a training-class for Christian workers was organized, and met once a week for five months, pastor and physician lecturing alternately a half hour each. Much valuable instruction was obtained and put into practical use.

The Reading Course, arranged by the Central Committee, has been recommended to all our workers. It comprises "Our Country," by Dr. Strong; "Prisoners of Poverty," by Helen Campbell, and "Applied Christianity," by Dr. Gladden. We must equip ourselves for service if we would be efficient workers in God's vineyard.

Our fourth annual meeting was held in the beautiful new church in New Iberia. Rev. J. M. Beard, pastor, preached the annual sermon. All the reports showed progress. Four parsonages had been helped during the year, and a number of Auxiliaries organized. Rev. F. S. Parker accompanied the delegation from New Orleans, and rendered valuable service during the session.

Eight months ago it clearly became the duty of the P. and H. M. Society of the New Orleans district to assume the rent and lighting of building used by Tchoupitoulas Mission, amounting to three hundred dollars per annum. At first we hesitated, but after praying for Divine guidance, we concluded to enter this open door. A district treasurer, Miss Mary Werlein, was appointed, a list of monthly subscribers secured, and the work continued with Mr. Hadley Harrison superintendent of the Mission. The devotion of this earnest Christian gentleman, and his remarkable adaptability for this work, is appreciated by all who have been connected with the Tchoupitoulas Mission. The Sunday-school is under the faithful care of Mr. H. Jones and his self-denying teachers. The Industrial School has continued to meet through the long, hot Summer. Miss Burbank, Mrs. S. A. Montgomery (one of its founders), Mrs. W. C. Nelson, Mrs. Sawyer, Mrs. Sutcliff, and others, have been willing to help train these children for future usefulness. There are three night services held each week. A protracted meeting for two weeks resulted in the conversion of fifteen persons last Spring. At the earnest solicitation of the P. and H. M. workers, Dr. Sawyer, the presiding elder, received these converts as members, organized a church, and appointed Rev. J. M. Henry, pastor.

The proceeds of this Woman's Edition of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE will be used as a building fund for a permanent house of worship in that neighborhood.

A PLEA FOR PARSONAGES.

The principle of selfishness belongs so essentially to human nature that it is accepted by the world at large as the right thing for a man to "seek his own," and not the welfare of his neighbor; and if one attempts, with unselfish zeal, to seek the good of others, there is always the unkind comment and critical sneer, "That man has an ax to grind." It is the same the world over—in the great social fabric, in commercial and political circles, and sometimes even in the churches themselves, and, from observation and experience, we are forced to admit this universal opinion of poor human nature to be true—in part, at least. There are so many who feign to be what they are not; who, under the appearance of generosity, conceal the selfish motive, and, under the mask of virtue and religion, hide the vicious propensities and low desires of the criminal. There are men—sometimes occupying positions of honor and trust—highly regarded for their liberality to public charities, who, in private, turn deaf ears to the appeal of the widow and orphan, and, unlike "the good Samaritan," "pass by on the other side" when the needs of suffering humanity would claim their time and attention.

Then, again, there are those who would be "good Samaritans" if sympathy and pity could "bind up the wounds" without the aid of the "oil and wine." They are always willing and ready to give largely and freely of the former commodity, and people say of them, "How deeply they feel the woes of others!" But sympathy and pity, although sweet and comforting to the sore, burdened heart, can not alone "feed the hungry and clothe the naked," and send spiritual food to the destitute. There must be something more, and this "something more" means not only pity and sympathy, but time and money. And as being directly contrary to the scriptural law, which says, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," mere sentiment must be set aside by the men and women who would follow in the footsteps of their Lord and Savior, and in its stead must be placed the broad platform which has for its foundation the principles of charity or love. That men and women have stood on this platform in the face of danger and persecution, and even death itself, is a truth which shines bright on the pages of history; and that men and women to-day stand on this platform in the face of poverty and privation and separation, is exemplified in the lives of our Methodist preachers and their wives. Noble and steadfast as the martyrs of old, they go forth, wherever the call is made, with their wives and children, to preach the glad tidings of the gospel of peace; to carry the good news of salvation to sad-eyed women and weary, toiling men, and bid them take shelter under the cross, which has proved to so many "the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

A band of Christian women, known as the "Parsonage and Home Mission Society," "by the issue of this paper, by conventions and much talking, by much time and labor, are standing on this platform (just a little nearer the edge than the preachers and their wives), and clamoring not for "Woman's Rights," but for help to build homes for these preachers and their families, for aid among the needy and destitute in our city, and for means to build a house where ignorant and perishing souls may be taught the "way of life." May God grant the response to be as true and hearty as the need is great, and so true and hearty that no preacher's wife can say, "We have no home!"

"Dispensing good where'er He came,
The labors of His life were love;
Then if we bear the Savior's name,
By His example let us move."

MRS. H. A. KENNEDY.

WORK OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE CARONDELET STREET METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

On Jan. 28 1878, in obedience to a call from Mrs. J. C. Keener, twenty-five Methodist ladies met in the classroom of Carondelet Church for the purpose of organizing themselves into a Woman's Missionary Society. After singing, and prayer by the pastor, Rev. J. C. Mathews, an election of officers was held, when Mrs. B. H. Moss was unanimously elected president; but she declined to serve on account of poor health. Mrs. Mathews was then nominated by Mrs. Walmsley, seconded by Mrs. Keener, and unanimously elected to fill that office. Mrs. Perry Nugent, Mrs. Moss, Mrs. Dannica and Mrs. Merrick were elected vice-presidents; Mrs. Justus Vairin, recording secretary; Mrs. R. M. Walmsley, treasurer, and Miss Phala Mathews, corresponding secretary. A resolution was passed constituting the president, vice-presidents and secretary a committee to prepare a constitution and by-laws for the control and guidance of the Society. After an interesting address by Bishop Keener, the meeting adjourned to meet the following month.

Such was the organization of the Woman's Missionary Society of Carondelet Church. Mrs. Mathews leaving the city in 1879, Mrs. R. M. Walmsley was unanimously elected president, which office she filled with the greatest ability until 1888, when she resigned on account of ill-health. Thereupon Mrs. W. W. Carre was unanimously elected, and the Society still continues under her administration. Mrs. Vairin, the first recording secretary, having resigned, Mrs. J. J. Lyons was elected and served for one year most efficiently; since which time Mrs. A. A. Bartels has been the faithful secretary of the Society.

In March, at the third meeting, a circular was received from Dr. Kelley, asking the Christian women of the church to send contributions for the purpose of aiding in the outfit of an assistant for Mrs. Lambuth in China; whereupon it was decided to send the first collection, amounting to $61.40, immediately to Dr. Kelley for that purpose. Miss Rankin was soon sent, and she proved a most zealous and devoted worker; ending her life in the cause. At the fifth meeting, in May, Mrs. Walmsley offered a resolution that the Society should obligate itself to contribute twenty-five dollars a month to the support of a female school in Mexico, which was unanimously passed. Although this continued to be the main object of the society for seven years, until 1885—when Mrs. Keener reported that the Parent Board, at Nashville, had assumed the payment of the teacher's salary—yet during these years the Society had made various other contributions: among them $50 to Mr. Ransom for Brazil; $25 to Mr. Lambuth for China; half the cost of an organ for a new congregation in Mexico; $125 toward equipment and salary of Miss Hallaran. Among other things boxes of little presents were sent to gladden the hearts of the little Mexicans at Christmas. The choice of Miss Hallaran from our midst was a most happy one, inasmuch as she proved herself a most able and efficient assistant to Mrs. Patterson, teacher of the little school in Mexico, which may be said to have been the special care of the three Societies organized by Mrs. Keener at Carondelet Street, Rayne Memorial and Louisiana Avenue Churches.

For several years Mrs. S. G. Weems did faithful work in our school, and, through her advice we continued to send a trunk for Christmas, with necessary articles of clothing, thus winning the hearts of the parents for our care of their little ones. One year our trunk contained over one hundred and forty suits. Much to our regret, Mrs. Weems was compelled to leave our work in Mexico on account of her husband's ill-health; but after returning home she still felt such an interest in Mexico that she prevailed upon us to employ a "Bible woman," who could visit and talk with the Mexican women. This we did for about one year, expending in this way $132.65. Besides this amount, we have contributed to our Mexican school since its organization $3,764 25. In addition, the Young Ladies' Auxiliary has contributed ready-made garments and money towards our annual Christmas offering.

The need of money in our school necessitated the withdrawal of our support from the Bible woman, as the two other churches that had assisted withdrew their support, and in May, 1893, we were left to care for it alone. God has been with us, however, for the school is prospering.

Mrs. Weems' mantle fell upon strong and willing shoulders when Mrs. Eliza M. Watkins, the wife of our presiding elder in Mexico, assumed control. Mrs. Watkins is devoted to the interests of our school, keeps us fully posted as to its progress, and makes judicious expenditures of all remittances sent her. The school has been fruitful in good results, many having been led to Christ and specially prepared for teachers. Many of our girls have married native preachers, who, in their turn, work for the cause.

About a year and a half ago we met with a severe loss in the death of our principal teacher, Miss Roldan. It seemed a strange and mysterious Providence that deprived us of one who seemed necessary to the success of our school; but, while He buries his workmen, He also raises others up to fill their places. Singular as it seems, her work will soon fall upon her niece, Julia F. Roldan, who came here four years ago, was educated by Dr. Featherstun, of the Woodville (Miss.) Seminary, and has returned to the City of Mexico to take her position as a worker in the only school she ever attended before coming to the United States. Catholic children, as well as Protestant, receive benefit from it.

Mrs. Keener was, from the beginning, the most zealous and devoted worker, having been most regular in her attendance at the monthly meetings of all three Societies, and unceasing in her efforts to increase the interest in the school. Whatever good may have been accomplished by the awakening of priest-ridden consciences, or by the enlightenment of dark minds, we may justly claim as due, in a great measure, to her faithful and consecrated effort.

In this connection my pen would fail to do its duty were I to omit to mention the unceasing devotion of Mrs. Mollie Keener Wilkinson to our work. Our hearts were saddened when her Lord took her unto himself, but He doeth all things well, and her name and works still survive her in the person of her daughter.

We, of Carondelet Church, ought to feel more interest in the Central Mexican Mission than in any other, as it was in our church, and by one of our members—Mr. R. M. Walmsley—that the generous donation of $1,000 was made which enabled Bishop Keener to proceed to the City of Mexico and there establish the first Southern Methodist Mission.

Every cent spent on the children of Mexico tells in favor of the good cause that we represent.

It may be of interest to state that, from statistics published by our Conference, we find in 1877 just before Mr. Patterson arrived in Mexico, that the number of members was seventy, with only thirty children in Sunday-schools. In 1887 the number of members was 1,774, with 1,069 scholars. Surely these figures ought to encourage and incite us to far greater liberality and exertion in this good work.

MRS. W. W. CARRE.

WOMAN'S WORK IN ST. LOUIS.

BY MRS. M. A. MATHEWS.

St. Louis is noted for her charitable institutions. When looking over a "register" of the same, we felt that almost every condition of human suffering and struggle had been provided for by the establishment of the varied charities which are an honor to the city and a blessing to her people. The women of the M. E. Church, South, are actively engaged in many of these philanthropic charities, and are officers and leaders in not a few. The object of this paper, however, is to make mention of institutions established and developed under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South.

The one most prominent, and of which Methodists are justly proud, is the "Methodist Orphans' Home." Orphan, or destitute children of Protestant parentage, are received into this Home, and boarded, clothed and educated free of charge. Half-orphans, if placed in the Home by their father, are charged five dollars; if by the mother, three dollars per month. These children are generally clothed by their parents. Orphans or half-orphans enjoy the same privilege of a good education. No children admitted to the Home under three years of age. Boys are cool retained in the Home over nine years of age. This Home had its beginning in a Methodist preacher's house (Rev. Wm. Prottsman), and the first inmate a little girl left on an ash-pile, and given the name of Mary, or Mary Ashley. Then Mr. Wm. H. Fairbank kindly and generously housed and clothed the destitute children gathered into this Home for ten years. In 1867 the Methodist Orphans' Home Association was organized. Messrs. Brogher, Cupples, Scruggs, O'Fallon, Scudder, Nichols and Carleton constitute the present Board of Trustees. Fine business ability and financial skill characterize this Board, as shown by the accomplishment of this year. There is also a Board of lady managers representing the churches of the district, who look after the details of the Home and collect from the churches for current expenses. Mrs. John J. O'Fallon is president, and throws her whole heart into the work. The twenty-seventh annual report shows an endowment fund of $15,156.12, and a building fund of $45,-943. Mr. Samuel Cupples made glad the hearts of all Methodists by proposing to build the new Home himself, if the consolidated fund of endowment and building funds were made one hundred and fifty thousand for endowment. The proposition was gladly accepted, and will be easily effected. The building is being pushed to completion, and provides every convenience, and will be an enduring monument of the generosity of this generation in behalf of those to follow. Let the Methodists from every section of the church make it a point to visit this Home when visiting our great city, and it will speak for the management. The new Home is situated on Cleveland and Newstead avennes. The Olive street car line is but a block distant. At present there are forty-seven in the Home—all that the contracted quarters will allow.

In all great centres of population conditions in human need arise for which the constitutions and by-laws of established homes do not provide. This fact caused a good Methodist woman to start what she calls an "Emergency Home." She knew of mothers who, through the drink habit, were disqualified for the care of their children. If brought to the attention of the Humane Society, that society would turn the children over to a Catholic institution provided for just such cases. Many Protestant children fall into the hands of Romanists because Protestants have not provided for such emergencies. So this Methodist woman started the home, and has nineteen children, besides the adults who give their services.

The Parsonage and Home Mission Societies have no union work at this time, but the auxiliaries are doing some mission work in the neighborhood of their respective churches. Three missionaries have been employed: by Centenary, St. John's, and Lafayette Park. Mrs. T. P. Ulmer is the missionary for Centenary, who, by the way, was converted in old Carondelet, and is a very efficient worker, having unusual gifts and graces.

In summing up the work done by Centenary for the Annual Conference, it was found that the money valuation of supplies sent to the frontier—supplies given the worthy unfortunates at home—amounted to more than one thousand dollars. It is a matter of surprise and regret that the local societies of all the churches do not consolidate under the name of Parsonage and Home Mission Societies, and thus become a part of the regular machinery of the church. It takes time to grow into some things; but, oh! the loss of force in the meanwhile. When the church has gathered all she can through the Sunday-schools, and has sheltered and clothed all she can through her orphan homes in the great centres of population, there are still the needy, the neglected, appealing to the individual sympathy and interest of the Christian.

The Lord meant it should be so; since he said: "The poor ye have always with you." "Inasmuch as ye do unto the least of these, ye do it unto me." The P. and H. M. Society is just what is needed in every church to aid in the highest individual development of the membership. We are given that we may impart.

"OUR HOMES."

We can not too highly commend "Our Homes," organ of the P. and H. M. Society. Its gifted editor, Miss Lucinda B. Helm, is a thoroughly consecrated Christian. She is keenly alive to the needs of the work, and wise in the management of the paper. By a concert of action on the part of the Conference Societies, we ought to double the subscription list the coming year.

The Convention number of Our Homes will be a double number, and full of interest, containing a complete account of the convention at Asheville, N. C. All should subscribe at once to secure it. Single copies may be had at five cents. Conference Societies, or Auxiliaries, can obtain them at $2.50 per hundred, or $4 50 for 200 copies. Send your orders at once to the editor, Miss Lucinda B. Helm, 1412 McGavock St., Nashville, Tenn.

How Mrs Wm. Henry Makes Money!

I have been so successful in the past few months that I feel it my duty to aid others by giving them my experience. I have not made less than $18 any day for the last five months, and have not canvassed any. I put a notice in the papers that I am selling the Iron City Dish Washer, and people send for them by the dozen. They give such good satisfaction that every family wants one. Dishes washed and dried in two minutes. I think any person can easily clear $10 a day, and double that after they get started good. I don't see why anyone should be destitute, when they may just as well be making lots of money if they try. Address the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and they will give you all instructions and testimonials necessary to succeed.

Copies of the Woman's Edition will be for sale at the ADVOCATE office, and also at the "Christian Woman's Exchange." All orders will be promptly filled by Mrs. W. W. Carre, business manager and treasurer. Money orders preferred.

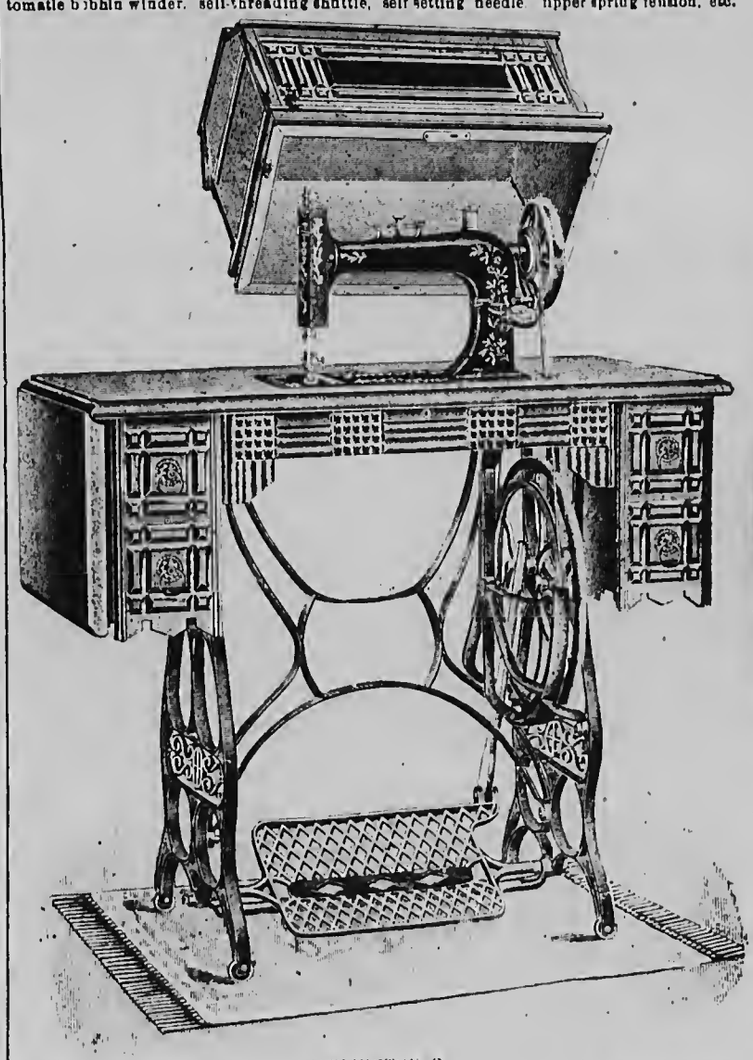
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows. One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clear.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short nibs and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened light and noiseless, and are very durable.

PARSONAGE AND HOME MISSION SOCIETY IN THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

BY MRS. H. W. FOOTE.

During the regime of the Woman's Department of Church Extension, there were several fitful efforts at organization in our Conference. Many of us, to whom letters and postal cards on the subject occasionally found their way, regarded these appeals with indifference, if not with downright impatience. The preachers' families, of whom we read as living on the frontier in hovels and sod houses, seemed too far off and unreal to deeply move us; and we could not realize the need of help in our own Conference, because our preachers on the hard circuits and missions bore their trials and privations so bravely and silently that we really knew nothing about them. In our short-sightedness we fancied that our hands were quite full with the W. M. S. and our local work, without undertaking anything more, and so we let these blessed opportunities go by unimproved.

When the General Conference of 1890 changed the name of the Society, and gave it a broader scope, the P. and H. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference was put in charge of Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, president of the W. F. M. S. (now, also, recording secretary of the W. B. F. M.), and secretaries were appointed for every district. Mrs. Hargrove at once brought her consecrated energy to bear upon the subject. She addressed to many of our representative women a circular letter, full of information and enthusiasm, that opened blinded eyes, and aroused sleeping consciences, and gave the work an impetus which it has never lost.

An organization meeting was held at Winona, March 19, 1891. The corresponding secretary reported twelve Auxiliaries, all but one of which had been organized within the preceding three months. Mrs. Robert Somerville was elected president, and Mrs. Hargrove continued as corresponding secretary. Mrs. Somerville brought to the work a strong intellect and indomitable will and energy. Her letters flashed, like electric sparks, over the Conference, startling and rousing to action. The first annual meeting was held at Carrollton, April 27 to 29, 1892. "Reports were encouraging, showing steady growth and increasing interest." Auxiliaries reported: Adult, 21; juvenile, 8. The second annual meeting was held in Macon, April 7 to 9, 1893, when the corresponding secretary reported 34 adult and ten juvenile Auxiliaries. At this meeting the time for holding annual meetings was changed from April to October. The third annual meeting was held at Holly Springs, October, 1894, when 52 auxiliaries were reported. In October next our fourth annual meeting will be held, when over 50 auxiliaries will be reported.

During our four years' existence as a Conference society we have assisted 10 needy parsonages within our own Conference; have sent promptly every quarter 50 per cent. of dues to the general treasurer, besides several liberal "specials;" and a number of our Auxiliaries have sent valuable boxes and barrels to the families of our frontier preachers. A large amount of local work has also been reported through our Society. God has greatly blessed our work, and to him must be ascribed all the glory. Each year brings us increased success and greater opportunities for usefulness. We feel ourselves particularly fortunate in our faithful, zealous district secretaries, and many capable, consecrated women have joined our ranks. May the day soon come when every Methodist woman in North Mississippi shall be a member both of the W. F. M. S. and of the P. and H. M. S.!

"A GLIMPSE OF OUR MISSION FIELD."

BY MISS SUSIE BURBANK.

I shall never forget my first experience in this hitherto unknown portion of our city, when, in response to the call from our Home Mission Societies, I commenced my labors as missionary. Following the directions I had in my possession, I found myself in a narrow street, hemmed in on the one side by a dingy and almost deserted market, on the other by an unbroken row of buildings without any outward manifestation of the population secluded there. I wondered where the people lived, but it was not long before I found myself behind these walls in the midst of a work which daily widens in its responsibility.

Souls, souls everywhere, and, oh! the fearful need in many cases of pressing the battle ere it be too late! Gray-heads on the verge of eternity, without Christ; dying men and women possessing not the faintest assurance of a future hope; children who hardly know the name of Jesus, and the scores upon scores of indifferent creatures who have forgotten God. Their need proved the inspiration which threaded its way through the successive days, linking faith to faith till the first blades began to appear, which shall, by his increase, be the "ear, after that the full corn in the ear." Shall not God be glorified when we consider that men who had not entered his house since the administration of the rites of baptism now find their way beyond its portals to the altar, praying for the salvation of their souls; that drunkards, abandoned to their woe, are led to turn from the broad way of destruction and find the way that leads to life eternal; that neglected children and destitute women are rescued, clothed, fed and instructed into the kingdom of God?

A few hasty sketches from life-scenes may give the reader some conception of the condition of these people at our very doors. Some months ago I found in a little shop, scarcely noticeable from the street for its unfavorable position, a sick and weary woman, who was endeavoring to maintain her existence by selling a few little wares that, to a thoughtful eye, revealed the sad fact what this support must be. Purchasing from her occasionally, adding a few words of encouragement, and ministering to her in times of deep distress, I won her confidence, and the home picture was held before my view—too sad, too long to repeat. To have comforted this aching heart would alone have been a great blessing; but she was invited to the mission, and subsequently converted, and through this instrumentality her husband was attracted to the house of God, where he had not been in twenty-five years. In answer to the inquiry of one of his friends, he remarked: "I would never have gone if the missionary had not come for me." Verily, we must "go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in."

Endeavoring to leave no stone unturned to gather in the lost ones, I went one afternoon, without exception, through the premises of a tenement building, wherein I found a family in which I became much interested. Through Christian entreaty the father was constrained to come just as he was—coatless and shabby—over to the Mission, where he was reclaimed from a backslidden condition, reinstated, and rejoices in the strength of his Savior, who enables him to touch not what first proved his downfall.

In another of these buildings devoted to the same purpose I was deeply impressed with a scene I witnessed within the last few weeks. Sent for by a woman apparently in a dying condition, I ascended the stairs to the fourth floor of the dreary old place. What a scene! A stormy night, no panes in the window-sash, a burning coal-oil lamp chimneyless, and a sick woman without a physician, medicine, or means for their provision. All that could be given to afford relief was provided, and, as I watched by her bedside, I would talk to her of her Redeemer. In answer to my inquiries as to her spiritual condition, she said with a confidence, the tone of which I never shall forget, "I know I am saved;" but a short time since this woman knew not God, nor thought of him in prayer.

Another touching incident is that of a mother who, after the loss of three children within twelve months, is again called upon to return the fourth to Him who gave—this time her only son, a boy of fifteen; promising, affectionate, and a child of God. The boy's request was to be buried in his old home in Mississippi. Accordingly the remains were to be removed before daylight of the following morning. Knowledge of the facts reaching the Mission, those interested went in search of a minister for the burial service. It was a difficult task, as it was Sunday, and the hour the one of all evening worship. However, one of our ministers kindly consented to officiate, and, after ten o'clock, the impressive ceremony was conducted. "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." The heart of a woman in that assembly of mourners was touched with the message of one of God's servants, was led to see the sincerity of our beloved faith; and we shall see how the work of love intertwines itself from heart to heart, from time to time. After a lapse of months this woman is led through a similar experience of sorrow in the death of her only little girl, a child of three years. The conditions of the case were soon learned, and, upon visiting her, it was found she desired to have the minister called to whom she had listened the night of many weeks previous. He was informed of her request, and again went to minister "unto one of the least of these." Let us unobtrusively, sympathetically attend one of these touching services. Here is a mother almost alone in her grief; her home a little room scantily furnished; one of a number composing a large, uninviting building these people call "home;" the meagre funeral outfit—the whole a picture sufficiently appealing to reach a hardened heart. I find myself here with a handful of flowers, and affected by the sad aspect, I will go from room to room, from story to story, that I may gather at least one or two to relieve the loneliness of the scene, and, too, that they might hear the gospel message and realize its solemn truth. My search, however, is in vain, for her friends are in the midst of their daily toil elsewhere; and, returning to be witness of the sad occasion, I thank God that "two or three of us are gathered together in his name" to comfort this stricken mother in her grief.

In conclusion, I would speak of the boys I have been privileged to gather into a class in the Mission Sabbath-school. These interesting pupils have been found here and there, and, attracted by sympathy in their temporal affairs, have been banded together, and are undoubtedly trying earnestly to walk in the footprints of Jesus; and beyond the Mission bear the reputation of "better boys."

These are the places, these the means, by which we may preach Christ. During the past months I have been called upon to act as physician, nurse, teacher, comforter, peace-maker, provider, watched by the bedside of the dying, invited thoughtless men, women and children from the streets to hear the gospel—in short, "I have been made all things to all men, that I might, by all means, save some."

"A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband."—Prov. xii, 4.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE WOMAN'S PARSONAGE AND HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

BY MRS CLARA H. COPE, CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

After six years of struggle an organization was effected at East End Church, Meridian, May 28, 1893. We have had two annual meetings since that time, and the Lord has been with us graciously. But we are constrained to add our entreaty with St. Paul's advice to our brethren: "Help those women who labored with us in the gospel, and others also whose names are written in the Book of Life." Our need is summed up in one little word—help; and, strange to say, we are suppliants at the door of this Conference, as of all other Conferences, of this church as of all other churches, save a few. Strange, that those who are to be benefited most seem most indifferent. When urging the work, we are met with, "We have so many organizations and so much to do." Surely we, your willing servants, are not the ones to whom complaint should be made. It is ours to do what the church asks of us—yea, what the church demands of us. The General Conference gave us the work, and we look to you for assistance.

The last General Conference approved our work, and enlarged its borders. The Bishops, everyone of them indorse it, and most of them by speech and pen entreat the church to come to our help. All remember how earnestly Bishop Key, at our last Annual Conference, pleaded with the brethren to assist us. None can forget the eulogy he passed upon Miss Lucinda B. Helm, until recently our General Secretary, and still editor of Our Homes. Her self-sacrifice, her complete abnegation, is a repetition of the heroism of apostolic times.

And so we women of your own Conference come to you and join our pleadings with Miss Helm and Mrs. Hargrove, and in the name of the Lord Christ, the Head of the Church, implore the assistance of our pastors.

No doubt you ask, "What do you want us to do?"

1. Give us your prayers. We need them. "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." "Prayer is the key which unlocks the storehouse of heaven and pours upon us blessings rich and large. Brethren, pray for us."

2 Whatever the preacher endorses and works for, will succeed. When the women and preachers unite their efforts upon any undertaking, it is an assured success. You can, with us, make the W. P. and H. M. Society a success, if you give us help. The design is a home for every servant of God. We women will never rest satisfied until every preacher has a comfortable home.

3. We want you, if you have not already done so, to organize an Auxiliary to the W. P. and H. M. Society. If there is a local Aid Society, make it connectional by turning it into a W. P. and H. M. Society. This can be done by adopting our Constitution and By-laws, and each member paying twenty-five cents a quarter.

One word in regard to an objection sometimes urged will not be amiss here. We are asked: "Why send money out of our charge? We who are so poor need every cent at home. Why send off to help others when we are so poor ourselves?" There is a passage from God's Word very applicable to such an inquiry. "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth, and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Withhold the dues, and the general treasury will be empty. Give, and the money can be distributed to the weak, and the strong shall thus help the weak.

Out of fifteen Auxiliaries in our Conference, Bay St. Louis, Summit and Port Gibson are the most flourishing. They have been faithful in stringent times—paying their dues regularly. And the result: Bay St. Louis has received from the Parent Board more money than she has paid in during the entire existence of the Auxiliary, and has one of the loveliest little parsonages in the Mississippi Conference.

"Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies."—Prov. xxxi, 10.

"The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil."—Prov. xxxi, 11.

"She will do him good, and not evil, all the days of her life."—Prov. xxxi, 12.

"She seeketh wool and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands."—Prov. xxxi, 13.

"Blessed above women shall Jael, the wife of Hebor the Kenite, be; blessed shall she be above women in the tent."—Judges v, 24

FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

BY MRS. M. A. STEVENS.

"Yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

The name of Miss Frances Ridley Havergal has become a household word on both sides of the Atlantic. She was born at Astley, Worcestershire, England, on Dec. 14, 1836, and died at Swansea, Wales, on June 3, 1879, aged forty-three years. She was the youngest daughter of the late Canon Havergal, a man of genuine piety and great gifts. The advantages which Frances enjoyed in her parental home bore good fruit. In this happy Christian home her poetic tastes were cultivated, and her brilliant natural gifts were systematized and trained so that she was able to use them with grace and power. This was what might have been expected, for her father was acknowledged to be the first modern authority on ecclesiastical music and psalmody. His devotion to the ministry of the gospel alone led him to refuse the professorial chair of music in the University of Oxford. He was rector of Astley for thirteen years.

As a child, Fanny was remarkable for her quiet and studious disposition. She was, when not more than ten years of age, deeply concerned about herself, and astonished her father's curate one day, when he happened to be alone with her, by asking his advice.

Her mother died in 1848, and Fanny was sent to school before her father's second marriage in 1851. She afterwards accompanied her father and stepmother on a tour in Germany in 1853, and spent the Winter in Dusseldorf, where she attended school. Seeds were sown during this sojourn which bore blessed fruit in her after life. In January, 1867, she paid a second visit to the continent, and has left us a characteristic poem entitled, "Traveling Thoughts," which records her deep love for her happy home. Her musical studies and occasional versewriting were plentifully relieved by physical exercises and games. She was a good swimmer and a graceful skater. She was a good linguist, and could converse fluently in German and French, and read the New Testament in Greek. But neither her accomplishments nor her love for physical exercises in any way detracted from her home duties.

In December, 1867, her father removed to Leamington, in Warwickshire, and there died suddenly of apoplexy on Easter Sunday, 1870. Mrs. Havergal continued to reside in Leamington, and Fanny made her home with her stepmother, between whom and herself there was a very warm attachment.

In 1874 she enjoyed a pedestrian excursion in Switzerland with some friends. Returning from Switzerland to England, she spent some time in her old home at Oakhampton, and at once began her diligent work. Every day seemed now to open doors of usefulness, and she longed for whole households to taste with her of the goodness of the Lord. One extract must serve as a glimpse of many others. She says: "Perhaps you will be interested to know the origin of the consecration hymn, 'Take my life.' I went for a little visit of five days. There were ten persons in the house; some unconverted, and long prayed for; some converted, but not rejoicing Christians. He gave me the prayer, 'Lord, give me all in this house.' And he just did! Before I left the house everyone had got a blessing. The last night of my visit I was too happy to sleep, and passed most of the night in praise and renewal of my own consecration, and these little couplets formed themselves and chimed in my heart one after another till they finished with, 'Ever, only, all for Thee!' The beautiful couplet in the same hymn,

'Take my voice, and let me sing
Always, only, for my King,' was thenceforth really carried out."

She says, in a letter to a friend: "The Lord has shown me still another step, and, of course, I have taken it with extreme delight. 'Take my silver and my gold' now means shipping off all my ornaments (including a jewel cabinet which is really fit for a countess) to the Church Missionary House, where they will be accepted and disposed of for me. I retain only a brooch or two for daily wear, which are memorials of my dear parents; also a locket with the only portrait I have of my dear niece in heaven, my Eveline, and her 'two rings' mentioned in 'Under the surface.' But these I redeem, so that the whole value goes to the Church Missionary Society. I had no idea I had such a jeweler's shop. Nearly fifty articles are being packed off. I never packed a box with such pleasure."

During a visit to London, Frances was invited to an amateur musicale. Some classical music was rendered, and she was especially charmed by the unfinished singing of an Italian lady. Last of all, she herself was invited to the piano. True to her resolve,

"Let me sing,
Only, always, for my King,"

she chose a song of Handel's; and when the hostess graciously pressed her for one of her own composition, she sang, "Whom having not seen, ye love." The rooms were hushed, and then the Italian stranger, with tears in her eyes, sought her, as she left the piano, with: "Miss Havergal, I envy you. Your words and face tell me you have something I have not."

It had been arranged that she should visit the Irish Church Mission stations in June, 1879, but that tour was never performed. Before setting out Miss Havergal proposed holding a farewell meeting for the sailors and village boys, who almost idolized her. The meeting was held May 21, 1879, on the village bank. The day was cold and damp, and, while standing a long time on the cold ground, heavy clouds came up from the Channel, and she returned home wet and chilly with the rain and mist.

She took a severe cold, but the next day insisted on going out again to pay farewell visits. This cold soon developed into pneumonia. On June 2 her pastor, seeing she was dying, said to her, "He is with you." Her face lighted up as she answered, "Of course, he is!" Shortly before death she tried to sing. She had scarcely uttered a note when her voice ceased, and, without a struggle, she was gone.

In her poems we find the best key of her life. Emphatically, she was one of God's own poets; and as she wrote and sang, others read and heard more and more perfectly the melody of the growing life of consecrated service.

Her funeral took place June 9, in her native village, in the burial-ground surrounding the church where her father had preached for many years, and within the sight of the rectory where she was born. There had been heavy storms all day, but as the service ended the sunshine came, and a chorus of birds burst forth emblematic of her bright and glorious entrance into that mansion prepared for her, where sorrow and sighing, which she labored here to mitigate, can never come.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Oct., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on this page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Oct., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2 45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

For Thin Children.
Children are always thin and pale when they do not assimilate enough fat. This seems strange, perhaps, but it is literally true. Unless there is a healthy assimilation of fat food the blood becomes depleted, tissues waste away, vitality becomes low and the body languishes for the need of proper nourishment.
Scott's Emulsion
is useful to children, especially in two ways. It is Cod-liver Oil emulsionized, thus being easily assimilated and rendered palatable, with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda added to tone up the nervous system and nourish the bones. This combination of these potent nutrients is just what thin children need to give them flesh, color and vitality. Almost all children like it.
Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

A Rare Chance to Make Money!

I am convinced that anyone that will hustle, can make from $10 to $15 a day selling Climax Dish Washers. They give such good satisfaction that every family wants one. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes, without danger of breaking dishes or without wetting the hands. In the past six months I have cleared over $20 a day without canvassing any; people either come or send for Washers, and my trade is increasing all the time. This business is equally good in country, town or city, and any lady or man can make money anywhere if they will only try. After careful examination I find the Climax decidedly the best Dish Washer made. The Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio, will give you full instructions. Go to work at once and let us hear how you succeed. It is certainly our duty to inform each other of these golden opportunities.

MISS SUZIE L. LYONS,

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

The young people's organized religious movement is one of the phenomena of the century.

We have seen the coming of this army of the Lord—"an army with banners"—not "terrible with banners," but intense, enthusiastic, pervasive. An army enlisted for life, and one that will never sound a retreat. The "bone and sinew" of young America, all consecrated to Christ.

The Epworth League, like the Methodist Church, has arisen in response to a demand.

This new "Army of the Maltese Cross" was organized six years ago, and the Southern Methodist division was mustered in one year later.

The Epworth League has come to stay. It is an integral part of the church, and should be a right arm of power.

We find in the Epworth League a religious and social body, the harmonious blending of the spiritual and literary features and of foreign and home missionary effort.

"Service" is the key-note of the Epworth League. Hundreds of young people are standing idle all the day, when opportunities are calling loudly for their service. Give them a chance.

Time waits for no man, neither does God's work.

A Christian is incomplete for service without Christ as his partner. Put your heart into your work; to do this you must live near to the heart of God.

One of the important objects of the Epworth League is its literary work. It believes that it is an essential part of Christian duty to improve the mind. The Leagues must read.

The head must be trained as well as the heart.

"All head makes an iceberg; all heart a fanatic."

The Christian life should be broad and deep.

A course of lectures on church history, the doctrines and discipline of Methodism, the separate books of the Bible, and kindred topics, will furnish food for both intellect and soul.

Let the vast army of the young people of the present generation be awakened to Christian work by the drum-beat of the League's roll-call; let them be thoroughly drilled in Christian tactics and thoroughly informed in reference to the wonderful movements, doctrines and purposes of God's great church; let their minds be fully furnished with religious knowledge; let their young hearts be kept throbbing in unison with the great loving heart of the Savior, and they will become the mighty instruments in the hands of God to conquer the world for Christ.—Selected.

KNEE DRILL.—General Booth insists upon knee drill. We can not do without it. Prayer is an economizer, prayer is an energizer. If we take the world for Christ, we must advance on our knees.—Selected.

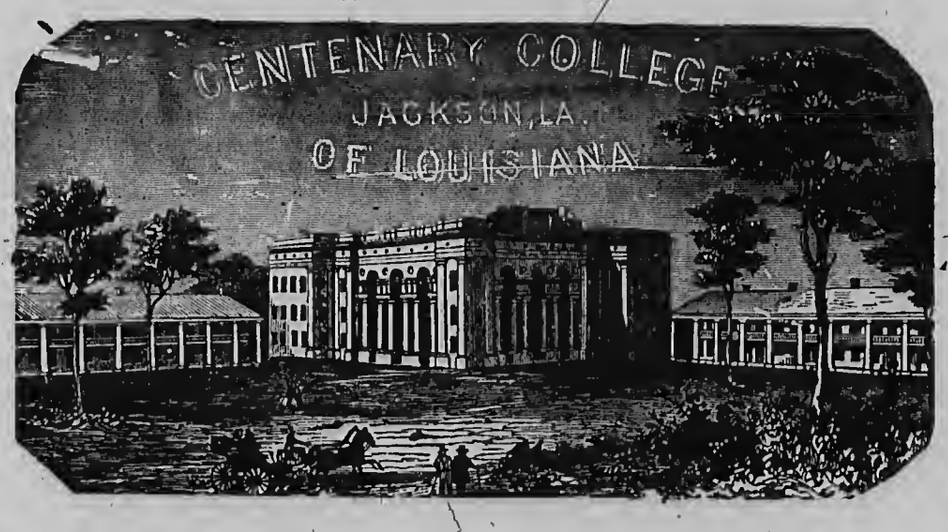
JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

After more than sixty years in the work of Christian education, Centenary College began the present session under flattering auspices, and is moving forward with commendable zeal and earnest purpose.

Four great Universities are represented in the Faculty of Centenary, viz.: Wesleyan, Vanderbilt, Tulane, and the University of Mississippi. The majority of the teachers are young and enthusiastic, and "apt to teach."



The regular session begins first Wednesday in September and closes first Wednesday in June. Thirty-five dollars pays all college fees for an entire session. A room in dormitory costs five dollars per session. Table board is ten dollars per month. Board, including everything necessary, is fifteen dollars per month.

The town of Jackson is well supplied with churches and void of saloons. Its citizens are a quiet, cultured people. These make up surroundings well calculated to bring out the best there is in a boy. Connected by a new railroad with the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley R. R., the college is easy of access from any part of Louisiana.

In regard to the character of work done at Centenary, we refer with pride to the students who have gone through our course of study. They are in Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana, and in all these States they are in the lead in their various callings. On this point we are glad to present the opinion of one who studies men and knows who are leaders.

Gov. M. J. Foster says: "In my canvass of the State, in every parish and community I met students and graduates of Centenary College. Their influence for good is felt everywhere in society, in business and official life. The Alumni of Centenary College have filled the highest judicial stations in our State with credit and distinction. The most honored of the legal profession, the most eloquent divines, and the leaders in all the useful and dignified lines of life, are her sons. If I were called upon to say what school had left the greatest and best impress upon the society, business and government of Louisiana, I would unhesitatingly say, CENTENARY COLLEGE."

DEDICATED TO W. F. M. S. OF M. E. C., S.

BY ELIZABETH J. FULLILOVE.

The drama most sublime, potential most,
In all creation vast had thrilled the heart
Of the whole universe; the scenic stage
Was spread on Calvary, with rugged floor
Of rock and sward, deep dyed in precious red,
The pure of souls, beneath a canopy
Of clouded drapery, suspended from
High arches of the universal dome.
Throughout the scene, the muffled drums of heaven
Kept mournful time to dying throbs of Him—
The Son of God—incarnate on the cross.
Of this great tragedy, the theme was Love,
God's love to man; with audience
Of seraphim, and earth-born multitude,

'Twas near the City of Jerusalem
That Jesus Christ had late been crucified.
They buried him in Joseph's new-made tomb
And set a Roman guard.

On the third morn
Death's bonds gave way before the inborn life,
And Jesus rose triumphant from the grave;
Appearing thus to waiting women near
Who quickly ran and told what they had seen.

Excitement followed fast on news so strange,
And late mid-day, the city was astir
With many rumors. Annas, the High Priest,
And Pontius Pilate met in conclave deep,
Questing for natural ways to reconcile
Divine with human laws; meanwhile, in fear
Men crowded anxiously about the tomb
And talked of these amazing happenings.
The crucifixion and its terrors dark
Followed by this surpassing mystery—
The disappearance of the Crucified.

The live-long day brought no repose to fears;
Nor did the shades of night bring rest to hearts,
Grown faint with yearning after things to come,
But with the gruesome dark, men sought their homes,
And mystery was left enthroned in gloom.

Before next dawn, a woman went her way
Through the solitary streets to Joseph's tomb;
A lonely spot amid the blackness grim,
The drooping grass was wet with heavy dew,
And all the air was dense with rank perfume
From hemlock, myrtle, sycamore and fir,
The yellow camphire, rose of Sharon fair,
The lily bells, and noisome night-shade blooms.
Cool breezes whispered in the lofty trees
And mother-birds amid the olive boughs
Were twittering to fledglings, half asleep,
All else was still.

But the invisible
Presence reveals itself, with potent spell
To listening souls, apart in solitude;
In hush of this dark night on sighing breeze
Were spirit voices, low and sibilant,
Yet conscient unto her, the watcher brave,
Whose every soul with sense was in tension bent
To catch the mystic sounds aerial.

Beneath a lofty palm, with dripping leaves,
She sat upon the grass, enveloped in
The unpierced dark that goes before the dawn.
Uncanny fears born of the quiet hour
Disturbed her not; she peered into the gloom
Expectantly, for spirit-presence near,
Or studied the pale stars which herald day.

Like journey she had made on yester morn,
One of three Marys come to embalm their Lord,
Whom they had found in resurrected life.
But now the Magdalene came alone,
Perchance once more to see Him—hear Him speak,
And waiting thus, she mused on many things,
But chiefly on her past before she knew
The Sinner's Friend.

That time she saw him first
She recollected well! As Master, stern
She oft had heard them tell of Him, and feared
To meet a man so pure, knowing herself
A sinner vile—and then, oh, then, at last
In guilt and shame, had she been led by men
Into the Temple where this Jesus taught.
With subtle thought to tempt and then accuse,
They said to Him: "Now Moses in the law
Commanded that this woman should be stoned;
What sayest Thou?"

At memory of the scene,
A blush of shame spread over cheek and brow;
She saw herself—a outcast bold—and yet
She felt a bitter sense of their unjust
Interpretation of Mosaic Law.
An impulse rose to urge this rightful plea,
But ere she spoke, the Master sentence gave:
"Let him who hath not sinned cast the first stone."

As her accusers passed out one by one,
Her wondrous gaze was fastened on the Man
Who stood majestically, all alone
And spoke to her in quiet tenderness.

"Hath no man condemned thee?"
"Not one, my Lord."
"Neither do I. Go thou and sin no more."
In hours of misery, she never knew
Such loving kindness, and her weary heart
Grew sick beneath its consciousness of guilt.

The day of all most joyful of her life
Was when she found Him grasing Simon's board;
The leper, rich and proud, had treated Him
Neglectfully—No water for his feet,
Nor greeting kiss, that Jewish social law
Imposed for all. It made her sorrowful
To see Him thus insulted; knowing what
Great honor was His due; and in her zeal
She hastened to atone for such contempt.
With copious tears, surely her own to use,
She washed His feet, then wiped them with her hair.
E'en kissing them the while in love's excess.
Her alabaster box of ointment rare,
She gladly broke and poured the fragrant oil
Upon his head

Judas Iscariot
Denounced, as blameful waste, the offering
Which might have fed a multitude of poor;
But Jesus quick reproved these selfish thoughts.
"Thy riches are thine own to give the poor;
For they are always here. Let her alone,
She gives her best unto my burial.
And wheresoe'er my gospel is proclaimed,
This work which she had wrought shall there be told
As her memorial. Thou, daughter, go;
Thy faith hath saved thee."

Wildly, reviewing thus
These checkered scenes, the night was waning fast,
A silvery mist sifted among the trees.
And ghostly sentinels of stature vast,
With slow majestic glide and hooded forms
Came crowding into space. Then golden rays
In thick battallions chased the phantoms grim;
Clearing the way before the blushing morn;
Then all was light.

The watcher's yearning eyes
Grew luminous, as o'er the scene they roamed.
It was in early dawn He came before,
And surely, now He would again appear.

In vain, for save the glad birds' matin song
In joyous nature's praise, dead silence reigned.
The confession came, and then the sun space
Full-orbed and grand, proclaimed a new-born day.

The watcher sighed: Alas! no Lord was here.
Dwelt there a shade of doubt within her soul?
Or had her faith, steadfast and strong by night,
Grown faint when unsustained by buoyant hope?
Bend low and listen to the words she spoke so fervently:

"He cometh not; and yet
I know, I know that my Redeemer liveth!
There stands the sepulcher with broken seal,
The stone that closed Him in lies near apart,
Convulsed from door of tomb when Death was slain.
No Roman soldiers there—no need for them—
Their Victim crucified is Conqueror.
Just there he stood, among the lilies white,
Beneath the palm. The bursting blooms upheld
Their heads in sympathy with nature's joy
When he was near. I see no faint impress
Upon the yielding sod, but traces deep
Are printed on my heart, indelibly.
And these pure flowers ever will remain
Reminders of the happy Easter Morn.
In gray of misty twilight, I bethought
The gardner had early come to work.
But then—the deep, sweet voice in accents clear,
Called my unworthy name: 'Mary!'—'All hail!'
His first known word in resurrected life
Was 'Mary.' Ah! a wondrous name I bear—
The risen Son of God hath taken it
Upon His glorious lips. His tender tones
With joy my being thrilled so heavenly,
That soul and body both in ecstacy
Fell prostrate at his feet, crying lowly,
'Rabboni—Lord.'"

This honor were enough
For endless years of life, but wonder great!
He condescended to entrust to me
An errand, most divine.
"Be not afraid;
To my disciples go and tell these things:
And lo! I go before to Galilee."

I comprehended not what worlds of life
The message held, but now I understand.
Risen! Then all shall rise; yes, all the race.
These tidings glad, entrusted were to me—
Yes, even me!

Our Mother Eve brought death
Into the world, and now her daughter saved
Is chosen messenger of happy life.
None, but a Savior full of pardoning love
Could thus have shown such mercy, unsurpassed
To womanhood.

"Go tell—be not afraid"—
Yes, Master dear, I now will go and tell
And tell and go as long as life endures.
My sisters will I seek, Eve's daughters all,
In bondage to the curse, till Jesus Christ,
Emancipator, come to their relief.

To those, in slothful ease or pleasure thrall
I'll tell of Him who died that they might live.
And then I'll go to those less favored ones
Whose slippery path lies on the treacherous brink
Of that abyss, the miry slough of Despond.
I'll take them by the hand and set their feet
Upon the aged Rock where safely dwells.
Yes, I will lovingly enfold their forms
And kiss their fevered lips, stained deep with sin:
For 'twas such love as this that lifted me
To fellowship with my dear risen Lord.

Yet others lost are calling loud for help,
"The uttermost" from lowest heathendom
Are crying in the dark for light—some light.
Ah! what a surging crowd comes looming up!
With every moment filled, my one poor life
Is time too short for work that must be done
Before the nations all shall hear the Word.
For one small deed of love, he said of me,
"She hath done what she could."

I would do more—
And this poor life is all I have to give.
Dear Lord, 'tis Thine! direct it with Thy will.
Ah! Mary lost and Mary found must go.

In hush of early morn, she went her way
With joyful mien, from Joseph's garden spot
Into the world—a messenger of life.
Pure Easter lilies in her arms she bore.
A gem immortal in her rescued soul.

AN UNWORKED FIELD.

BY MRS. W. R. LAMBUTH.

The doctrine of the brotherhood of man is no mere sentiment, but is to-day a marked force in the world. It is the vital principle which animates the many forms of Christian benevolence. What save the sense of personal responsibility in being our brother's keeper has given birth to all kinds of missionary work both at home and abroad? University Settlements have been established in our cities where men and women of refinement and culture make their home among the poor and illiterate. By these object lessons of the most practical kind, by open doors and a kindly welcome they, gain the hearts of the people, teach cleanliness of body and home, and awaken and inspire them to intellectual activity. In fact, the entire man is uplifted in a wonderful degree.

Free Kindergartens for the children of the poor, opening, as they do, a new world to many neglected little ones, are surely the outgrowth of the love and sympathy which found expression in the words of our Savior: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." "Doors of Hope" have been opened for our outcast sisters, wherein they have rejoiced to know that "though their sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow." Most earnest have been the efforts of some of these, who have been reclaimed, to take the good tidings to others, and they have been the means of leading many into the knowledge of Christ. Only a few weeks since one went forth from the New York "Door of Hope" to carry the light into Darkest Africa. May God bless these and other efforts being made to teach love to God and man!

But there is one field as yet practically untouched: work among the men and women in our penitentiaries. As yet, in the South, little has been done in this department. How many women have given this field any study? What may be done to better the conditions? This paper is not so much to suggest what shall be done as it is a plea for intelligent study of the problems peculiar to these unfortunates, and to urge that we women may use our influence to work up a public sentiment that must always underlie any successful effort at reform.

We are glad to know that one most important step has been taken by the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society in the organization and establishment of schools for mountain whites, for in our very limited experience we find the larger proportion of the women in our Southern penitentiaries are from the mountain regions, and that they are densely ignorant. Education must prove one of the best and most effective of preventive agencies. As prevention, however, is not always possible, we must strive to better existing evils within prison walls. Even with our advantages and enlightenment, if we were confined for years within narrow precincts, with no occupation for mind or body, with evil companions on every side, and with rough guards to constantly arouse the worst elements in our nature, would we come out of such a place better or worse?

We would not do away with penitentiaries. They are necessary for the preservation of life and property, and for the welfare of the State, but not to be used as spoils for politicians. The bane of our present system is that its appointments depend largely upon local officials. Let them be taken out of politics, let good, Christian men be superintendents of prisons, and let the public see that honest wardens and upright guards be appointed. With such surroundings incarcerated men and women will surely become better. Punishment that is not remedial is wrong, and man has no right to inflict such on his fellow man.

It goes without saying that prisons and penitentiary buildings should be such as to promote the betterment of those confined, and younger men should be kept entirely separate from hardened criminals; otherwise they leave the place graduates in crime to become a perpetual menace to society. Stringent enforcement of regulations concerning separation and the wise classification into different departments according to first, second or third terms of imprisonment would do much to aid reform. Great good is being done by the chaplains and prison Sunday-schools; but, as one of the inmates remarked: "The preaching and the teaching may do some good, and we may have desires to be better, but when one is treated with cruel injustice by some brutal guard, all good resolutions vanish before a wild longing for revenge." Another one urged to become a Christian shook his head in a hopeless way, and said: "No use. A man can't be a Christian in here. It is hard enough to be a consistent Christian outside with all the help and encouragement possible, but it is ten thousand times harder to be one here. Why, if you were to put a good man here with nothing to do, and with these surroundings, he would soon become bad."

We are glad that Chautauqua Circles have been established in some of the Northern prisons, and hope the day may soon come when there will be one in every penitentiary. For whatever tends to develop the intellectual or the spiritual in man lifts him above the brute, and how sadly does the criminal class need every possible uplift.

The writer knows of women who are so situated that to live a life of shame is made easy, while to reject the infamous proposals of lecherous guards requires a nature which God alone can strengthen to successful resistance. Their sins may be largely those of commission; ours in failing to relieve our unfortunate sisters are none the less dark because they are those of omission. Should we not feel conscience-smitten in quietly allowing such things to be unless we raise our united voices in earnest and continued appeals for reform?

"And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee, blessed art thou among women."—Luke i, 28.

"When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me."—Matt. xxvi, 10.

"Favor is deceitful, and beauty is vain; but a woman that feareth the Lord she shall be praised."—Proverbs xxxi, 30.

"Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all."—Proverbs xxxi; 29.

"She hath done what she could, she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying."—Mark xiv; 8.

THE PERSONAL TOUCH.

BY MRS. MARY M'GEE SNELL.

Some time ago there marched under the electric lights of New York an army of unemployed; men and women walked in sullen silence, carrying banners on which were inscribed these words: "I am hungry." If we might catch the unspoken longing of the world's heart, we would hear the same words: "I am hungry;" yet the yearning is not so much for food and raiment as for love. It was to answer this cry that Christ came.

Since "the beginning" God had "so loved the world" he caused the earth to bring forth her increase for the comfort and need of man. He wrote his love letter in the stars of the firmament and taught the faithfulness of his care in the lilies of the field, and the birds of the air. Through sunlit centuries of the past all things have been voices endeavoring to convince man of the love of God; but it was not till God dwelt among men, and gave himself, that human consciousness awoke to the realization that God's love is personal, and that his call is the call of the Father to the child, "My son, give me thine heart."

John, the beloved disciple, says: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our own hands have handled." It was thus through personal contact that Christ revealed such infinite depths and heights of God's love that the intensest longing of thirsty souls could never reach its limit, or fail to be filled and satisfied through its boundless supply.

He laid his hands on the decaying flesh of the lepers, and it became as pure and whole as that of little children. He touched blind eyes, and they beheld the light. He banished the fever from restless hands, and they immediately administered unto others. He raised the dead, and commanded food to be given unto them. He calmed the storm, fed the hungry multitude with bread, such as old-fashioned kitchens become fragrant with on baking days, and he spoke such living words that they who heard forgot that hopes ever came fluttering back like carrier birds beaten home, broken-winged, by the tempest—that ever a human love grew cold, or that a grave was ever filled. As sunbeams kiss the blackness of the pool, till from its depth a new life springs and finally crowns its surface with a star-like flower, white as moonbeams make the snow, fine as silk the women hung in temples long ago, and as fragrant as a dimpled baby's breath, so the touch of Christ wakens in the human heart the perfect blossom of an exquisite peace, which no wind of earth can ruffle or frost of Winter blight.

Dr. Strong writes: "As the Father sent Christ, so Christ sends his followers into the world—as revealers of his love. Filled with God and his love, the Christian is to save men by a divine contagion—by a living touch. It is not enough to yearn over men at a distance; the Christian is God's leaven, and leaven must mingle with meal; he is God's salt, and salt can only save as it comes in actual contact. God's might love could only save as it came to men in human form and uttered itself in human speech. Heaven must needs touch earth."

We can not toss a tract to an impenitent sinner, as he walks in the dust of the highway—dust made thicker, perhaps, by the roll of our carriage wheels, and expect that alone to bring him to Christ; but we must give the message with the thrill of God's love in our voice, a lingering pressure of sympathetic fingers in our hand's clasp, and an unutterable faith making eloquent our eyes, telling him of our trust, that he will yet reach the heavenlies in Christ Jesus, and all of this must be supplemented by a desire to be to him all God would have us, and we must do it as not unto the sinner defiled; but as unto our brother for whom Christ died.

A woman going along one of the sidewalks of Chicago carelessly removed her glove, a splendid diamond slipped from her finger and fell in the black, soft mud of the street. Instantly she stooped and plunged her beautiful hands in the slush and filth of the gutter, moving them about until she found her jewel. Christ would have us search for precious souls sunken deep in the night of the world's misery and sin. It is lives laid down that will save the world.

A regal Easter lily was broken and given to a woman hardened in sin, and serving a long sentence in the State's prison. She bent her marred face to the coolness of the lily's cheek, when the sweet soul of the broken flower kissed the cold, cruel lips of the woman. Suddenly the sins of the years seemed to melt away, tears filled her eyes, her lips quivered with emotion as she said, in heart-broken tones: "This brings back the days when I was profound good, and makes me wish I could get nearer to God. It takes the bitterness out of my heart for the first time—for the first time in all these weary years." The lily had not lived in vain.

O, if only we believed it, that, filled with Christ, we can win souls to him so quickly, so easily. The streamlet flows in and out among the pines, and earth blessed by its water waves its palms of praise and yields its wealth of flowers. She, the woman with heaven in her face, and God's melody in her voice, came with fruit and song into the hospital ward where the charity patients had suffered all day with heat and pain; and lo! when the doctor came he found the restless moaning banished and a divine resignation in human eyes he had not seen before.

Zaccheus received in his house a heavenly guest one day, and then ever lived an honest life. Peter went fishing with the master in the boat, and evermore became a fisher among men. Christ touched a woman's soul who came to draw water, and the message she carried from him brought a whole city to his feet. A dying thief turned his eyes upon the Friend of sinners as he hung near by, and in a few hours exchanged the cross for paradise.

O, let us touch Christ, and then as metals that receive power to attract from magnets, let us go among men and, bringing Christ down to date, till earth with peace and heaven will praise.

"ATTEMPT GREAT THINGS FOR GOD. EXPECT GREAT THINGS FROM GOD."

BY MRS. FLORENCE E. RUSS,
Cor. Sec. Lit. Conf. W. F. and H. M. S.

The work of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, of the Louisiana Conference, is steadily growing in numbers and interest. Since Jan. 1, 1895, twelve new Auxiliaries have been organized. The Conference roll consists of twenty-seven adult and eight juvenile Auxiliaries, with a membership of 526 adults and 173 juveniles.

With a few exceptions the Auxiliaries disbanded for the Summer months, and but little has been done during the past quarter. Many of the Auxiliaries do not realize the importance of keeping a strict record of work done, such as visits to the sick and strangers, garments and papers or leaflets distributed and Bible readings given. Push the work, pray for the work, and grant that each one of us may so labor that God will see none more faithful or efficient.

One of the best and easiest things a preacher can do is to organize a Parsonage and Home Mission Society in his charge. Each member represents $1 per annum, and fifty per cent. of that is invested in a home for preachers' wives and children. Every church in our Methodism needs a band of Home Mission workers; those doing personal work with the unsaved in our churches, and willing to go out into the highways and hedges and bring sinners to the house of God; to visit the sick, feed the hungry, clothe the naked, comfort the bereaved. What pastor does not yearn in his soul to see an extension of work along this line.

"As ye sow, so shall ye reap."

The office of corresponding secretary is a most important one, and upon her earnest, faithful labors depends much of the success of our work. One of the most necessary duties is promptness and punctuality in sending her reports. Would that each corresponding secretary read the leaflet on "The Model Corresponding Secretary," by Mrs. M. A. Morton, distributed last quarter.

Realizing the importance of training our young people in all lines of Christian work, we urge the organization of juvenile P. and H. M. Societies: "The object of this society is to interest the young people of the church in missionary work, to secure their help in carrying it forward, and to cultivate piety and systematic giving.

At the Asheville Convention it was suggested that each P. and H. M. S. organize a "Baby Roll," membership twenty-five cents per year. We trust that many names will be enrolled this year on our "Baby Roll," and these quarters will help swell the treasury, as well as teach our little children to help in church work.

Our Savior's commands were to the disciples: "Go, preach," to the woman, "Go, tell." The latter is often the most effective.

The Asheville Convention recommends that the Ladies' Aid Societies in our different churches be merged into the P. and H. M. Society, thus receiving recognition for work, as an authorized society of the church, and still carry out their plans and purposes for local work.

May our motto be, "More of Christ and less of self," and may God's richest blessings rest upon the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

"The fields are indeed white unto the harvest but the laborers are few."

The Auxiliaries in the Louisiana Conference are working with new interest this year, and we think will accomplish a good work. We desire to see an increased interest in the Mountain and Cuban mission schools.

We can not too earnestly press the claims of the Mutual Building Fund. Many of the Auxiliaries feel that they can do but little, as many claims of local nature are upon them.

By urgent request at the Asheville Convention, our Conference Society was pledged to raise $60 by June 1, 1896, for this fund. We present a plan suggested by our general secretary, in regard to meeting this obligation. If adopted by the Auxiliaries, we could easily raise the amount, and possibly more. "That ten women should pledge themselves to give ten cents per week for ten weeks, or twenty women five cents per week for ten weeks," and thus fill one book of shares.

Dear Sisters, may each one of us be faithful in this work "unto death;" that we may receive "a crown of life," and that it may be said of each one of us, "She hath done what she could."

"And the angel said, Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favor with God."—Luke i, 30.

EDITED BY MRS. MARY HEAD COOPER.

With Florence Balgarnie, "it is borne in upon me more and more that this is Woman's Century, the century of all others in which we may be glad to live: this and none other would I have chosen had choice been granted to me. Women during this century have triumphed over difficulties and disadvantages in the economic, the social, the educational and the religious worlds. Their homes are not less home-like because their outlook has grown wider; in working for public interests and caring for those who have fallen by the way, they do not love their own children less, but their power to love has grown in the loving, as their power to act has grown by service. Their public conscience has been aroused and private conscience quickened."

Bartholdi's beautiful statue in New York harbor of a woman holding aloft a light to enlighten the world was a happy conception and reminds the thoughtful that a woman really gave this great country to the world. To Isabella, a woman of purity of life and conduct, far ahead of all her contemporaries, a woman who "willed that she might do God's will," it was given to raise aloft the bright and ever-increasing light of liberty, which will enlighten the world and purity, by its potent and vivifying rays, the dark corners of the earth. She was privileged to give Columbus the aid which enabled him to discover the new land—the land of promise.

Let woman then feel her great responsibility and do her share to make this part of the earth as like unto the Kingdom of Heaven as earth can be.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union stands among the foremost organizations of the world in worth, in members and in reputation. The World's W. C. T. U. numbers over half a million.

In ancient times, when an invading army entered a land, a beacon fire was lighted on the nearest hill, and, as the light flashed abroad fires sprang like magic from hilltop to hilltop 'till all about it was known that an enemy was in the land, and patriots were called to arms to defend their homes. To day our Unions, like beacon lights, are kindled because there is an enemy in the land, and all brave and true and loving-hearted are called to rally to the white-ribboned army, and to fight under our banner of home protection, purity in life and purity in law and government.

All 'round the world these lights have been kindled and the call heard.

All 'round the world the ribbon white is twined,
All 'round the world the glorious light has shined,
All 'round the world our cause has right of way,
We'll raise the anthem swell of victory some glad day.

In our own State, the work is done by consecrated, loving-hearted women. Forty-two active unions were reported at the last Convention, and since then a number have been organized. We report this year to the National W. C. T. U. fifteen hundred paying members. We have nineteen departments of work in the State, all tending to promote Christian temperance and scientific truths in relation to stimulants and narcotics.

Some of the faint-hearted say the work is slow. True it is, but it is not discouraging. A gentleman once said to Mr. Moody, when he was holding meetings in a little mission chapel with scant results: "Rather slow work this, Mr. Moody." "So it is," he replied; "but if you want to kindle a fire, you must put together a few splinters, blow them into a blaze and then you may pile on wood afterward."

We have put the splinters together, blown them into a blaze by agitation and education, and now we are beginning to pile on the wood and feel the heat of the fires we have kindled in the great advance made in temperance sentiment among many classes of people.

In Louisiana prohibition prevails in the parishes of Union, Lincoln, Claiborne, Ouachita, Sabine, Natchitoches, Washington, St Helena, Cameron, Livingston and Jackson. Besides this, many wards in other parishes have prohibition, and a number of schools and colleges have availed themselves of their right to do so, and have secured the enactment of the three or five-mile prohibitory law.

The white ribbon, the distinctive badge of our society, means to us who wear it consecration, purity, sacrifice, helpfulness. Mrs. Snell's little poem, "Ribbon White," tells the story truly.

This ribbon that I have, to me
Means more than I can say.
I wear it here just as you see—
It helps me every day.
You would not dream this ribbon white
Can speak, and that I hear
Its accents if I listen right,
Do you think that is queer?

It tells me this—if I would wear
My badge as woman ought,
I must be pure in every deed,
And pure in every thought.
I must be strong to act, to want
Just as my Master saith—
I must be brave for any fate
And steadfast unto death.

"I must in truth be set apart,
For the bath need of me.
This ribbon, friend, above my heart,
Makes this work plain to see.
It points just where I best must go,
Just what I best must say.
We women know how this is true
Who wear the badge to day.

"Although it may seem strange to you
Who do not understand,
Somehow I feel while wearing this,
That God doth hold my hand.
It is a coolest little knot,
To you a trifling thing;
To me it means a loyalty,
A birthright with a King.

"I hold it dear and prize it more
Than glow of jewels rare;
No jewel ever equaled this
We are so glad to wear.
Some day the battle will be done,
Some day the fight be o'er,
Some day the sun for me will sink,
To rise again no more.

"Kind friends who robe my body then,
In its last earthly gown;
Who gently fold my weary hands,
And press my eyelids down,
Will not forget this ribbon white,
They'll place it o'er my heart,
Thus, as in life—so in my death—
We two shall never part."

I wish some strong, bright angel stood before you, just now, while you read, girls, to flash before you as no words of mine can, the power you possess to help or hinder the cause of temperance; to make you feel your responsibilty because you are girls in this matter; to shudder at its weight, and to never cease trying to fulfill it.... When the time comes that the young man who now shares his time in your company and the saloon; who jokes about temperance in your presence, and takes a glass socially now and then, is made to feel that these things can not be if you are to be his companion at party, ride or church; that good society can not tolerate these things in its members; in short, that this kind of man is unfashionable and unpopular, then alcohol will tremble on its throne, and the liquor traffic will hide its cancerous face.—Elizabeth Cleveland.

All history proves that it is safe to trust great questions to the verdict of the people, if they understand and believe the facts in the case. If we can imbue in the intelligence of the children of this generation, before they are contaminated by it, the scientific facts about alcohol, they will banish it and its vendors from the pale of human society when they come to be voters. The star of Bethelem of the temperance reform stands over the school house.—Mary H. Hunt.

The World's C. T. U., at its recent meeting in London, established the "Department of Christian Citizenship," with Mrs. Sarah D. LaFetra, of Washington, D. C., as Superintendent. She writes: "The aims of this department shall be the promotion of Christian citizenship. A citizenship which shall be one of brains and intellect and unselfish devotion to principle, having no sex distinction—where women shall be as fully recognized and as effective as her brother, and where the Golden Rule shall be the basis of action—where loyalty to religion, not of creed or formalism, but 'pure and undefiled before God and the Father'—a religion of helpfulness and personal consecration shall be the standard. A citizenship whose aim shall be the extermination of the liquor traffic and the opium trade, and every form of vice which debaucheth the citizen or worketh any ill to its neighbor. One which stands for the preservation of the Christian Sabbath and all institutions for the betterment of humanity, for public and private virtue, for the sanctity of marriage and the protection of the homes of the people. A citizenship which stands uncompromisingly and always—at the ballot box and elsewhere—for the overthrow of every institution or trade or business which robs womanhood and childhood of the sacred right to make the very best of the life given of God for his glory and for the purest human happiness. This department will co-operate with the oppressed and the down-trodden of every land in securing and enforcing just and righteous laws, and may God grant his blessing evermore upon the work and the workers."

The services in Westminister Abbey, the most historic of English cathedrals, on the Sunday evening following the World's W. C. T. U. Convention, were attended by a large number of white ribbon women, seats having been reserved by order of the Dean for the leaders of the different nations. The Bishop of Dover preached a straightforward, earnest sermon, in which he advocated total abstinence and strong legal measures against the liquor traffic. He referred warmly to the great convocation of temperance women who had been holding meetings in London during the week, and which was represented in the historic old Abbey at this temperance gathering. He said there were people who thought it witty to laugh at the temperance cause; but there was not a cause more sacred. Dean Bradley read those conclusive verses of St. Paul, "If meat cause my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world standeth." The anthem, 'Cry aloud and spare not," sent a great wave of fresh young voices through the "dim mysterious aisles" of the venerable edifice, which we venture to say has never before witnessed a service wherein the organized undenominational work of women has been recognized. Of all the varied meetings in London, probably no single event was so significant as this service in the Abbey.

The grog-shop must be shut. The power that will do the thing, whatever it be, is the power that must do it. So long as eighty-five per cent. of our prisoners owe their incarceration to drunkenness; so long as there is in our city one licensed place for the sale of liquor to every 170 inhabitants; so long as sixty thousand a year die drunk or from the effects of drink, there is no other side to the matter. The grog-shops must be shut. At any rate—whether of public inference or private self-denial, whether the law goes on the statute-books or the wine comes off the dinner-table—by some means the grog-shops must be shut. He is either criminally ignorant of the facts, or criminally indifferent to them, who can deny this?—Elizabeth Stewart Phelps.

"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from the use of all intoxicating liquors as a beverage and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and tariff in the same."—Pledge of Louisiana W. C. T. U.

"Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit."—Motto of Louisiana W. C. T. U.

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord," is the hymn selected by the State W. C. T. U., as their State song at the National Convention in Baltimore, this month.

The wild honeysuckle is the Louisiana W. C. T. U. flower.

I have no fears for the women of America. They will never content themselves with remaining stationary in methods or policy, much less sound a retreat in their splendid warfare against the saloon in law and the saloon in politics. The tides of the mother's heart do not change: we can count upon them always. The voice of Miriam still cheers the brave advance, and all along the line we hear the battle cry, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward.—Frances E. Willard.

In my thoughts I always liken the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to the Joan of Arc, whom God raised up for France, and who, in spite of their muscle and their military prowess, beat the English and crowned her king! But evermore she heard and heeded heavenly voices, and God grant that we may hear and heed them evermore! To the martyrdom of public rebuke and criticism they will surely lead us, a sacrifice not easy for gentle hearts to bear; doubtless, also, with some of us, to the actual martyrdom by which a national history grows sacred and heroic; but, following where they lead, we shall steadily pass onward from the depths of the world's pain to the heights of eternity's peace; and, best of all, we shall help to lift humanity, so weak and so bewildered, nearer to the law, the life, the freedom of God in Christ Jesus our Lord.—Frances E. Willard.

SOCIAL PURITY.

BY MRS. MARY H. CROUCH,

State Superintendent Social Purity, W. C. T. U.

"I solemnly promise by the help of God to hold the law of purity as equally binding upon men and women, and to use my utmost efforts to obey the command, 'Keep thyself pure'; to discountenance all coarse language and impurity in dress, in literature and art, to lend a helping hand alike to men and women, giving the penitent of both sexes an equal chance to reform, so far as my assistance and influence can do this."—Purity Pledge.

This comes directly under the National W. C. T. U. Pledge, being equally important, for impurity and drunkenness go hand in hand.

It seems strange that there should exist anyone so untutored as to be ignorant of the fact that any such society exists for lending a helping hand to the fallen—to the fallen man as well as the fallen woman. If women were true to themselves, to their church and their God, there would be fewer fallen women. I never say the word but my heart overflows, for too many times, alas! they are the victims of circumstances. I can tell you of a beautiful woman not more than twenty-five years old who, with tears in her eyes, tells this pathetic story: "My parents died when I was a little child. Thrown upon the world, I was betrayed and ruined. No kindly hand was extended to me, no friendly shelter was offered, no door was opened to receive me but the gilded palaces of hell."

Dear mothers, this is no fiction, but an every-day occurrence. Pause and consider; it may come to your own daughter. God says: "Be not deceived. God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

You may say: "What have I to do with this. I can not go into the highways and hedges and gather in the fallen." No! but you can by your prayers and means help those who do. At Memorial Home, 1616 Tulane avenue, in an old brick building, a reformatory work is going on that too many of even professing Christians are utterly careless. There are now sheltered fourteen young women in their first transgression—six of them with their innocent little babes. In this haven of rest many have found peace in believing; others have married and are happy in the love of husband an children. (Let no man dare to exact purity of life unless he is prepared to give an unsullied one in return.) Many have been restored to their parents, and others have found good homes where, in many instances, they have been allowed to keep their little ones. Nearly all of the girls cling to the only human they seem to care for, for they will give up home, father and mother for the little frail bit of humanity that grows dearer each day. How many times has a poor girl entered the Home wild with despair, with no love for the child, without even a desire to see her offspring; but the mother love is too strong, and before she is aware of it the tie can not be severed. Many kindly, appreciative letters have been received from the girls after they leave the Home. I copy a few extracts from a letter (one of many) received from the last girl placed in a good home: "It is with the deepest feeling of gratitude that I pen you a few lines. I arrived at my new home safely. They are very kind people, and treat me as one of the family. Give my regards to the girls. I enjoyed reading the paper you gave me on Sunday. The beautiful prayer you rendered will ever be a source of comfort to me, as it impressed my heart. Yes, indeed! How hard you have all prayed and worked. How many a poor girl you have thus saved from the sin who otherwise might have fallen by the wayside. Accept my hearty thanks for all kindnesses shown me in my hour of trouble. I pray that all who come under your care may learn the lesson I have, for it certainly has been a blessing in my career. I am sure your good works will receive a higher recompense than this world can offer. May our Father in heaven watch over you all, is the earnest prayer of your sincere friend."

The cause of all this is the indifference of professing Christians who allow their children to frequent vicious places of amusement, the ball-room, theatre, books which they could not discuss with their friends of the opposite sex. The pictures placarded on the fences should serve as a warning, not an invitation to these questionable place. "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and I will receive you."

Look at the news-stands with their parti-colored pictures to attract the attention of the young: they are bought, read and the purity of that young life is sullied. If we love an earthly friend so that we would not offend him, how much more should we love that dear Friend that we must leave at the threshold of the door of theatre, gambling saloon, bar-room and ball-room. Let us raise the standard of purity higher, but never lower. As the blessed Jesus said, "Neither do I condemn thee: go and sin no more." Let us emulate his example and exact the same from both sexes, as there is "neither male nor female, but all one in Christ Jesus." Let the churches see to it that the middle wall of partition between the church and the world is not broken down, but rather built higher.

W. C. T. U. RESTAURANT.

BY MRS. ALICE M. ZABLE.

For years it had been a dream of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of New Orleans, to open a lunch room in this city where men could obtain a lunch at a moderate price, thereby inducing them to come away from the free lunch of the bar-room. This thought materialized on Dec. 9, 1891, when, under the auspices of the Central W. C. T. U., a restaurant was opened at 632 (new number) Gravier street, our present location.

With faith in God and the earnest prayers and patient labors of a few of our consecrated women, the work was commenced and carried on under such difficulties and obstacles as only those know who were actively interested. With the rent secured for six months by monthly subscription of merchants and friends and members of the W. C. T. U., and three hundred dollars in cash, we opened our doors to the public. Our finances being limited, we could only afford a superintendent and one other employee, but the courageous and faithful women who had started the enterprise were equal to the emergency and became cashiers, cooks and waitresses for one month.

The lunch house was liberally patronized by an interested public; the 15 cents, lunch becoming daily more popular.

After the Central W. C. T. U. had carried on this restaurant for nearly a year, they felt they were no longer able to sustain it.

On Sept. 23, 1892, a stock company was formed, known as the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Stock Company, Limited, with a capital stock of $5,000, of two hundred shares of twenty-five dollars each. A Board of ten Directors were appointed to serve for one year.

Since the organization of this company the restaurant has been advancing in popularity, and to-day stands on a solid foundation.

To the public who have so generously patronized us, and to the friends who stood by us when we first opened, we owe a debt of gratitude. Had it not been for their helping hand, we would have long ago been compelled to close our doors.

Just here we wish to specially mention our Advisory Board, to whom we are indebted for advice and council. They were always ready to help in our hour of need. We earnestly hope in the near future to establish coffee stands in different parts of our city, where anyone can get a lunch and such beverages as do not intoxicate, for a small sum of money. We hope to make the present restaurant sustain all the coffee stands that we may open, thereby proving what we truly believe: that if inexpensive and comfortable places are provided for young men and boys, they will frequent them in preference to the saloon.

We sincerely hope that the public, who are ever ready to aid a noble cause, will feel that the Board of Directors of the W. C. T. U. Restaurant have but one end in view—that is the elevation of mankind.

TEMPERANCE, NOT SUFFRAGE.

At a regular meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, last Spring the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That, as members of the Central Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of New Orleans, we wish to define our position on the question of woman suffrage. We have never adopted this department of work in Louisiana. We are working on temperance lines, and are unwilling to have the temperance cause merged into suffrage work.

THE ENTRANCE OF THY WORD GIVETH LIGHT.

BY EUGENIE H. HARDING.

Blind Bartimeus, in his darkness lone,
Sat by the dusty highway begging bread,
His only couch the rugged wayside stone,
With poor and tattered garments overspread.

For him how slowly passed the long, blank years!
How tardily the sought-for pittance came!
How oft his fainting heart was filled with fears!
That blackest of all darkness who can name!

Heaven's sunlight all about him smiled and shone;
The palm trees threw cool shadows o'er his face;
At night the pitying moon would gild his stone;
He knew it not—he could not dream such grace.

"Ah, me!" he sighed, "if now the tales I hear
Of the great Prophet who hath risen are truth,
Perchance for me deliverance is near,
Oh that it were Messiah's self, in sooth!"

He paused, for, rising on his quickened ear—
Faint and far distant, mid Judea's hills,
A sound like marching multitudes drew near,
And now a sudden hope his bosom thrills.

"Mayhap it is the Prophet!" And he springs
With eager joyfulness upon his feet,
And out upon the air this cry he flings,
"Who passeth by! What is this crowd I meet?"

"Jesus of Nazareth!"—and, "Hast thou not heard
Of the great Prophet and his wonders wrought!"
Jesus of Nazareth! His hopes are stirred—
With sudden joy the wondrous word is fraught.

Oh sweetest echo, that from hills remote
Gave back the joyous news that happy day,
Still though all ages jubilantly float:
"Jesus of Nazareth passeth by this way!"

"Thou son of David," rings his piercing cry;
"Have mercy on me, son of David, hear!"
He pants with dread. "What if he pass me by!"
Like noise of many waves the crowd draws near.

"Have mercy on me!" rings again his cry,
The longing of a lifetime in each breath.
Then on him turned the Master's pitying eye;
"He calls for thee—be of good cheer," one saith.

A look—a word spoke by those blessed lips,
And light and life shine forth in glad surprise!
Gone is the darkness of his life's eclipse;
Wonder and love shine in those new-born eyes;

He sees!—Not the glad sunshine nor the sky,
Nor wond'ring crowd that press upon him fast,
But the blest radiance of this Savior's eye
Shining on him—Messias come at last!

Oh, poor, dark soul, that on life's dusty way,
Dost grope with feeble struggles all alone,
Like Bartimeus cry aloud and pray—
Jesus doth surely hearken to his own.

One healing word spoke by those blessed lips,
And, lo! eternal sunlight gilds thy soul!
Gone is the darkness of sin's long eclipse;
Thou see'st Jesus, and He makes thee whole!

Foreign Missions.

THE WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

BY MRS. C. J. FOSTER,
Cor. Sec. La. Conf. W. F. M. S.

At the session of the Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, South, convened in Baton Rouge, Dec. 12, 1879, a meeting was called for the purpose of organizing a Conference Society auxiliary to the M. E. Church, South.

Many elect women met on that occasion; some of whom have passed to their reward; others are working still in the Master's vineyard. The society was organized with the venerable Mrs. Mary W. Read as president.

During the following year eight Auxiliaries were filed on record, and 196 members enrolled.

Up to the present time eighty societies have been recorded in the Conference, though the love of many have waxed cold, and a large per cent. of these have disbanded. The largest number of members at any time was in 1889, when 1,102 were reported in adult societies; total, adult and juvenile, 1,615.

The Louisiana Conference W. M. S. has sent one missionary to the foreign field, Miss Sallie Phillips, since married.

The influence of this organization has been, as it always proved, a spiritual uplift to the women of the church who have availed themselves of its opportunities. It has awakened dormant powers, and aroused self-centered souls to look out and abroad at the needy and the lost, to lift a helping hand, and say, "Behold the Lamb of God." It has quickened intellectual life, and opened fields of knowledge before hedged in by selfish inertness and indifference. If every woman in the Louisiana Conference would give to this work the prayer and the interest which is due, we could conquer the world for for Christ in a short time. Are we guiltless in that only a small per cent. of these are even silent members of the Woman's Missionary Society?

The juvenile work is at present, and must continue to be, our strongest vantage-point. Young people's societies are active in all sections of the State, and the next generation will see an incoming of intelligent, enthusiastic, well-informed Christian workers, ready to send or go, as God may direct.

The juvenile membership is not as large as we hope to see it, but is already a power.

We are looking for the fulfillment of the prophecy when the Spirit shall be poured upon all flesh, and the children, young men and maidens, shall be filled, and speak it abroad.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

MRS. G. H. LIPSCOMB.

In June, 1878, the first Auxiliary within the bounds of North Mississippi Conference was organized at Aberdeen the home of Mrs. Bishop Paine, who a few months before had presided over the meeting in Atlanta, when Mrs. Hayes was elected president of the Missionary Society of M. E. Church, South.

In April, '79, Mrs Paine met representatives from the five Auxiliaries that had been organized within the North Mississippi Conference at Columbus and organized the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference. As much as $186.50 had been contributed during the past year. The first annual meeting was held at Verona in 1880, and the collections for the first year of organized work amounted to $351.67.

When we compare the first little gathering of women in Columbus, in 1879, representing five auxiliaries and a collection of $186.50, with the last annual meeting held there in June of this year, representing 141 missionary societies with about 3,000 members, and the collection for the year amounting to $2,017.79, we feel grateful to Almighty God for the work wrought, for those statistics represent years of patient toil and steady growth. It sprang up as no mushroom in a night, but is the fruit of the earnest work of consecrated women after seventeen years of planning and praying and giving. The history of the Missionary Society in the North Mississippi Conference could not be written without the mention of one loved and honored for her work's sake, Mrs. Mary K. Stone. She was elected our first corresponding secretary, and served us faithfully in that capacity until our fourteenth annual meeting, when domestic cares compelled her to resign. Few women have been so untiring amid difficulties, so full of hope and courage as she.

From our eighth annual meeting, held in Grenada we sent to the foreign field Miss Lula Lipscomb, now Mrs. B. W. Waters, of Japan; Miss Addie Gordon, now Mrs. W. B. Burke, of China. Our zeal and interest have been much quickened by this personal representation, and their letters to each annual meeting have been sources of pleasure and inspiration.

Since the first mention of the Training School the hearts of North Mississippi women have been stirred, and Miss Bennett found them ready to pledge their help in a material way. In the early history of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society a consecrated young woman of Greenville, Miss., who had offered herself to the foreign work, was called to her eternal reward, and left one hundred dollars as a legacy to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. The memory of this earnest life had lived in the hearts of the women of her State, and this loving memory was demonstrated by the endowment of the Helen Finlay Scholarship. Miss Viola Blackburn, of Holly Springs, finished her course at the Training School in June under the benefit of this scholarship, and is now teaching in Laredo, Texas. In addition to the endowment of the scholarship, a room has been furnished by the North Mississippi Conference Missionary Society, and named in honor of our loved secretary mentioned above, "The Mary Roger Stone Room."

Our present president, Mrs. S. B. Hargrove, elected in 1889, has labored most diligently, and her deep consecration and wise leadership have been productive of much development. She is recording secretary of the Women's Board of Missions. Mrs. H. A. Dean, of Iuka, is our corresponding secretary and representative at the Woman's Board of Missions.

A survey of the history of the work in North Mississippi Conference shows that much has been accomplished, much given, many hearts enlisted. On the other hand, we must confess with shame that little has been done in comparison with what might have been done. May the day come speedily when every member of the Methodist Church in the North Mississippi Conference will be an earnest, active and intelligent member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society!

THY KINGDOM COME.

BY MRS. C. J. FOSTER, CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The mightiest question of time, even antecedent to all time and before the foundations of the earth were laid, when the eternal Son was in the bosom of the Father, the mightiest force which moves the world to-day in both material and spiritual dynamics, is the coming of Christ's kingdom. Recognized or unrecognized, it is the same. The tremendous forces which project themselves into the present are, without exception, subservient and impellant to this culmination. Beyond all themes of political economy, vaster than all schemes of national development, deeper than all searchings after scientific evolution, embracing all, and ennobling all, is this supreme good, "Thy one far off, divine event, toward which the whole creation moves," and yet the simplest prayer of the infant tongue, the coming of God's kingdom.

When "in the beginning," that mysterious remote period, the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters and creation was accomplished, this ultimatum was in the heart of the Father. That day of doom, when the voice of the Lord was heard in the garden, and the cherubim stood with drawn sword amid the soft leafage, in justice most righteous and vengeance most terrible, bid in the recesses of his love, the blessed kingdom was purposed of God.

And how can we reconcile ourselves to Calvary, to its agony and its reality, were not the kingdom of Christ its end and its design?

Around this mighty sun of the universe moves every atom of creation. The thunderous march of history, nation falling before nation, event marshaling event; the magnificence of Babylon, the culture of Greece, the valor of Rome, the sleep of the Middle Ages, the bugle call of the Reformation, the chained lighting and harnessed steam of the nineteenth century—"What a gathering of rays into one burning focal point!" These agencies called of God are the heralds of his purpose, the Michaels, bearing its fulfillment of supreme goodness and supreme wisdom; and while with unerring aim and implicit obedience the forces of nature answer the call; while the lightning from its reservoirs of power quivers with eager response, "Send me, send me!" while the spirits of fire and water in magnificent strength go forth together across the world, lifting misty hands toward heaven, unfurling their banners of cloud, inscribed with one great war cry, "The World for Christ;" while the earth gives forth her treasure, and knowledge is everywhere increased, the call of God to his church comes like the voice from Sinai: "Depart, and go up hence, . . . and I will send an angel before thee, . . . my presence shall go with thee."

A wise man has said: "All the vast resources of our material civilization are but facilities granted to the Church with the express design to enable her as trustee of that priceless thing to make known God's love toward those, the world over, for whom Christ died."

When on one occasion the late Jonah G. Warren stood watching a company of missionaries standing upon the deck of a steamer just putting to sea, he exclaimed, as if that moment impressed with the thought: "That is what steamers are for." Yes, that is what steamers are for. The wonderfully improved means of transportation of our age "are highways Christ has cast up for those who are shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace."

The vast wealth of the church at the present day, surpassing any other age, even when the Temple was lined with gold, and its altars and mercy seat were of pure gold; or when the cathedrals of Rome were reservoirs of untold riches, evidence that God is calling us to mighty deeds for him. He is placing in our hands weapons for this conflict which are commensurate with its magnitude. The material side is well armed for victory.

Christian homes, wider in scope and truer and more tender in their life, signify the results of his joyful gospel which God would have us proclaim "to every creature." These are no new thoughts on the subject, but that their repetition is needed is proved by our sluggish movements on this line.

Have we known the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge? Have we bathed in the blissful atmosphere of his love? Have we realized from our earliest being the sacred presence in all the nameless and numberless avenues of blessing enjoyed? What are these but messages from him, repeating his last command: "Go disciple the nations." If we need motives to mission work, here are those which would thrill an angel. We are called not only to advance the kingdom, but to do so immediately. That obedience which does not make haste, which delays and halts after the command is, to say the least, unloving obedience; it goes with the lame and tardy gait of the servant, not the joyous acquiescence of the son. When did love ever find a difficulty too great to overcome, or a mandate too hard to fulfill? God wills the largest and promptest proclamation of the gospel. Every soul is a herald; it must be. Our marching orders are: "Occupy." We have no right to hesitate, because, like the disciples with the loaves, the multitude seems too great to be fed. The positive command is clear and not to be misunderstood; we are to make every nation, and every creature in every nation, a partaker of this gospel.

We have the command and assurance: "Go, preach;" "my word shall not return unto me void." Are we prone to feel that the results are unequal to the sacrifice? When Judson had buried himself in Burmah for ten years, and had but eighteen converts to show for his work, he was asked: "What of the prospect?" His heroic answer was: "Alright as the promises of God."

Christianity is not dying out. The Army Chaplain, a European publication, states the following: "Three centuries after Christ there were 5,000,000 Christians; eight centuries after Christ there were 30,000,000 Christians; ten centuries after Christ there were 50,000,000 Christians; eighteen centuries after Christ there were 174,000,000 Christians; now there are 450,000,000 Christians. The followers of the three religions, Confucianism, Buddhism, and Taoism, all combined, are less in number than the Christians alone. Including the latest division of Africa among the European powers, about four-fifths of the land in the world is under Christian control. So much for figures. Of one thing we must beware, the above figures represent not the converted disciples of Christ, but those identified with so-called Christian communities."

These facts, avant-couriers, bring joyful assurance of the incoming of our Lord to his kingdom. Shouts of victory come sounding along the line of battle, though the conflict is still growing hotter. The vanguards, as they fall, send back no note of fear, but their clarion voices ring only such messages as these from the border land: "I die at my post; send more men."

By the devotion and heroism of our missionary army, we are pledged to "depart, and go up hence" to take the land for the God of Israel.

Our obedience should be implicit. "The way of exact obedience is the way of constant blessing and sure success."

The soldiers of Napoleon never stopped to ask: "Is it possible?" Their reply to each command was, "Vive L'Empereur," and they were invincible.

Nothing will be so irresistible as the Church of God when her obedience is absolute.

In the 277th year of the hegira arose the famous Arabian preacher, Carmath; his twelve apostles spreading themselves, after his death, among the Bedouins, a race of men equally devoid of reason and religion. And so successful was their preaching that all Arabia was threatened with a new revolution. The Carmathians were ripe for rebellion, and the secret of their power was a vow of blind and absolute submission to their leader. A secret and invisable oath was their bond of brotherhood. Leaving tracks of blood, they moved along the Persian Gulf, and the province of Bahrein bowed before them. Far and wide the desert tribes lowered their standards before the swords of Abu Seid and Abu Taher, his son, until they could muster on the field a force of over 100,000 fanatics. Their approach was like the approach of an avalanche. They neither asked nor accepted quarter, and bore everything before them. Even the caliph trembled as they advanced. They crossed the Tigris, and with desperate daring, with only five hundred horse, knocked at the gates of the capital. By special order the bridges were broken down, and the lieutenant, in behalf of the caliph, told Abu Taher that he and his forces were in danger of annihilation. "Your master," replied the fierce commander, "has thirty thousand soldiers, but in all his host not three such as these." Then turning to three of his followers, he bade one plunge a dagger into his breast, a second leap into the Tigris, a third fling himself from a precipice. Without a moment's waiting, or a murmur of discontent, each one obeyed. "Go," said he, "and tell what you have seen, and before the night falls your general shall be chained among my dogs." It was so; before the sun set the camp was surprised and the sentence executed.

Nothing can stand before a church whose only law is the will of God, and the motto of whose crusade is "Deus vult". So says the great leader, Dr. T. A. Pierson. When these few are thus consecrated, the kingdom will be near, even at our doors, and why may not we, you and I, be of the few, and here and now hasten that grand consummation by simple, hearty obedience?

The missionary must ever be a hero. Nothing moves the higher instincts of humanity more than self-sacrifice; and here comes in the beautiful provision of unfailing compensation. It is the law of giving that it shall be given again, good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over. The influence of missionary enterprise is reflex. It has been likened to the mighty currents of the sea, which distribute warmth and life from the teeming tropics upon the icy cliffs of other lands, returning again through unseen paths of the ocean to bless the sources from whence they came.

We feel an ownership in India, China, in Brazil, and in the islands of the sea. To them we have given the treasures of our hearts; sons and daughters and the gold which is sublimated by prayer into an offering of incense, sweet and acceptable unto God. How we love to read of these once comparatively uninteresting countries. What vivid pictures are photographed in our very hearts of them all! How near and real they have become! How knowledge of men and things increases as we seek through hitherto unknown avenues to find whatever may be learned of them!

Livingstone, who gave himself for Africa, has received in return more radiance to his name, more honor for his memory, than could have been without this sacrifice. The Dark Continent has radiated upon him a halo of glory. Westminster opened to him her urns of honor, and the vision of that wasted form, dying upon his knees in prayer for his beloved Africa, has electrified the world and set in motion limitless currents of power and ceaseless impetus of action, tending all toward the ultimate and supreme design.

The martyrs of Terra del Fuego, the leper hero Damien, the immortal Judson, all who have suffered and been sacrificed, wear not alone the heavenly, but the earthly crown of light, placed upon their holy shrines by reverent hearts. "Behold I come, and my reward is with me!"

Having glanced at the purpose of creation in the kingdom of Christ, at motives for hastening its coming, and rewards temporal and heavenly to the bearers thereof, there remains a darker side of the question. Wherefore do the wheels of power move so slowly? Why the long delay of the millennial age? What is this incubus which hangs to the chariot wheels and clogs the forward march to victory, the immediate evangelization of the whole world? Down through the ages come the blessed, yet fateful words, investing us each with tremendous responsibility: "Ye are my witnesses!" O heart of mine, is it thy falseness and thy failure which are holding back the coming of the Lord? Is it these world-busy hands, these feet hastening to all things more than to the enthronement of him upon whose vesture and on his thigh is written King of kings and Lord of lords.

My friends, there is nothing more unprofitable than generalizations. We speak of the failure of "the church" in performance of duty, and feel it to be a lamentable thing, beyond any control of ours; but each of us, so far as our influence and responsibility can reach, is the church. "Awake, thou that sleepest!" "Rise up, ye women that are at ease! . . . Tremble, ye women that are at ease, . . . until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field."

My sisters, our one dollar a year and one meeting a month will not satisfy us in the day of his power, when he shall question: "Was thou a faithful witness?" In that day side issues will be a small thing, the surplus in the treasury, the dominance of factions, the success of my way or thy way. The question will be intensely personal: "Am I numbered with those who, through his commandments, have a right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city, where, with rejoicing acclamations, I see those nations which are saved (which I have helped to save) walking in the light of it, and I hear, as it were, the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying: 'Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!'" Ye are my witnesses.

THE STREET PAVEMENT NEW ORLEANS NEEDS.

BARBER STREET ASPHALT THE ONLY MATERIAL THAT HAS YET PROVEN BENEFICIAL TO THIS CITY.

New Orleans, unfortunately, bears the reputation of being the worst paved city in the United States; or, rather, of being a city without a paving system of any sort whatever. And for this our own people are largely responsible. Eleven years ago, we remember well, when the work of paving St. Charles Avenue with sheet asphalt by the Barber Paving Company was first undertaken, there were no more strennous opposers of the system, which has since demonstrated its value, than those properly-owners whose realties fronted on that now famous boulevard; and it was not until the work of paving had been completed, and the enormous and immediate appreciation in values began, that our people were fully able to appreciate the benefits that had accrued to them as a result of the adoption of so thorough and lasting a system of street paving.

Since that time our city has experimented to some extent in various lines of pavements, and though the results have proven in a measure beneficial, no such results have yet been accomplished as followed close upon the laying of the sheet asphalt on our main residence street. In short, it has been practically demonstrated that sheet asphalt is the only pavement thoroughly adapted to the requirements of our streets, low-laying and soft-surfaced as they are.

The contention that the sheet asphalt is not calculated to bear the weight of heavy traffic will not hold, though it has been strongly made, for it is unreasonable to expect one single thoroughfare to do duty for the traffic of an entire section, and the remedy for the evil complained of is clearly the systematic paving with this material of the entire city, or at least that portion of it that has not already been laid with square or Belgian blocks. Do this, and the distribution of heavy traffic will have no appreciable effect upon any of the streets so paved; they will last for generations.

Our National Capitol, for example, has the reputation of being the best paved city in the country, and it is fair to presume that only the most desirable pavement to be had for money would have been selected for street coverings by its commissioners, and its untold lengths of sheet asphalt pavements, unbroken except for a few streets which are laid with Belgian blocks, show conclusively that the question of wear, where traffic is evenly distributed, can not well enter into the calculations of capious objectors. It is undoubtedly a fact, in our opinion, that what our city needs in the way of street pavements is sheet asphalt; and inasmuch as we have tested the Barber pavements through a period of nearly twelve years, and during that time it has proven beyond peradventure both durable and lastingly attractive, we are of the further opinion that our people should lose no time in demanding from the municipal council its employment upon the thoroughfares that now operate only as a discredit upon our otherwise beautiful city. We understand that Mr. Frank P. Mullen, the superintendent of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, is permanently located in New Orleans, and we can not too strongly recommend to our people the advisability of consulting him in regard to this matter. He will doubtless be pleased to give any information upon the subject desired, with the natural view of extending the sphere of his company's usefulness in this section of the country.

A CHILD'S FANCY.

BY EMILY HUNTINGTON MILLER.

Roselind lay in her trundle-bed,
With her small hands folded above her head,
And fixed her innocent eyes on me,
While a thoughtful shadow came over their glee
"Mamma," she said, "when I go to sleep,
I pray to the Father my soul to keep;
And He comes and carries it away,
To the beautiful home where angels stay.

"I gather red roses, and lilies white;
I sing with the angels through all the night;
And when, in the morning, I wake from my sleep,
He gives back the soul I gave to keep;
And I only remember, like beautiful dreams,
The garlands of lilies, the wonderful streams."

WISHING FOR AN ANGEL.

A Christian and a Jewish family lived side by side, and the little boys from each house were great friends and constant playmates.

One Sabbath the children of the Christian household had gathered around their mother for their accustomed Sabbath afternoon Bible reading, when the door bell rang and Henry came back to say that Jacob was down stairs waiting for him to come out and play with him. The mother herself went down, and, explaining their custom to the little visitor, invited him to come in if he would like to join them in it. "You know," she said, "a part of the Bible is yours as well as ours, and if you will come I will read the part that will interest us all." He came very willingly and listened with the rest to the history of David and Goliath, of Joseph and of Daniel; stories which make a red boy's eyes shine, and make him glad to be a boy. When she came to a pause, Jacob asked: "Have you got anything in your Bible about Jesus Christ?" "O, yes, it has all about him." "Well, read that." So she read of the birth of Christ, the angel choir rejoicing over it, and the visit of the wise men.

When she closed the book, the little fellow looked up with a sad perplexity on his young face, and said with a sigh: "O! I wish an angel from heaven would come down and tell us what is the real truth."

Little boys and girls, be sure to tell what you know about Christ every time you have a chance, for you know not which one of your playmates may be longing for the truth.—Anna E. Wilson, in Presbyterian Journal.

EDUCATION OF THE YOUNG.

In an article on Education of the Young, in the Arena, Lady Somerset writes:

"Many a sorrow eats into a child's heart that it has not the strength to express, or the courage to share with its elders; but I think if, instead of posing as infallible—a role which at best breaks down very soon—we were to speak more freely of our difficulties to the young, we should find out the beautiful law which binds us together and which makes mutual confidence the most delightful feature of home life."

TWO PENNIES.

BY EMILY HUNTINGTON MILLER.

Two bright little shining pennies!
Bright and yellow and new!
Don't tell me about the heathen—
I want them myself, I do.

I want a top and some marbles,
A sword, and a gun that shoots
A candy cane and a trumpet,
A knife and a pair of boots.

But then, what if I were a heathen,
With no precious Bible to tell
The story of Jesus, our Savior,
Who loved little children so well.

For Jesus, you know, may be asking
This question of you and me:
"Did you carry my love to your brothers
And sisters way over the sea?"

I guess you may send my pennies—
Perhaps in some way they may grow;
For little brooks grow to be rivers,
And pennies make dollars, you know.

I am not very wise, but there's one thing,
I think, must be certainly true;
If little boys ought to give pennies
Big men should give dollars—don't you.

A FOUR-WORD SERMON.

A friend tells of an idiot boy, who lived near her home when she was a child, who was frequently badly treated by the boys and ridiculed by older people, and, being utterly unable to defend himself, he would simply say, "God looked at that." It made such an impression on her young heart that she says in all the years that have passed, she has never seen an injustice done anyone but there would come to her mind again the idiot boy and his graphic sermon—"God looked at that."—Selected.

WITH THE LITTLE ONES.

A little girl objected to going to bed alone. "But you are not alone," said her mother. "God is with you all the time, and then you have your dolly besides." She examined her doll critically before replying. "I don't want them," she said at last. "I want somebody with a skin face."

A little girl was overheard talking to her doll, whose arm had come off, exposing the sawdust stuffing: "Now dear, good, obedient dolly, I knew I had told you to chew your food fine, but I didn't think you would chew it so fine as that."—Northwestern Advocate.

IF I WERE A GIRL AGAIN.

BY LUCY ELLIOT KELLER.

If I were a girl again—if some benignant fairy should touch me with her wand and say, Be a girl again, and I should feel bursting over me the generous impulses, the enthusiasm, the buoyancy, the ambition, that belong to sixteen—some things I should do, and some things I should not do, to make me at fifty the person whom now at fifty I should like to be.

First of all, I should study self-control—the control of body, of speech, of temper; a power best learned in youth before the current of habit has deepened the channel of self-will and impetuosity that seems to be cut in every human heart. I should count one hundred, like Tattycorum, before I would allow myself to utter unkind, impulsive words; I should scorn to burst into tears because of some petty correction or grievance; I should learn to sit quietly, to close a door gently, to walk calmly, even when my thoughts were boiling within me.

I should shun, if I were a girl again, the tendency to be sensitive and suspicious. Because my friend talks to another person, or because a group of acquaintances seem to be enjoying themselves apart from me, I should not construe thoughtlessness into intentional slights, nor abstraction into indifference. I should say oftener to myself, "My friend did not see that I was here; she has not heard of my return; she is busy with her music; she is tired after her journey. I will trust in her friendship, just as I would have her trust in mine."

If I were a girl again, I should be more careful about my conversation. I should beware of slang and gossip, and a tendency to drop into silence. I should avoid sarcasm like the plague, remembering that the person who uses it shows her sense of her own inferiority. Nobody ever had so many enemies as Disraeli, and it is to be remembered that sarcasm was his most powerful weapon. I should practice the art of such gay repartee as is free from satire and unkindness, learning to tell a story well, and to dwell upon what is kindly and happy. I should be more ready to express my appreciation and thanks for services rendered; be quicker with my praise and tardier with my criticism. I should cultivate a distinct enunciation, enlarge my vocabulary, and remember Lord Chesterfield's dictum, "never to utter one word, even in common conversation, that should not be the most expressive and the most elegant with which the language could supply him."

If I were a girl again I should be a better student. I should worry less over my lessons, and potter less; but I should think as I study, and try to understand statements in one reading rather than by saying them over and over, like a parrot. I should be more thorough, not passing to one lesson until I had mastered the last; and I should be ashamed of poor spelling or illegible handwriting or faulty pronunciation.

I should be more scrupulous about making and keeping engagements; I should be less daunted by obstacles and defeat, and be less, I hope, the slave of petty, but annoying habits.

These things I should do if I were a girl again. But suppose I have passed my girlhood! Suppose I am thirty! Still, shall I not at fifty wish that I could retrieve the past twenty years? Should I not employ them differently? Again, say I am fifty. At seventy could I not better use those precious years of preparation? There is always a golden age, soon to be behind us, which at every period of our life is before us—just as to-morrow's yesterday is still to day. So we may all take courage. It is never too late to mend.—Outlook.

Cuisine.

EDITED BY MISS ADA BLACK.

JAM CAKE.—One cup sugar, two cups flour, half cup butter, four eggs—leave out whites of two for icing, nine tablespoons buttermilkin, to which put one teaspoon soda. Put half teaspoon baking powder into the flour, one cup of jam (I use blackberry), one teaspoon each of ground allspice, cinnamon and cloves. Bake in layers or loaf.—Mrs. E. E. Wiley, Emory, Va.

WATERMELON PICKLES.—Pare off very carefully the green part of the rind of a ripe melon, trim off the red core, cut in pieces one or two inches in length, place in a porcelain-lined kettle, in the proportion of one gallon rinds to two heaping teaspoons common salt, with water to nearly cover, boil gently 'till tender enough to pierce with a silver fork, pour in a colander to drain, and dry by pressing a few pieces at a time gently in a crash towel. Take syrup in proportion of three pints of sugar to each quart of vinegar, boil and scald every morning for a week. On the last morning put in jars a layer of rinds sprinkled with mace, cinnamon and ginger; fill the jars. Boil syrup until thick, and cover all.

SALLY LUNN.—Nearly 1 cup of butter, same of sugar, 3 eggs beaten separately, 6 tablespoonsful of milk, 2 full teaspoons baking powder, and flour to make as stiff as cake batter.—Miss Mary Penland, Asheville, N. C.

SOUP STICKS.—One-half pint of milk scalded and cooled; white of one egg; one tablespoon butter; one teaspoon sugar; one-half saltspoon salt; one cake Fleishman's yeast. Flour to knead very stiff; put in bowl and let rise to double its bulk; shape rolls one-half inch thick and five inches long, and put in stick pans; let rise again; bake in a moderate oven till crisp all the way through.—Mrs. Frederick Rutledge, Asheville, N. C.

MILK BREAD.—One quart scalded milk poured on two tablespoons sugar; two tablespoons salt, and one scant tablespoon shortening (butter or lard). When the above is lukewarm, add about two-thirds cake of compressed yeast moistened in one-half can lukewarm water. (If in a hurry, use one cake of the yeast instead of two-thirds of cake). Now add sifted flour until stiff enough to handle, stirring all the time with a wood spoon. Knead fifteen minutes or until smooth and elastic; put in greased bowl; cover and grease top of dough; allow to stand until double in size; knead again five minutes; form into loaves and put in greased pans, filling them half full; use about one quart of the dough, that is, do not make it into loaves; to this piece, work in one tablespoon butter and flour to make smooth. (Add sugar and eggs if you wish them to be very rich). Put this dough in a pan to rise again; when light make into any shape you wish; lay them in a greased pan to rise; then bake in rather hot oven fifteen to twenty minutes. This bread will require good flour and fresh yeast.—Ella M. Bickerstaffe, Asheville, N. C.

ORANGE LOAF CAKE.—Beat the yolks of six eggs to a cream, with half pound of powdered sugar and two ounces of softened butter. Add the grated rind and pulp of three oranges. Take the pulp out with a spoon, saving all the juice and rejecting the core and seeds. Sift together half a pound of flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder, and stir it into the cake alternately with the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Pour quickly into well-greased tins and bake in a moderate oven. This is nice baked in little pans of fancy shapes, and when done dip them in orange icing.

ORANGE ICING.—From a five-cent baker's loaf of stale bread cut off all the crust, and grate or crumble the inside as fine as possible. Pour over it one quart of boiling milk, add a quarter of a pound of butter and the same of sugar. Let it stand until cold; then add the grated rind of one, and the pulp and juice of two large oranges and six eggs beaten light. Pour into a buttered dish and bake one hour. Serve hot or cold.—Selected.

An Eminent Divine Says It Is True.

To whom it may concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of Mul-en-ol. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all true that is claimed for it and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhoea. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine that is worthy of a place in every household.—W. C. BLACK.

CUBAN MISSION.

BY MRS. E. H. SWAIN.

Come with me to the ancient city of St. Augustin. One day, as a young Cuban lad scarce fourteen years of age, was crossing the plaza, a strong, sudden gust of wind hurls his hat from his head. Starting after it, an oath escapes his lips. A soft, restraining hand is laid on his head, a soft, gentle voice says: "What has God done to you, my boy?" Glancing up, he saw the gentle face that is well harmonized with the words, and the words spoken and interpreted, impressed, by the Holy Spirit, fell deep into his heart, and a sense of guilt and shame came over him because of the words, almost the only English words he knew that had passed his lips. A kindly exhortation and invitation to Sabbath-school was extended and accepted. Here, at the hands of a Presbyterian lady, was the birth of our Cuban Mission work.

The next Sabbath found this lady with the Cuban lad, who had been sent to study for the priesthood, in the Sabbath-school under this Christian woman's influence. Here in this school did Henry B. Somellan learn the truths that to-day makes him the Superintendent of Cuban Mission work in Florida. The home mission work done by this dear sister was the fulfillment of the parable of the mustard seed, the fulfillment of the promise to bless the simplest deed done in His name.

When the time for return to Key West came, our Cuban lad, now well grown into manhood, joined the Presbyterian Church, but, under the advice of the same sweet-spirited Christian woman, united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which he has since labored. We find him first as missionary in the Havana and Key West Missions, and, although tried as in a furnace, the results won by labor and sacrifice—yes, even persecution—now show that God was indeed with him.

Do we comprehend what "sacrifice" means? Who of us would have made a sacrifice of a comfortable home, going to reside in two small rooms that the rental could be secured for carrying on the work of giving to our countrymen the message of salvation? Who of you, dear sisters, would have counselled your husband this way and stood by him, giving up the property owned by yourself, as did our dear Sister Somellan? Again I say, how little do we know of sacrifice for the Gospel's sake!

At last patience is rewarded, prayers are answered, and to-day the Cuban Mission of Key West is in possession of a beautiful chapel and a handsome, comfortable parsonage. The former is due to the earnest efforts of the pastor and people and the co-operation of the Board of Church Extension, and the parsonage is due to the W. F. and H. M. Society. The lot was purchased through a donation and loan from the Central Committee, and the parsonage built by the Florida Conference Society of W. F. and H. M. Society; and to the personal management and supervision of Dr. C. F. Kemp both enterprises owe much.

But Bro. Somellan is not destined to preside in the pulpit of the new chapel nor occupy the new parsonage, for God has a greater work for him; but in the new parsonage is Bro. Delnfue, who was led to Christ under the ministration of Bro. Somellan. His work goes on.

Many sisters here remember the hard-fought battle in the Woman's Board of Missions, at Kansas City, the earnest efforts made to secure a school at Key West for Cuban Mission work. God knew best, and out of defeat has arisen victory, grand and glorious; foreseeing, as we could not, the coming Cuban troubles, driving to our shore the tens of thousand of Cubans, thereby changing the necessity for the main school from Key West to Tampa.

The Lord indeed placed an open door before the W. F. and H. M. Society—a door of golden opportunity, great and imperative.

Shall we look at the Cuban work as it now exists for a few moments, its present condition, necessities and possibilities? The ten thousand Cubans in Tampa are divided into the two suburbs, if suburbs they can be called—Ybor and Cuba City. Ybor with about 7,000, and Cuba City with more than 3,000 souls. These cities, being the location of extensive cigar interests, have the usual advantages of real city life, electric cars and lights, fine stores, etc.—all advantages save those of religion, and all the temptation of city life.

It was my privilege to visit Tampa about six months ago, and I saw in Ybor City only one small Catholic Cathedral and one small Congregational Church edifice. In Cuba City there was no church. Do you wonder how the Sabbath is spent? Many know no Sabbath except as a day of sport, including the inevitable cockfight. The saloons, with their gaming tables and other fascinations, are standing with open doors. Is there not need for mission work? Is there not an open door before us? Feeling the great responsibility that devolved upon the Christian people of Florida by this sudden tide of immigration, can you wonder that our hearts were overjoyed with thankfulness when the message reached us that the dear sisters of the W. F. and H. M. Society had decided to adopt this work which Florida, alone, was powerless to assume. We knew that God, in his own good time, had heard our prayers, and later when our dear Sister Wolff, with earnest heart and clear head, came to superintend the work, as none other could, how we did thank him for his continued goodness to us! And then when, at Conference, Bro. Somellan was made pastor of this work, we felt indeed the way was being opened to care for these souls who had been sent to us without a knowledge of God or a religion, as a rule.

While giving to the older ones the Bread of Life, can we, dare we, neglect the little ones? To many of these, care of body means redemption of soul. Shall we not use every opportunity to save these hundreds of children and lay the foundation for useful citizenship here and salvation hereafter.—Lots have been donated for school, parsonage and church. The congregations which gather each Sabbath to hear the message of salvation as delivered by Bro. Somellan, are becoming entirely too large to be accommodated in the school-rooms; and a church-building is an immediate pressing necessity. The Lord is wonderfully blessing the labors of Somellan, and about a score have come into the church within the last month. These people, as I have said, are poor, working people, and it is folly to expect them to build their own church. It is a mission work, and, as such, appeals to us.

The good sisters of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society have succeeded, by hard labor, in raising a goodly sum toward a parsonage for Bro. Somellan, and will succeed in their object if a little aid is granted them by the General Board. Through adverse circumstances they have toiled on unaunted, and the Lord has blessed their efforts.

I beseech, for the noble sisters of Tampa, your co-operation and prayers.

Bro. Somellan writes me there is great need in each school for an assistant teacher, a need for a good woman who can do house-to-house visitation, and for a pastor's assistant—all of whom must speak Spanish.

The city missionary is very necessary to reach the masses of the woman. Custom and sentiment forbid the pastor to visit the homes of a Cuban in the absence of the husband; yet to accomplish the greatest amount of good we must win the mothers, win their sympathy and co-operation, and, if possible, their hearts for Christ. We need their aid in saving the children. The teachers need a book fund, from which the poorer pupils can be furnished with the necessary books and other school supplies. A friend who owns a book store gladdened my heart by a liberal donation of picture cards, large and small, for the work, and I am praying that the words thereon may be messages of joy, instruction and warning, and seed sown unto salvation.

In Ocala, in the suburb named Marti City, we find about 3,000 Cubans in almost the same condition as Tampa, and they have no school and no resident pastor. A lot sufficient for church, parsonage and school has been donated, and the pastor of the Methodist Church there says there never was a more opportune time to enter the "open door." Bro. Somellan can give only an occasional Sabbath to them and they need the Bread of Life. This work needs an earnest, consecrated woman at the head who can speak Spanish. A public school was tried last year, but abandoned as impracticable.

Shall we, as Methodists, keep atop with the evil influences which our so-called free Christian nation is placing around these people?

They are turning to us, looking, expecting freedom. Shall they find the degrading enthralldom of sin, or shall we seek with all our power to make them free indeed—free from sin, servants of God, with fruit bearing unto holiness, and in the end eternal life.

"But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her."—Luke x, 42.

METHODIST WOMEN.

BY MRS. L. CRANY SADLER.

It has been said that this is the "Woman's Century," and we hear and read much of "The new woman." To some this phase of the question is alarming, but to those who read aright there is nothing so very startling in the present aspect.

It is not the purpose of this paper or the spirit either to discuss this subject; but there is one side of it that we, as Methodist women, may, without egotism, glory in, and that is what Methodist women have done, are still doing and expect to keep on doing. They are co-workers with their brothers in the conversion of the world.

The names of women of note in the early days of Methodism are too well known to require a panegyric in their behalf; yet it is well to hold them up and keep their names bright in memory's pages, that their virtues and characters may be studied and emulated.

The names of Grace Murray, Mrs. Crosby, Sarah Ryan (who, it has been said, was the original of "Dinah Morris," in Adam Bede), and many others too numerous to mention, of whom, perhaps, the most noted was Miss Bozanquet (afterwards Mrs. Fletcher), whose influence is still felt, and is still permeating through the hearts of the women of the church. The many missionary enterprises inaugurated by the societies that have sprung into being through "Woman's Work for Women," is the culmination of this influence.

The first Woman's Missionary Society was organized in 1861, and was auxiliary to the "American Board of Missions." Many others were organized later on, and in 1878 our own "Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," and also our Home Missionary Society. Other and abler pens than mine may tell in glowing words and astounding figures of the great and ever-widening work of these devoted Methodist women and their God-blessed societies.

Yes, tell it, sisters, tell it. Tell "it in Gath, publish it in the streets of Askelon," and every other place, how the good work goes marching on.

"Awake, awake; put on thy strength, O daughters of Zion. Put on thy beautiful garments;" go on with this work until every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus "is King of kings and Lord of lords."

All honor to the noble army of Methodist women who have gone over to join the great majority! All honor to those who are still in the front ranks battling against the hosts of Satan! We have asked "for the heathen for an inheritance" at home and abroad, and the promise is sure that "it shall be given."

"Christ for the world we sing."

And we will work in this our loved employ, work while it is day; yes, we will work.

"We'll work 'till Jesus comes Then we'll be gathered home."

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE AT 75.

On the 15th day of this month she celebrates her seventy-fifth birthday—as a great woman and as great a public benefactor, and much of a heroine as she was forty years ago, when she went forth from her comfortable home in England, not as a mere nurse to attend to the wants of the wounded and dying British soldiers in the Crimea, but as a fearless organizer of a great field hospital system, which the British war office authorities, staff officers, and generals had looked upon as a mere matter of afterthought in the preliminary arrangements of one of the most difficult campaigns in the history of the civilized world.

Miss Nightingale loathes anything in the form of publicity. To journalists she never opens her mouth, nor even her door, but to anyone who seeks her advice on a question affecting the interests of the sick or those who nurse them, a hearty welcome and a word of encouragement and counsel are always cheerfully given. She has a very comfortable home on one of the best streets in the West End of London, but spends most of the year at Clayden House, in Buckinghamshire, the home of her sister, Lady Verney.

She is a tall woman, rather stout, with grey hair, and fine open face. Although a great sufferer, she does not show a trace of it. She has not known what it is to be without pain for many years. Her features are finely modeled, while her hands and feet are very small. Her voice is low and musical. She often reads aloud and sometimes she hums a song or a hymn. She is very devout, and an omnivorous reader. Her room is littered with newspapers, magazines, writing paper, pencils and letters. She is always cheerful.—Ladies' Home Journal.

IMPORTANCE OF TRAINING FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

BY MARIA LAYNG GIBSON,
Principal Scarritt Bible and Training School.

The world moves! A few centuries ago the mere assertion of his unquestioned fact involved the peril of prison walls and excommunication. That the world does move is evidenced unmistakably in the advanced movement of young people in the church. Although Victor Hugo has styled the present century "Woman's Century," it may, with equal propriety, be designated "The Age of Young People's Organizations." In the days of our grandmothers the enthusiasm peculiar to youth found vent in singing schools and spelling bees, in huskings and merry-makings; but it was deemed indecorous for a young Christian to take part in a church service. How much the church missed then can best be estimated by the gain it receives now from the Epworth League, Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and kindred associations, that are massing our young people in organized battalions of volunteers.

The mission of the church is to take the world for Christ. That the army of Christ needs the impetus and power gained from the ardor and glow of youth with its outspoken and fearless defense of truth, its denunciation of error, its unbounded hope, no mature Christian soldier will deny. But this power and energy needs guidance and training. Ten trained soldiers can put to rout a hundred undisciplined recruits; and so in the warfare against the powers of evil, the usefulness and influence of a zealous young Christian, fired by divine love may, be multiplied when his natural gifts are strengthened and developed by training.

The times demand skilled labor; the church is waking slowly to its importance. In secular affairs, who would think of taking a watch to an unskilled mechanic for repairs? What would be thought of a surgeon who would convert a hospital ward filled with patients in extreme illness to a probationer just entered on a course of nurse training? That the ornaments of gold and the ills of the body need the trained eye and the skilled hand for their repair, is not worse than folly to think that the salvation of the soul—that priceless treasure ransomed by the Son of God himself—may be intrusted to the unskilled and inexperienced.

Training saves waste of time and waste of strength. A friend of mine took a trunk of a relative with her on a journey the other day. Not being familiar with the lock, she chanced to touch a spring which caused a guard to slip across the keyhole, preventing the entrance of the key. Arrived at her destination, she sought to open it in vain. She remembered how she had closed it; but the entire household worked in vain to solve the riddle how to open it. After an hour or two of profitless labor, a locksmith was sent for, and in one moment after his arrival the trunk stood open. Why? He had been trained to the business. He knew how to deal with locks. He charged a good price for his moment's work, and no one disputed that he deserved it for knowing how. When we stand before the Judge, will the plea, "We did not know how," prove an excuse for waste of energy? If we shall be called to account for what we might have done had we developed our talents, what will be our sentence if through our ignorance of methods we fail to do the work God fitted us by nature to perform?

"How to bring men to Christ" is the title of a book which the most careless reader could not fail to recognize as the work of a trained scriber of God. Knowledge of the soul's needs and Satan's wiles marks the writer as a student of humanity, his knowledge of the Word of God as the remedy for these ills; and the defense against the cunning craftiness of men and the snare of the evil one, reveals him as a student of the Word and a lover of souls. The author of that book has conferred a gift on the Christian world by writing it. The study of its pages would prove a blessing to everyone who would win souls.

The importance of training for Christian work is realized only when we rightly esteem the nature of the work committed to our hands, wherein hearts are the fertile soil and our acts and words the seeds that shall bring forth fruit unto eternal life or eternal death! A word may change the destiny of a soul. A brusque, blunt church visiter may drive away from the service of God the souls she is striving with well meaning, but ill-directed energy to win. Lack of knowledge of the Bible will surely hamper the usefulness of even the most gifted worker. The best belongs to God by right. To make the most of one's self for God is the highest duty of his children.

The world moves! Ten years ago the idea of training for Christian work was scarcely thought of. To-day the thought has become so popular that training schools and classes are recommended to be organized in every city, while conferences of Christian workers are becoming frequent. The Training School of our own church ranks among the best, and is growing in favor with God and man. The demand for trained workers is greater than the supply of workers coming to be trained. The misconception concerning the work to be done and concerning the requirements of the workers is of long standing; the conviction as to need for training is recent, and yet is growing. The constant, conscious presence of the indwelling Christ and his personal interest in not only what we do for Him, but also how we do it, will quicken our desire to give our very best to Jesus. Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, of the China Inland Mission, tells the following incident: "A Swiss pastor was taking great pains in writing a letter, when a friend sitting by said, 'I would not take such pains with that letter if I were you. Jean is so illiterate that he won't know the difference.' 'Ah!' replied the minister, 'but the Lord Jesus is looking over my shoulder, and I am making every letter for his eye; it is with him that I have to do.'"

This idea, fully believed, would work such a revolution in the church of God that never again would one of his followers be heard to say, "She has no need of training!"

"And there came a certain poor widow and she threw in two mites, which make a farthing. And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, Verily, I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury: For they did cast of their abundance, but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living."—Mark xii, 42, 43, 44.

"Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour."—Matthew xv: 28.

"Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own work praise her in the gates."—Proverbs xxxi, 31.

THE WOMAN'S EXCHANGE.

ITS OBJECTS AND AIMS.

BY MRS. R. M. WALMSLEY.

Frances Power Cobb, in her introduction to the work entitled "The Woman Question in Europe," says: "Of all the movements, political, social and religious, of past ages, there is, I think, not one so unmistakably tide-like in its extension and the uniformity of its impulse as that which has taken place within living memory among the women of almost every race on the globe. Other agitations, reforms and revolutions have prevailed and lifted up classes, tribes, nations, churches; but this movement has stirred an entire sex—even half the race. Like the incoming tide also, it has rolled in separate waves, and each one has obeyed the same law, and has done its part, in carrying forward all the rest."

There are, perhaps, no terms which more accurately describe the steady, yet rapid strides made within the past twenty years by and for women. Neithe, has there been any new departurer more productive of good, in its practical results.

Purely philanthropic in character, the object of these associations is to enable gentlewomen—obliged by adverse circumstances to become self-supporting—to make accomplishment or practical knowledge remunerative.

A history of the origin and growth of these organizations, though replete with interest, could not be given within the limits of this paper; hence we will not attempt more than an outline of the work.

In 1878 Mrs. William Choate, of New York, first conceived the plan of organizing a society whose object should be the establishment of a salesroom for the work of gentlewomen. Meetings were held where philanthropic women, who were thoroughly conversant with the necessities of their unfortunate sisters, discussed the subject and seriously considered how best to aid them in their efforts at self-support. Each successive meeting increased in numbers, as well as interest and enthusiasm. In May, of the same year, a store in the heart of the business centre of the city was rented, well stocked with goods prepared by those who were only too anxious to avail themselves of this opportunity for self-help, and its doors were thrown open to the public.

The results have far exceeded the expectations of the most sanguine. Year by year their sales increased; larger and more commodious rooms were secured. New ideas came as the result of experience, new avennes opened for broadening the scope of their work, 'till from their report for the year 1894-95 we learn there has been paid to women, through this society, between the period of their organization, May, 1878, to Nov. 1, 1894, six hundred and seventy-three thousand three hundred and sixty-six dollars and forty-seven cents.

Startling as this announcement is, this amount is nothing in comparison with the great good accomplished throughout the country.

The "tidal wave" which started in New York rose gradually, increasing in influence and power until it has covered every State in the Union, from Maine to California.

In every city, as well as in many of the smaller towns, the sign "Woman's Exchange," with its rooms filled with the dainty handiwork of women forms one of the most attractive features.

Reports from only forty-four of these societies, including probably the largest and most successful ones, have been received and show that through this channel alone more than three million dollars has been paid to women.

But great as the financial result have been, the moral effect has been far greater. Especially is this the case in our own Southland. Women have not only been taught the dignity of labor; they have realized within their souls the blessedness of independence and the happiness and contentment which freedom from the galling yoke of dependence for themselves and their loved ones must always bring to the refined and self-respecting spirit.

The beneficial effects of this great work have not fallen alone upon those who were the object of these efforts. Those who have labored at the Exchange have been benefited, as well as those they have been able to assist. They have been taught human nature; have come into close contact with the poor and suffering; have learned how the refined and cultured woman raised in the lap of luxury, refined and purified in the furnace of affliction, can rise from her lethargy and, with mind and fingers attuned to want, can by her own efforts win back comfort and in some rare cases affluence. They have also learned how difficult it is to accomplish this, and in the leavening have been taught that true charity, which suffereth long and is kind; have been more than ever impressed with the necessity of doing unto others as we would that they should do to us. And what shall we say of the burdens that have been lifted from weary shoulders, the hungry that have been fed, the naked clothed; of their number eternity alone can reveal.

In 1881 a few philanthropic women of New Orleans began seriously to consider how best to aid the large number of women in their own city, who by the devastations of war had been deprived not only of all means of support, but of their protectors as well.

Raised in the lap of luxury, these gentle women found themselves in many instances the sole dependence of aged and infirm parents, or of helpless children. Unaccustomed to labor of any sort, what could be done, how could they accomplish anything as bread-winners? Surely by enabling them "to make remunerative their varied talents or accomplishments" seemed the only way to render them service.

Learning of the work inaugurated in New York, it was resolved to establish a similar association here. The situation of their city and circumstances of the case required somewhat different methods in carrying on the work, and, after much thought and consultation, a constitution was framed and by-laws adopted peculiarly adapted to this special field. As evidence of their faith in the permanency of the work, as well as determination to conquer all difficulties, a charter was procured for ninety-nine years. It was resolved to manage the affairs of the association upon strictly business principles, and allow the work to stand full upon its own merits. They also determined to incur no debts.

These rules have been strictly kept. No appeal has ever been made to the public for assistance, either directly or through the medium of an entertainment. Although it was found necessary to suspend the second rule for the purpose of fitting up the building, which the beneficence of two noble women had bestowed upon the Exchange, the debt so incurred was liquidated within two years, and to-day there is no incumbrance whatever upon the society.

The managers have been forced to conduct the business affairs of the Exchange in the most economical manner; have ever held uppermost the consideration of the greatest good to be accomplished for the consignors, broadening the scope of their work little by little, but always as rapidly as their means would permit. Of the struggle made, the amount of labor performed, or self-sacrifice endured before their work came to be recognized as a competitor for public patronage in the business world, nor of the struggle which has been required each year to maintain this position, and at the same time strive year by year to increase the scope of the work, thereby increasing the number of beneficiaries, we will not speak, for all this has been a labor of love—work done for the Master's sake and "in His name." Therefore we cheerfully and prayerfully lay all at the feet of Him who said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The name of this Exchange differs from that of any other—the term Christian having been adopted as indicative of the spirit in which the work was undertaken, and with the expectation that the work would be similar to that done by Women's Christian Associations in other cities. There is also a difference in the variety of work sold through this Exchange, as some of the articles consigned to it differ widely from anything to be found in any other.

The fruits which grow in this tropical climate enable the consignors to furnish this market with orange flower syrup, orange and fig preserves, and guava jelly, superior to any that is to be found in this country. The hand-woven material, made by Acadian women, suitable for outing suits or gentlemen's clothing, the soft, heavy goods known as Evangeline cloth, used for portiers or draperies of any sort, with the handsome, netted fringes for trimming hand-made by the same women. The baskets made by the Indian women who dwell on the Teche, unlike any others to be found anywhere except in Alaska, but very like them in texture as well as coloring. Most unique and so soon to fail even in our market, there are but two women living who make them and they will not teach the art. The wonderful work of the women of Fayal and Inst, though by no means least, the exquisite laces of the Italian women consigned to this Exchange by the Countess di Brazza—all these go to complete an exhibit unique and such as can not be found at any other place in the country. While in the class of work such as is found at other Exchanges, and in which we compete with them needlework of all kinds, including art embroidery—this work is in no degree inferior either in quality or beauty to that found elsewhere.

Two years ago a gold medal was offered for the best original design in decorative art to be sent to the World's Fair, with the hope that this might prove the opening wedge for the establishment of a Decorative Art Department; which had been a long cherished desire. The designs submitted gave evidence of so much talent, and their originality of design was so marked, as to far exceed the expectations of the most sanguine. The Board, by a unanimous vote, decided to make this a permanent feature of the Exchange, offering annually, not only a gold, but a silver medal as well. The second exhibit has just closed and the well-known artists of acknowledged ability, who kindly consented to act as judges, were surprised at the great improvement in the method and style of work submitted, as well as the undoubted talent displayed in originality of design. The society, therefore, feel they may confidently expect their consignors will soon be able to compete with any artists in the country for original designs in industrial and decorative art.

During the past year there has also been introduced a Department of Art Embroidery, when commenced work, in new and artistic designs, silks, linens, and all materials necessary for the conduct of that work, will be kept constantly on hand and for sale, as well as a variety of designs for stamping. Through these new avenues the managers hope greatly to enlarge the scope of their work, and reach many women whom they have hitherto been unable to assist.

If all the women of this city realized the importance of this work, as those do who are laboring so earnestly to promote its interests, they would become members of this association, and by contributing five dollars per annum enable the society to increase largely the number of its beneficiaries.

The annual report of the New York Exchange contains a list of subscribers who pay annually amounts varying from five to five and eight hundred dollars, forming together a total of four thousand three hundred and forty-three dollars for the purpose of defraying the current expense of carrying on this noble work. In addition to this, we find that during the year '94 and '95 they received five thousand two hundred and fifteen dollars in donations for the same purpose. From other Exchanges throughout the country similar reports have been received all reciting the liberality of their patrons and those who, realizing the importance and stability of the work, contribute of their means thus liberally to enable those conducting the work to increase its scope and avoid incurring debt. In many places, too, the public are constantly called upon to patronize entertainments such as concerts, balls, musicales or fairs, which are given to raise the necessary funds to carry on this work. The Board of Managers of New Orleans ask none of these things. They ask your patronage in the purchase of their goods; that before purchasing elsewhere you will examine the goods which they have for sale, made and placed upon the market by some poor self-sacrificing woman with the hope and expectation that it will sell, that the money may be used by her in providing for herself or those she loves depending upon her for the necessities and comforts of life. Increased patronage will give the revenue required to continue to carry on the good work.

During the thirteen years of its existence, something over two hundred and thirty-two thousand dollars has been paid to gentlewomen through this Exchange. While this is not a small amount, how much greater it might have been had more consideration been shown and more patronage given to its several departments.

If, as Bailey has so beautifully expressed the idea—

"We should count time by heart throbs.
We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts not breaths—
In feelings, not in figures on a dial."

What must be the length and agony of the lives of many a bread-winner who through long days and sleepless nights plies the needle, or exercises whatever talent God has given her, to win the hard earned money requisite for the subsistence of her loved ones and herself.

And "if" as the same author continues—

"He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

Secure for yourself the largest, fullest, happiest life by assisting in this great work, if only by purchasing the goods prepared amidst so much sorrow and suffering, thereby relieving in some slight degree the weight of the burden which at times becomes almost too heavy to be borne.

THE BIBLE.

This Book, this holy Book, on every line
Marked with the seal of high divinity,
On every leaf bedewed with drops of love
Divine, and with the eternal heraldry
And signature of God Almighty stamped
From first to last—this ray of sacred light,
This lamp from off the everlasting throne,
Mercy took down, and in the night of time
Flood, casting on the dark her gracious bow:
And evermore beseeching men, with tears
And earnest sighs, to read, believe, and live.

Letter from Switzerland.

From Grindelwald we went to Interlaken, and there took a boat and passed up Lake Brienz. A party of young Swiss men and women were on board, who sang their national hymn and other songs as we glided over the sparkling waters in the heart of the everlasting hills. Soon we were transferred to the train and began to ascend the Alps, going over the Brunig Pass. A panoramic view of surpassing grandeur and magnitude stretched out before us as we climbed higher and higher. The great mountains towered over above us with their sun-covered and snow-capped heads, with tumultuous torrents and thick covering of fir and pine and hemlock, beautiful valleys with silvery streams, picturesque hamlets, green fields of waving grain and grass, and exquisite lakes set like jewels in the midst of the surrounding richness and splendor.

The sides of some of the hills were deeply seamed where raging waters had rushed in years gone by, wearing away the rock and leaving red, rusty streaks, like lines in the face of an old, time-scarred, grief-racked man. There is pain and passion in nature as well as in the soul of humanity. Lungern was the first of the lakes passed. It seemed dark deep in the earth; the little village near was once submerged by it. Since then the bed has been lowered and the waters kept at a certain height by artificial outlets. The Lake of Sarnen was like a sea of glass. Its sides were fringed with rushes, white and yellow water lilies, and tall bushes laden with pink wild roses. At the tavern of Sarnen, which is the capital of the canton of Unterwalden, is a handsome building where the referendum meets each year to legislate. It was here that we saw a jail for the first time in Switzerland. In the midst of all the beauty of earth and air and sky of this idyllic time, one would never dream of sin, or think of its hideous penalty. God is so near, and gives such vivid manifestations of his presence and power.

In this region we saw the dry, rocky bed of a river that wound its sinuous way through the brilliant tints of the mountain-sides. The outline was perfect. Underneath was the river, flowing deep down the rugged fastnesses. At certain seasons its volume increases and it pours through its outward channel, but at all other times it is hidden, giving only the evidence of its existence. How like our lives! With some the streaming waters of unrest writhe and twist and beat the strength out in unseen force, leaving their mark on wearied brain and brow; with others it is—"the peace of God that passeth all understanding"—flashes like a river deep, silent, untiring—stamping the face with a look like that of "the King in his beauty."

At Alpnach, the third lake passed, the mountains begin to decrease in size. Stanserhorn is the highest of surrounding peaks. Tunnels are surprisingly few, but just before we reached Hergiswyl, a little town whose houses are built right down on the water's edge, we passed an unusually long one, cut through the solid rock of a mountain. Here we gain our first view of Mt. Rigi, upon whose heights it is said to be worth a lifetime to see the sun rise. Beyond, nestling close to the ideally beautiful lake that bears its name, is the city of Lucerne. We were surprised to find it so Italian in appearance. The houses and elegant hotels are typical villas in architecture and the expanse and beauty of their grounds.

Immediately after arrival we took a short walk through the quaint old streets, which are nearly all beautified by glimpses of the lake on one side, and handsome buildings on the other. The latter are half hidden by bowers of roses and tropical plants growing in the most marvelous luxuriance. Of course, we went to see "the lion" the first thing. That magnificent figure is cut from the solid rock on the side of a mountain. It was modeled by Thorwaldsen, and was chiseled there to commemorate the heroic death of the Swiss guards who laid down their lives in the defense of Louis XVI., the French king, when he was attacked by the Revolutionists.

The garden in which this monument is placed is regarded as the most wonderful in the world. In early ages it was the home of glaciers, and was discovered only twenty years ago. In numerous places there are circular depressions which were ground out by mill-stones whirled to and fro in their stony beds by the movements of the great masses of snow and ice. Different formations are seen, showing the physical conditions of the earth at distant periods. One great rock was a mass of shells; another contained the outline of palms that had been petrified. The most unique thing in Lucerne is the "Kappel brucke," an old wooden bridge that was built in 1333. It is covered from end to end, and stretches diagonally across the river Reuss. Just under the roof are dozens of three-cornered paintings placed the entire length of the bridge, illustrating the noble deeds of the warriors in the early history of the Swiss Republic.

The cathedral at Lucerne is one of the most interesting in Europe. The carving of the chair-stalls and the northern-side altar is magnificent; it was done in the fifteenth century. At that time the art of wood-carving was extensively cultivated in Switzerland. The wrought-iron chair-screen and the screen of the baptistry are extremely fantastic. The organ is said to be the third finest on the continent. It has ninety registers. Every evening a recital is given. We sat in the stillness of those dim old aisles yesterday at dusk, and listened to the exquisite strains that poured from the marvelous old instrument under the touch of some unseen master-hand. The vox humana and vox angelica sent forth sounds that were weirdly, strangely beautiful, lifting the soul on wings, stilling the tumult of the world's strife, leaving one under the very shadow of the glory of the Most High. After rendering several of the finest productions of the best musicians, the organist gave an improvisation. It was the translation in unearthly language of a storm. The thunder rolled in realistic, terrifying volumes throughout every inch of the sanctuary, making the listeners look at each other in a questioning, awe-stricken way. Then the rain began to fall, clearly, distinctly. We gazed unconsciously towards the windows to assure ourselves if the shower that had greeted us on our arrival was indeed over. A long, despairing, sighing wail followed; then a grand, triumphal "magnificat," and we awoke from the trance in which our souls had been held and electrified.

BELLE KEARNEY.

Lucerne, Switzerland, July 20, 1895.

Our Trip.

Our native land is the "dark and bloody ground," but never had we seen it since we enlisted in the itinerant army. We never have had the time to spare, and sometimes lacked the cash. There is a demand for all of our time now; yet on Monday, Aug. 26, at seven o'clock A. M., we boarded a Southern Pacific train and reached the Crescent City before eleven, but had to wait until eight P. M. for a Louisville and Nashville train. Off on time, and arrived at the "Gulf City" (Mobile) at midnight. The inhabitants seemed to be in a profound sleep, except a few hotel drummers and fruit peddlers. One fruit vender in particular attracted our attention. We did not see him, but his voice we can never forget. It seemed to be that of an adult male, and was soft and musical. In most persuasive, pleading tones he would entreat the passengers to buy. "Peaches, ladies and gentlemen. Nice peaches and bananas," he would repeat in the same even tone of voice. It is said that voice is indicative of character, and we are inclined to believe it; and if true, this fruit man must be angelic. On we went, puffing, screaming and thundering, until Montgomery was reached. Distance from Mobile 180 miles, and from New Orleans 320. Here we held up long enough to wash off some of the cinders and dust, and to break our fast. Breakfast barely over when our horse took a fit of coughing, the conductor called out, "All aboard," and aboard we jumped. Afternoon we ran right straight up through old Alabama, and such a country! Now mountain, next valley, and once, at least, instead of going over a mountain, we ducked our heads, shut our eyes, and went under it. Birmingham, Decatur, and many other smaller towns were passed. About 7:30 P. M. Nashville, Tenn., was reached. This is called the "City of Rocks," and is noted for its fine schools, elegant churches, and Publishing Houses. Here we boarded the Evansville branch of the same line, and soon were pressing Kentucky soil. Stations were passed quick and fast, and each called out when reached. On reaching Manitou, the conductor shouted, "All out for Manitou," when a Paddy sprang to his feet, and said: "All out but a man or two, is it? Faith, then, I had better be gittin' out," and out he jumped, the conductor said, over fifty miles from his place of destination. We reached Madisonville at eleven o'clock, where we left our steam horse, repaired to a hotel, and slept a few hours. Breakfast over the next morning, we hired team, buggy and driver, and drove sixteen miles, and reached the old home, which is owned and occupied by our only brother. Oh, how changed! We had not seen it in a quarter of a century, and there was not a familiar scene presented itself to our view, and our dear kindred had changed quite as much as the old place had; yet our reception was most cordial and affectionate. We attempt no description. The old hills and valleys were covered with fine crops of corn and tobacco. Farmers there sell cattle, pork, wheat, fruit, wool, and tobacco. We found a great church-going Protestant people. Cumberland Presbyterians and Baptists are the most numerous. The Christian Sabbath is strictly observed. A high state of morals exists. A desirable country in which to live, except the severe Winters. Sunday, Sept. 1, we preached twice to large and attentive congregations. We were booked for three services that day, but got off with two, as we were resting and on a visit. The parting time came, and it was hard to say it; yet farewell was said, and said, perhaps, for the last time.

HOUSTON ARMSTRONG.

Bro. Davies' Mistake.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me to correct an error into which some of your readers have been led by the statistics you published two weeks ago. The view taken by many is pessimistic in the extreme. The Catholics, as everybody knows, report the adherent population of their church—drunkards and saloon keepers, gamblers, and all—and by so doing report a membership of 6,287,871. Take this from the total—20,618,307—and we have as non-Catholics 14,330,436.

Neander, in his "Planting and Training of the Christian Church," adopts the ratio of 2½ to 1 as the proportion of the adherent population to the actual membership of the churches. Applying this rule—and it is practically a correct one—the other churches have an adherent population of 35,826,070. To this add the membership, and the result is a non-Catholic professing population of 50,156,506. To these figures add the Catholics, and we have 56,444,377 as the professing population of the country. Now, if we subtract this sum from the entire population, we have only 8,555,623 "infidels and heathens." Hence it follows that this is a Christian country, as about seven-eighths of our people believe in some form of Bible religion. Hence it will appear that the Methodists—real and nominal—number 16,062,492, or within less than four millions of the religious population given in the table referred to by Bro. Davies. The Baptists, with an actual and nominal population of 13,093,638, runs our figures for these two churches alone up to 29,163,134, or nearly half of the population of the country. The Methodists alone command at least twice as many voters as the Catholics do. But Catholics vote for their cause, and Methodists do not.

Respectfully, J. A. PARKER.

The Japanese government evidently intends to spare no expense to establish itself as one of the leading nations of the world. An enormous appropriation has just been made for the construction of new war-ships, to be built by a Glasgow firm.

In the Living Present.

Roman Catholics advocate the purchase of the Quadrilateral for the Pope. That, of course, includes Rome. No doubt, large contributions could be secured for such purpose. But it takes two parties to make a contract. Crispi, prime minister of Italy, recently declared publicly that Rome could not be bought with money, even though the offer be $1,000,000,000. The price of Rome was human blood.

The chaplain of Holloway prison, which held decapitated Nell Cream, the murderer of thirty-five women, assures that this monster knew half of the Bible by heart. Was perfectly familiar with theology. Another proof that mere intellectuality does not make man good.

The Globe Quarterly Review, in an article on "The Negro in American Politics," assures that Africans, one and all, are liars, thieves, loafers, etc. In fact, the entire catalogue of vices is attributed to them. Many papers object to such sweeping denunciation. Even intimate that the vices enumerated are, alas! too numerously in vogue among the Caucasians.

In the Medico-Legal Congress, which recently convened in New York, it was the concurrent opinion that bicycle riding in women was dangerous to health and injurious to morals. In that same congress a member advocated that in case of recovery from sickness was obviously impossible, suicide on the part of the invalid, or termination of life by appropriate drug administered by attending physician, was a commendable duty. But the congress disagreed with the speaker.

Female suffragists find much encouragement in the astounding discovery by a celebrated professor of the university of Utopia that the supposed man in the moon is really a woman.

French daily papers, such as Lanterne and the aristocratic Figaro, denounce Protestantism as recreant to French interests. They assure that it is the English Protestant missionaries who make the Hovas of Madagascar so obstinate. The same had been the case in Tonquin and Algiers. In the meantime the French people look on Protestantism with suspicion.

The Passing of the Gospel of Dirt.

That the pulpit during the last few years has indulged in extraordinary liberties is transparently clear. The preachers have discussed themes that at one period of our history would have been deemed unpardonable. At the same time they have filled their discourses with the commonest slang. All sorts of subjects, political, social, literary and sensational, have been discussed, violations of the laws of grammar and rhetoric have been gloried in, and every variety of billingsgate has been imported. All the traditions of great preaching were forgotten. All the proprieties and conventionalism which had hitherto hedged in the pulpit were contemptuously ignored. The ideal preaching was a string of smart sayings, taking anecdotes, slang, with a superficial commentary upon the gospel, and with just enough of an ethical character to conciliate the devout.

The contagion was well nigh universal. It was amusing as well as disgusting to see beardless boys attitudinizing as giants, blowing a ram's horn and swinging an unsharpened battle-axe, threatening to walk rough-shod over everything in sight and to hew a triumphant pathway through all opposition. And it was equally laughable and nauseating to see some of the old veterans trying to adopt this slashing style and to preach in a manner utterly foreign to all their tastes, traditions and ideals. Very few escaped the general infection, and those who ventured to protest against innovation and the license were branded as unprogressive fossils who were incapable of keeping up with the procession. The opposition originated in a conservatism gone to seed or in cowardice that handicapped the messenger of truth. It was the golden age of slang. It was the long-whished-for era of perfect liberty. It was a paradise of clerical wits and oily tongues. We are glad to note the unmistakable signs of a decadence of this standard and style. There are many things which indicate the passing of the gospel of dirt.

We notice that the former idols of the populace, the men who best represented this movement, are losing their grip. Their star is waning and waning fast. Some of them who once figured prominently in Texas will never receive another invitation to hold a meeting in the State. The people are tired of it and have repudiated it forever. The idols are shattered. The mighty are fallen. We notice, too, that the church press almost universally has arrayed itself against the movement. The papers are committed to putting it down. These journals simply mirror the popular revolt. They voice the sentiment of the masses. The people demand the pure gospel in clean English, and they are going to make their demand felt from one end of the continent to the other. We are glad to chronicle the renaissance of evangelicalism and decency—the return of the gospel as against the lecture, and cleanliness of speech as against the vulgarity of the pulpit clown. The preachers who once ventured upon these improprieties and liberties are repenting, recanting and reforming. They are riding an ebbing tide.—Texas Advocate.

One reason why a great many people are afraid of the higher criticism is because they have been made to believe that the scientific critic is a cold, unimaginative, unprejudiced and enormously profound scholar who has no ambition but to know the truth, and that, therefore, he has the right to speak with authority and not as the scribes. There is not a shadow of doubt but that the average scientific critic is wonderfully and fearfully made; but an examination of the literature of the scientific criticism of the past five years will show that his superiority over ordinary mortals consists not in the depth of his learning so much as in the height of his imagination. We seriously question whether this century has produced a romance that exhibits a greater fertility of imagination than the latest books of the scientific criticism.—Exchange.

For forty centuries the white man scrupulously avoided Africa. To-day there is a turn in the tide. One of the most significant facts of our century is the tendency of the white race to the "Dark Continent." At first they went to trade; they now go as colonists. The continent has become dotted with white settlements. Not less than a million white persons have driven their stakes in Africa. The impulse is moving all western Europe—English, Dutch, Portuguese, Italian, Belgian and German alike. Each wishes not only a sphere of influence, but a habitat in the desert continent. It is one of the great providential movements of history, destined to produce more important results in the twentieth century.—Zion's Herald.

Dr. Alexander Sutherland says: "There was once a donkey that fed in a grassy meadow, wherein were many fresh water ponds greatly infested with leeches. When the donkey went to drink, or to cool himself, they fastened on him and decreased the blood supply. He resolved to get rid of them. He shook his ears and said it was a shame; he went to the ponds and picked at them; he got on a platform and brayed at them; but all to no purpose. At last he said: 'I have it. I can't keep the leeches from sucking my blood; I'll regulate the business by giving them a license to do it, on condition they give me back a small portion of the blood as a license fee.' It was a brilliant idea, and eminently worthy of an ass."

If a preacher has no other message for his people before he goes into his pulpit than a tirade of abuse, he had better keep out of it, or keep his message to himself. Reproof and rebuke are all right when there is a demand for them, provided they are administered in a spirit of meekness and love. But reproof is one thing and scolding is quite another. Reproof may be kind, considerate, and respectful; scolding is rough, rasping, and disrespectful. The one is administered in a spirit of meekness; the other in a spirit of boasting and with an utter disregard for the feelings of the offending party.—Alabama Advocate.

Col. Ingersoll is still at his old tricks, hunting up damaging statements against Christianity, and using them to its disadvantage. His latest adventure in this line is keeping track of all ministers who have gone astray, and parading the result to the detriment of their profession. Recently in a public address he declared that he had ascertained in various ways that at least forty ministers or priests had during the past year committed penitentiary offenses, or been guilty of gross immoralities. This seems like a very serious charge; yet, even conceding its truthfulness, it is still to the credit of the clergy of all denominations that so small a percentage of them have been overcome by sinful temptations. How few appear these forty fallen ones when we remember that the great ministerial army of our land now numbers 111,036—one in 2,700! But after all it should be remembered that ministers are only men, and it should occasion no surprise if some should fall into vice and crime. It rather shows the abounding grace of God that infidel search can discover only here and there a lapse from virtue on their part. The religious teachers of the United States have a splendid moral record. If the great defamer of Christian character can make no better showing than he has done, he had better spike his guns and retire in shame.—Presbyterian.

It has been estimated that electric lines have displaced no less than 275,000 horses, and the movement has not yet stopped. It is estimated by a Topeka paper that many horses would require about 125,000 bushels of corn and oats a day. A decrease of 125,000 bushels a day in corn and oats consumption is enough to appreciably affect prices of those grains. It amounts to 45,000,000 bushels a year. Furthermore, the loss of the commercial demand for these coarse grains in the cities means an enormous loss of tonnage for railroads, about 62,500 carloads.—Central Methodist.

Laymen ought not to shift responsibility on presiding elders. If they want "a change" in the pulpit, let them deal frankly with all persons concerned. To pretend, even by a significant look, that they are surprised at the removal of a preacher, when they have specifically asked for it in private, is double dealing. We have known of instances where the poor sub-Bishop has had to bear the brunt of all the blame. This is not fair. They have enough to carry, without adding, unjustly, to the load.—Holston Methodist.

No sensible man should get angry because a newspaper man duns him for money. A dun is not an impeachment of a subscriber's integrity, but is simply the outcropping of the publisher's necessities. For instance, a thousand men owe a man from one to four dollars each. He has to dun them all in order to pay his expenses. Instead of getting angry and stopping his paper for what is honestly due, the subscriber should thank the editor for waiting on him so patiently and pay up like a man.—St. Louis Advocate.

The day is long past when any except the ignorant and prejudiced speak of foreign missions with a sneer. The century now drawing to a close has no prouder laurel than that which it wears as distinctively the century of missionary effort and progress recorded in the evangelization of the world.—Harper's Bazar.

Godey's Magazine, for October, is a Southern number. A very artistic cover by M. de Lipman emphasizes this and the two leading articles are upon "The Cotton States Exposition" at Atlanta, and "King Cotton and His Subjects." The latter treats of cotton-picking in the picturesque and the commercial aspects. Other finely illustrated papers are upon Mr. French, the sculptor; "Types of French Beauty;" "Great Singers of This Century" and "The Experience of an American at an Italian Vintage." Among the varied fiction is a remarkable story of society by Frances Aymar Mathews, entitled "A Confession of Success." The Fashion Department, as usual, covers the field of particular interest to women.

EVER FAITHFUL.

I can not do great things for Him
Who did so much for me;
But I would like to show my love,
Dear Jesus, unto thee.
Faithful in every little thing,
O Savior, may I be!

There are small crosses I may take,
Small burdens I may bear,
Small acts of faith and deeds of love,
Small sorrows I may share;
And little bits of work for Thee
I may do everywhere.

And so I ask Thee, Give me grace
My little place to fill,
That I may ever walk with Thee,
And ever do thy will;
And in each duty, great and small,
I may be faithful still.

Students' Loan Fund

Ever since the opening of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school the correspondence of the principal has revealed the fact that "not many rich are called" to the work of God—or, if called, not many have answered the call to prepare for his service by entering here; and, without exaggeration, we may say that hundreds have written asking the privilege of working their way through the school. To these but one answer could be given, viz.: that the only service that could be rendered as an equivalent for expenses is to give clerical help in the office as stenographer and typewriter or to take charge of the mailing list of "The Evangel," and that there are always a number on applicants for those positions on file waiting for vacancies.

Many of these young women are unable or unwilling to secure financial assistance, and so they must needs deny themselves and us the profit to be secured by their entrance. Our desire to give them practical help led us two years ago to insert in our catalogue a paragraph with the heading "Students' Loan Fund," in which we showed the necessity for such a fund, and suggested that here would be an opportunity for men and women of means to assist the school and to send a substitute to be trained for the service of Christ.

The idea is to create a fund to be placed under the control of the principal to be loaned, not given, to students entering here, their note to be taken in exchange and the amount loaned to be refunded from their earnings on the completion of the course. The benefit of such a fund is obvious.

There are also applicants who have money loaned out that they can not command at the time for entering, which inability has caused temporary and sometimes indefinite postponement of the cherished desire. This food would prove a boon to all such women, as while preserving their independence of spirit it would give them the opportunity they seek.

We are glad to record the first gift to this fund. Before the opening of school this year an aged mother in Israel asked through Rev Joseph King, of the Southwest Missouri Conference, whether we would accept an old gold watch, once her husband's, as a gift to the students' fund. We expressed our willingness and asked her to accompany it with a letter to the students to be read at the opening of school. The watch came promptly and also the letter, as follows:

Windsor, Mo., Sept. 9, 1895.

To the Scarritt Bible and Training-School Students—

MY DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS: When Sister Gibson presents to you the old watch, weigh it not to find the number of carats of gold of which it is made, but let it hang in the balance as the "widow's mite." It has served out its day as a time-piece: it marked well the days as the partner of my early and later life went the rounds of his circuit carrying the message of the blessed gospel of Christ to light the home and hearts of men.

But, thanks be to God, no life is marked by the number of hours spent in this world, but by the deeds done. My poor old watch will no longer measure off the hours, but may it be the instrument in doing much good for some earnest Christian girl in preparing her for her life-work.

Your school has a very warm place in my heart. Would that I had much to give; but please accept this, and may God ever direct and bless you! is the earnest prayer of your "Mother in Israel,"

ELIZA O. KELLY.

The watch is old. In the eyes of a jeweler it would probably have little value beyond the gold it contains, but we have a strong desire to realize enough for it to make this "widow's mite" the nucleus for a large students' loan fund. We will hold it for a time in the hope that some person whom God has blessed with wealth will buy the watch for a liberal sum, and thus answer the donor's prayer and make the fund a blessed reality.

Here is a beautiful opportunity for somebody to make a loan to the Lord. Send check or money to M. L. Gibson, principal. But we would not restrict this privilege of helping. Are there not others who, inspired by this widow's act of love, will follow her example and send money in small or large sums to help the growth of the fund which has had so auspicious a beginning?

There are young men and young women who waste more money on "trifles" in six months than would be required to maintain a girl here a whole year: $160 for board, washing and books. There are men and women enfeebled by age and disease mourning opportunities gone, who could provide the means to keep a substitute always in training to do the Lord's work. A gift of $3,700 would establish a permanent Students' Loan Fund.

May many earnest souls, even while reading this plea, respond.

"Such as I have I bring thee, O my Lord!
Thou who didst give thyself to rescue me!
Remembering that gift, can I withhold
Such as I have from thee?"

Song Books and Singing in Our Churches.

There are song books and song books. The land is flooded with them, of all titles, styles, and characters. With most of these publications of the day there is more of an eye to business than to divine worship. Song-writing is more of a profession than the outgrowth of religious feeling; more sentimental than experimental. The making and vending of the books is more for pecuniary profit than for spiritual edification. This is evident from the general character of the matter of which most of them are made. A great many of the songs are but namby-pamby doggerel, and much of the music, so called, is merely nonsensical jingle that caters to ears itching for the fanciful and sensational rather than the real and wholesome. Many devices are used to introduce into our churches and Sunday-schools song books, regardless of their merit and of the better judgment of those whose duty it is to provide for and direct in the worshiping exercises. Almost every evangelist and music leader has a new song book which is impertinently thrust upon the people regardless of their wishes or of any supply of books that may be on hand and in use. This entails needless expense and produces confusion in the song services of our churches, for in this way one congregation has one song book and another a different one, and so on. Thus our beautiful uniformity of worship is broken and our connectional spirit is marred. By this means our carefully-compiled and long-tested church hymnody is depreciated, ignored and displaced by other books, the circulation of which is prompted more by selfish gain than a desire to promote the worship of God.

Now, it is time for us, as a church, to seriously consider the evil of this state of things, and to take a firm stand against this imprudent foisting upon our people of professional and irresponsible matter for use in our services, some of which is of unsound doctrine and doubtful propriety for religious worship. In order to prevent the working of this leaven in our congregations, we, as preachers, must observe our ministerial vows and duties, and maintain the order for public worship, especially that which relates to singing. (See Discipline, 1894, paragraphs 120, 447, 212 227.) The pastor is to be recognized as the master of ceremonies in all services conducted by him, and the superintendent as the same in the Sunday-school, and they should not be expected to relegate the selection of songs for the occasion to any other person or persons.

The hymn book prepared and authorized by the church is to be used as the standard in all our congregations and for all occasions. This, of course, does not debar the occasional and judicious use of others as supplementary. No song book should be introduced by anyone for use in any of our church services without the approval of the preacher in charge. He has control of all the services in his churches, and is responsible for what is taught in song as well as in any other way. He, therefore, had the legitimate right to say what books and which song sare to be used. He should, therefore, teach and impress the people with the fact that our song service is an important feature of divine worship, and not for mere entertainment, and should, therefore, be engaged in with thoughtful reverence. Let our preachers all take their proper positions and act their parts in this matter, and so use our Church Hymn and Tune Book that the people will see what it is and why we use it, and they will learn to appreciate it. Be sure that it is used prominently in our Sunday-schools, so that the children will betimes become acquainted with it, and then we will not look for congregational singing in other church services. If other books are needed or desired as supplementary, be sure to procure such as have the imprint of our Publishing House upon them. Let these things be done, and we will be rid of some troubles that we have, and will have improvement in the quality and quantity of our congregational singing, "teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in the heart to the Lord."

Correspondence.

Letter from Mrs. M. I. Lambuth.

MR EDITOR: Knowing that a number of your readers are interested in the welfare of the writer, will you kindly allow space for a few words in your excellent NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE? It will not be amiss to say that the journey across the American continent from Florida to San Francisco, via Nashville, Tenn., New York and Chicago, was made in comfort as well as safety; no detention, no accident came to any of our party of six; and on July 3, while all San Francisco and numerous guests were decorating for the glorious Fourth, we weighed anchor and left on the beautiful steamer "Coptic" for Japan, via Honolulu, which place we made in a week. There were no high waves, no storm; nothing uncomfortable either aboard ship or in the sea; nothing to prevent perfect enjoyment. The two little children of our company had wanted to see whales, and, as if to grant them their desire, a large school of whales came near to our ship, and, in full view, spouted and played to the enjoyment of old and young, and the dear little folks concluded that whales were large enough for Jonah to be hid in. On arriving in Honolulu our steamer went alongside a newly made pier, made fast, sent out the gangway bridge, and numerous people came aboard to meet friends and to get tidings from the far-away home-land. We were fortunate in having acquaintances and friends ashore, and from them received kind invitations to go ashore and visit the several points of interest. After much we went, and soon found that arrangements had been made for us to ride in carriages and take in much of what was to be seen. (And just here I might say that there are more carriages in Honolulu, for its size, than in any other place yet visited.) The streets are wide and well kept; the tropical vegetation grows in luxury; the homes are lovely in the midst of flowers and vines, with the tall palms and bread-fruit trees adding their magnificent shades. The night-blooming cereus, looking out from the dark green leaves surrounding it, makes a bank of beauty that leads one to linger long and late close to the pure and beautiful work of nature leading from earth to God. There were churches and hospitals, schools and asylums, palaces and museums, mansions and cottages; busy people and quietly retreated companies enjoying the cool shade of giant trees and refreshing seaside villas. We drove around and among all these, then returned to our ship, slept and dreamed, arose, and again went ashore, this time to ride in street cars. Who would have supposed that in this island home these cars could have taken such fast hold of the people as to be largely patronized by young and old, foreigner and native; but there they are, and there they are to remain, going on to improved conditions possibly; but we all were convinced that Honolulu is a delightful island home and an attractive spot for many a traveler, merchant, teacher, farmer and missionary. On the morning of our departure from Honolulu many persons came down to say good-by to their departing friends. Many Chinese and Japanese were leaving for their respective countries, and their friends did them honor by coming to the steamer, and by bringing numerous garlands of beautiful flowers made by the native women, who realize quite a profit by their sale. We enjoyed looking at these wreaths, and then we were highly entertained to see the departing friends placing the wreaths around the hats and necks of those about to go away. Just then a band of music came down to the pier and began to play the various national airs of America, England, France, Japan, etc.; then the signal was given for visitors to go ashore, "good-bys" were given, and the large cable ropes were pulled in, our vessel began to move, and at that moment everyone wearing wreaths took one or more, and with a graceful swing sent it ashore to be caught by the friend most active in catching the same; cheer after cheer went up, tune after tune was played by the band ashore, handkerchief after handkerchief waved to friends now being left behind, and our hearts swelled within us, and tears of gratitude flowed down many a cheek, as we thought of the kindly hearts on the Sandwich Island shores who delighted to honor even the stranger coming among them. We could not refrain from saying, as we thought of the past, "What hath not God wrought!" in these islands, and who can be sufficiently grateful for so much goodness and mercy? We were all glad to have visited Honolulu, and sorry enough not to stay longer; but on we went, and on July 20 we were safely anchored in the harbor of Yokohama. The next morning kind and loved friends from China came off to our vessel, and with them we went ashore. The next day we took the train for Kobe, and in less than twenty-four hours reached Kobe station, where Bros. Towson and Tanaka came quickly forward and welcomed us "home." The ladies of the female school were also there, and all gave us a glad welcome, and made us feel that here even we had kind and loving friends. Since then many a former acquaintance and friend have come to meet us, and we feel sure that we have not done amiss to return to this land and this work.

Bishop Hendrix and party have come, the Conference has been held, appointments have been read, and we start afresh for work in the bounds of the Japan Mission Conference.

Miss Ida Worth, late of the Scarritt Training-school in Kansas City, has arrived and been appointed to work in Kobe.

My heart rejoices, and I trust that many a heart in our home church will not only pray for, but strive to enlarge the work amongst Japanese women and children. The work is the work of God's children, and there must be many who will come to the rescue of this needy portion of the dear Master's vineyard.

Let me thank the dear Epworth Leaguers who have so kindly undertaken the support of Miss Worth; and let me ask our whole church to pray God for a rich blessing upon the Christian work in Japan.

Thanking all for many a kind word and thought, and asking for a continued interest in your prayers,

I am, Sincerely yours,

M. I. LAMBUTH.

"Local Preachers and Evangelists."

MR EDITOR: Several cannons have lately been fired at local preachers and evangelists from your columns, and will you please insert this squib in defense? It seems to me that a great deal of this firing is misdirected and unnecessary. This energy could be used more to the glory of God in calling sinners to repentance and believers to full salvation. But as I read the Discipline and interpret the custom and usage of the church, local preachers have preached at one place only at their pleasure, and have never been under the supervision or direction of pastors. In McTyeire's Manual of Discipline (studied by all local preachers prior to ordination), page 52, I read the following: "Local preachers are not subject to removal; they choose their own fields of labor and remain in one place at their pleasure. Secular pursuits are not regarded as incompatible with that amount of ministerial service which is required of them. Thus supporting themselves, they draw no stipend from the church. They do not come under those obligations which rest on itinerant ministers, who are responsible to the Annual Conference." And again on page 55: "The preacher in charge can not control the appointments of a local preacher, unless they conflict with the plan of the circuit."

The church never has forbidden local preachers from evangelizing. The General Conference has placed no special paragraph in the Discipline authorizing the office, because none was necessary, for, under the already existing laws and usage of the church local preachers who are "not responsible to the Annual Conference," and who are to "remain in one place at their pleasure," can perform that part of the work. Nor is any special enactment necessary as long as they have the prerogatives which they now enjoy under the present existing laws, and have enjoyed from the very beginning. But, for the sake of peace and harmony, it would be well for the next General Conference to insert the word "evangelist" somewhere.

If paragraph 180 of Discipline gives the preacher in charge power to control all religious services in the absence of the presiding elder, then, under this paragraph, he has legal right to invite any local preacher in good standing whom he pleases to come into the bounds of his charge, and battle with him against sin. If it is wrong for a local preacher to leave the pastoral charge where he happens to live to preach the gospel, then the preacher in charge who invited him is particeps criminis, and deserves part of the castigation now applied to local preachers. If it is "disloyal" for a local preacher to hold a service off the circuit where he lives, then it is more "disloyal" for a preacher in charge, for the law that would find out "what amount of service he is able and willing to perform" on the particular circuit holds and binds the pastor there. He is assigned to this special field by the Annual Conference, and "to control the appointments of all services in his charge."

I wonder if an itinerant preacher ever left his appointment and went off and assisted in a service on some other work? Than he was guilty of "disloyalty," and ought to be punished. "It is curious to read what the regular church papers have to say about this aggravating character called "evangelist." Some feel called to account for his existence and presence in their midst, while, at the same time, endeavoring to prove he has no right to be there at all. It is evidently a knotty problem, and with some, judging from an annoyed tone, a vexing question. Meanwhile the evangelist goes on his way saving souls for Christ, and hardly taking time to read what is being written about him, and in many instances serenely unconscious that anything has been said or written about him.

But why this cry, "Stop the local preacher," "Down with evangelists"? It looks significant.

Advancing Views of Heaven.

When I was a boy, I thought of heaven as a great shining city, with vast walls and domes and spires, and with nobody in it except white angels, who were strangers to me. By and by my little brother died, and I thought of a great city, with walls and domes and spires, and a flock of cold unknown angels, and one little fellow I was acquainted with. He was the only one I knew in that country. Then another brother died, and there were two whom I knew. Then my acquaintances began to die, and the number continually grew. But it was not until I had sent one of my little children back to God, that I began to think I had a little interest there myself. A second, a third, a fourth went; and by that time I had so many acquaintances in heaven that I did not see any more walls and domes and spires. I began to think of the residents of the Celestial City. And now so many of my acquaintances have gone there that it sometimes seems to me that I know more in heaven than I do on earth.—Selected.

This Not an Accidental World.

Realize it thoroughly—this is a methodical, not an accidental world. If the housewife turns out a good cake, it is the result of a sound recipe carefully applied. She can not mix the assigned ingredients and fire them for the appropriate time without producing the result. It is not she who has made the cake—it is nature. She brings related things together, sets causes at work; these causes bring about the result. She is not a creator, but an intermediary. She does not expect random causes to produce specific effects—random ingredients would only produce random cakes.

So it is in the making of Christian experiences. Certain lines are followed; certain effects are the result. These effects can not but be the result. But the result can never take place without the previous cause. To expect results without antecedents is to expect cakes without ingredients. That impossibility is precisely the almost universal expectation.—Drummond.

It is not wise to be continually fighting the errors of others. We must not exhaust our strength in killing noxious weeds and grass. We must cultivate the crop. The best way to kill our errors is to cultivate the truth. Some errors are like cane grass; if they are let alone, they die; but if an effort is made to kill them out, they begin to grow. The devil is fond of wrangling. It is his element. There is no weapon which he so much fears as the truth. It makes him shudder.

Do your best loyally and cheerfully, and suffer yourself to feel no anxiety or fear. Your times are in God's hands. He has assigned you your place; he will direct your paths; he will accept your efforts if they be faithful; he will bless your aims if they be for your soul's good.—Frederic W. Farrar.

Many a well-driven nail has been spoiled by an extra blow which knocked the head off. Moral: When you have preached long enough, stop.—Telescope.

Get the pattern of your life from God, and then go about your work and be yourself.—Phillips Brooks.

It was the boast of our Conference at annual meeting at Natchez, 1888, "that Mississippi was first in the foreign field, and that one-third of all the missionaries of the Southern Methodist Church have been from our own loved State."

The General Conference of 1878 authorized the organization of the W. M. Society, M. E. Church, South. Its first annual session, 1879. Note our date.

Extracts from "Brief History of W. M. Society, Mississippi Conference," by Miss Annie Linfield, published December, 1892:

"In 1878, just after the terrible epidemic of yellow fever, the Mississippi Conference held its first session in the town of Haslehurst, and among the visitors of the Conference was the president of the newly organized society of the M. E. Church, South.

"This organization of woman's work for women was something so novel in every respect to our Southern people—its advent had scarcely been heard of by our leading preachers—but she (Mrs. Juliana Hayes) never faltered, and after gathering the inmates and visitors in one household, she repaired to the Presbyterian Church, through the rain, to organize the Conference society. Rev. C. B. Galloway and his wife, Misses Nannie Heard, Olive Watkins, and six or eight others were present. With the help of the presiding elder, Dr. Galloway and several other preachers, the work began to grow. The first year there were reported 9 auxiliaries, with 118 members; the second year 12 auxiliaries and 279 members; 31 subscribers to our own organ, the Woman's Missionary Advocate, then in its first year. Amount sent to treasurer, $183.15. Mrs. Hayes made two visits to our State after that. . . . The juvenile work was organized later on, and proved a grand success."

Officers: Presidents—Mrs. C. B. Galloway, the first president, resigned after the second or third year; Mrs. Col. Nugent served the following year; Mrs. W. L. C. Hunnicutt was elected, but declined to serve; the next year Miss Jimmie Petty was elected, and after serving three years moved out of the Conference; Mrs. I. N. Chatfield served the four succeeding years, and Mrs. Lillie Wimberly was her successor, and resigned at the close of the second year; then Miss Addie Marshall, who is now filling her fourth year. Vice-presidents: Misses Nannie Heard, Olive Watkins, Mesdames Jayne, Mellen, Wimberly, Williams, Chatfield, and at the last annual meeting, Mrs. R. R. Parker. Request was made of her to work specially among the young people and children of the Conference. Recording secretaries: Miss Annie Gibbs, Mrs. Weems, Misses Bessie Fearn, Agnes Chrisman, and elected at last annual meeting, Mrs. A. F. Watkins, who served as secretary pro tem. at the meeting. Mrs. Chatfield served as secretary pro tem. at the session of 1894. Corresponding secretaries: Miss Annie Linfield rendered valuable service until her resignation at the last annual meeting, when Mrs. I. N. Chatfield was elected. In 1886 Conference agent for Woman's Missionary Advocate: Mrs. E. D. Jones—still serves. Editor of items for NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE: 1890, Mrs. A. L. Edgar; 1891, Mrs. E. D. Jones, who still serves.

MISSIONARIES.

Mrs. Mary Isabella Lambuth was married in Hinds county, Miss., in 1851. In March of that year she sailed with her husband, Rev. J. W. Lambuth; landed in Shanghai, China, where she opened a boarding-school, and in later years built up the second, which is now Clopton Training-school for teachers. She had been in charge twenty-four years when the W. F. M. Society, M. E. Church, South, undertook its first work in foreign fields, that of Clopton School in 1876. She supervised this until the close of the year 1884; went to Japan in 1886; now has charge of the Kobe Bible and Training-school for Women, etc.

More items from "Brief History": "The best of all, God owned our work, and in 1887 we sent our first missionary to China, Miss Bettie Hughes (Meridian, Miss). The next to give herself (though not known to the public, but none the less appreciated) was Mrs. Cornelia Sharbrough Anderson, of Wesson, Miss. She went as a matron to Laredo Seminary, where she is now indispensable. The next to go was Miss Mary McClelland, of Whitworth College, to China in 1888. The last offering was our Clara Chrisman (Beauregard, Miss.), whose sad death has done more good than her life could, we must believe."

Miss Haygood has been enthusiastic in her praise of the fidelity and efficiency of the following noble women: Miss Bettie Hughes had charge of the Clopton School, with other work, when she yielded to entreaties and advice to come home for recuperation. On her return she took up the work of the day-schools, twelve in number, at one time, that Miss McClelland had left when she resigned, at the close of her five years in 1893, to be married to Rev. M. B. Hill.

Miss Loohie Rankin, in report: "When I am in Kading, Mrs. Hill takes some of my afternoon classes in Nantaiang, and gives the entire school much-needed foreign supervision during my absence."

Miss McNemar is making rapid progress in her studies at East Mississippi Female College, and is developing into a most beautiful Christian character.

Miss —— is now ready to enter the training-school, and we are endeavoring to obtain a scholarship for her by securing 600 subscribers to the Evangel.

MRS. E. D. JONES.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Heslep R. Tucker, P. E., Booneville, Miss., Sept. 27: "Over 1,000 conversions have been reported to me in the Corinth district, and the work is still going on."

Rev. J. B. Cassity, Minden, La., Sept. 26: "Have just closed a meeting near Pine Grove Church. Quite a number of conversions and twenty-seven accessions. Rev. H. W. May was with me the most of the time. Bro. Robt. Vaughan was with me two days."

Rev. T. J. Miller, Sicou's Creek: "At home on a furlough. The last fight I was in was on the Hillsboro circuit at Hillsboro. We won a great victory there. Took from the old boy thirty servants and added some to the service of the Lord. Interest was high. Bro. C. C. Evans, their pastor, is a noble soldier. May God's blessings rest on him and his!"

Rev. C. P. Emery, P. C., Lumberton, Miss., Sept. 30: "We have just held our fourth Quarterly Conference. This charge is in excellent condition in every way. All the finances in proper shape. The presiding elder and preacher in charge nearly paid up in full for the year, and all the collections ordered by Conference either paid in cash or secured by good subscriptions. The contract for our two-thousand-dollar church has been let, work to begin at once. The pastor held a meeting at Poplarville recently, lasting five days, which resulted in the revival of the church, and some accessions to the same."

Rev. J. M. Cowan, Durant, Miss., Sept. 25: "Through the kindness of the good people of Mt. Carmel I am at Castalian Springs. My health has been very bad since the first of July; have had severe attack of nephritic colic about every seven or ten days; was not able to preach at all in July, but, with the assistance of Bro. Langford and Dr. Featherston, was able to hold three protracted meetings during August. Thanks to these brethren! Please allow me to ask, through your paper, the prayers of my brethren of the Mississippi Conference and of the church for my restoration to health."

Rev. W. D. Bass, Davis, I. T., Sept. 24: "We have just closed a powerful meeting in the nice town of Davis. Business men closed their doors, attended church, gave themselves to God and joined the church. Our pastor, Bro. Belcher, and the Presbyterians united their forces. About 75 members to the different churches are among the visible results of the meeting. Most of them joined our own dear church. These are real intelligent State people, and rank among the first-class in all respects. This will be made a station at Conference, which convenes in the city of Ardmore, last of October. Thank God for a successful year's work."

Rev. S. S. Keener, Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 24: "On Sunday night, Sept. 22, we closed a very successful revival service held at Second Methodist Church of Baton Rouge. Rev. J. J. Smiley conducted the services, which commenced on Monday, the ninth. Seventeen joined the church. Twenty were converted, and five backsliders were reclaimed. The meeting was one of great power. Bro. Smiley did excellent preaching—searching, fervent, and very spiritual. There was no manipulation or clap-trap working of the audience, but strong and straight issues were made for all and everyone to seek salvation, the personal knowledge of conversion. To God be all the praise! We heartily commend Bro. Smiley to the brethren, if they wish assistance in conducting a revival."

Rev. W. R. Blakemore, Knox Point, La., Sept. 9: "I am acquainted with a good many of the preachers of the Methodist Church, South. I love them all. I am a preacher of, or in, the C. M. E. Church. We are trying to patronise you and your church. We are trying to preach like you. I want to tell you that we are not fooling with politics either. Our church is clear on that line. We have four church schools—one at Jackson, Tenn., one at Augusta, Ga., one in Arkansas, and one in Texas. Also we are trying to run one or two papers, so you see we are trying to do something for ourselves. If you help us as you have done, we hope to do much more in the near future. I am doing what I can for the Master's kingdom. We desire your prayers. Inclosed you will find 75 cents, for which send my book."

Rev. W. M. Young, Pleasant Grove circuit, Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, Oct. 1: "We have seven churches on this charge. I have just finished my meetings. We have had good meetings throughout the charge, with 35 converts and 20 accessions. We had a sweeping revival that brought about one hundred into the church last year, so we did not have the material under the influence of the church this year. But still our meetings have done great good in building up and settling people in the faith of the church. We have stirring times here with the second-blessing holiness people, some of whom are our best people, most of whom are fast being poisoned against the regular pastorate and authorities that be in the church. This is a serious crisis for this church. Pray for us. God bless you, Mr. Editor, and the ADVOCATE."

Rev. A. J. Jones, Pleasant Hill, Miss., Sept. 22: "Have just finished my round of protracted meetings, which in some instances have been very successful. Many souls saved and brought into the church. We wish to acknowledge some very much appreciated and valuable help rendered by the following brethren who very kindly came to our assistance: Revs. W. S. Shipman, M. D. Fly, W. S. Lagrone, T. W. Dye, Jas. Porter, and Ben P. Jacc. Would also say our presiding elder, Rev. H. C. Morehead, did some valuable work while with us holding our third Quarterly Conference in the beginning of our meeting at Lewisburg. Regretted that he could not stay with us longer. We believe that much of the good work done in these services will abide. The church is on a higher plane. We are moving up along on many lines. Surely God is doing great things for us. To him be all the glory. Pray for us."

Rev. J. N. Ware, Waynesboro circuit, Mississippi Conference: "We are just half through with our meetings (six in all). About sixty or seventy conversions, forty-four sanctifications and forty accessions to the church up to date. When we get through we hope to report as many more. Our Sunday-schools at most all the churches are in full, also our prayer meetings. Most all who have families hold family prayer and pray in public. Our women pray as well, or better, than the men. The Lord is doing a glorious work for us. Praise his blessed name! Rev. C. H. Ellis, of New Iberia, La., has been with me in two of my meetings, and did us some good preaching, and our people are loving him very much. Bro. Ellis is one of the best altar workers I ever saw; clear in his preaching and Methodistic all the way through. He has the church at heart; and his fight all the way through is sin. Bro. D. C. Farmer, L. P., has rendered us valuable services, and is putting in good time with Bros. Hunsley, Moore and myself. To God be all the praise!"

Rev. J. V. Penn, Vossburg, Miss., Sept. 25: "On July 28 Rev. Dr. J. W. Harmon dedicated our new church at Goodwater, five miles east of town. It is the prettiest church in this country outside of the towns, and it is charmingly situated in the midst of a superb grove. The edifice is in modern style, arched ceiling, pulpit recess, stained glass windows, vestibule entrance and tower 54 feet high. The lamps, carpet and tasty pulpit furnishings were purchased by the ladies. After a splendid sermon from Dr. Harmon I raised $160 to finish payment. In the meeting which followed the Lord graciously blest the generous, hospitable and enterprising people. Souls were converted while the Word was being delivered and 16 joined the church. . . . At New Hope, in August, Bro. J. N. Ware assisted me in a fine revival. Many were reclaimed and converted, some sanctified, 15 accessions. Vossburg enjoyed a week's meeting under Mrs. M. M. Snell and Rev. F. M. Keen. The congregations at times were overwhelming, and the scenes and incidents thrilling. Many reclaimed and converted and sanctified. Several accessions. The influence of the meeting extended through the surrounding country. Forty-one accessions to date. Praise the Lord! Parsonage repaired, church built, and $1,625 raised to date. Prospects bright for a full report at Conference."

YAZOO DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Fourth round begins auspiciously. We did not hold the Conference at Hattiesburg at the appointed time, on account of the absence of the pastor, Bro. H. D. Howell, who was on the sad mission of attending the funeral of a noble son at Jackson, Tenn. Hattiesburg Methodism is moving right along under the leadership of as loyal an itinerant Methodist preacher as ever owned a pair of saddle-bags, Discipline, hymn book, and Bible.

There have been about 40 accessions to our church here this Conference year. The Baptist pastor, Rev. Mr. Hall, who has been here for a number of years, says that the Methodist Church is more flourishing now than it has been at any time during his pastorate here. The financial ability of the church has been considerably strengthened. The prayer meetings are about as well attended as they are in any church of which I have had observation or supervision. The Sunday-school is in fair condition, but not so good as might be desired. Congregations are uniformly good, but not so large as they ought to be. The collections ordered by the Annual Conference and the salaries of preacher in charge and presiding elder will be paid, I think, in full.

Last Saturday and Sunday were delightfully and, I trust, profitably spent on the Purvis circuit, Rev. C. F. Emery, P. C. Reports were flattering both on the spiritual and financial condition. A very beautiful adjustment to all lines of church work is here presented. Plans are being perfected for the speedy erection of a handsome new Methodist Church at Lumberton, Miss.

Rev. G. W. Huff, our indefatigable pastor at Vancleave, Miss., writes: "I have received 33 members since the Quarterly Conference. No other help except the local preachers." Methodist pastors and local preachers, under law, can do the work that God wants done Methodistically anywhere.

ST. TAMMANY CAMP MEETING.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens, of New Orleans, (Rev. W. A. Clark, P. C.), opened the exercises of the meeting for 1895 on the evening of Sept. 20. Dr. Sawyer, Revs. F. N. and F. S. Parker, and W. G. Roberts were the preachers for the occasion. The pastor and your scribe were left to hold up the banner during the two last days of the meeting.

The "St. Tammany Farmer," a local paper, says it was the "best meeting ever held" at the camp grounds.

It is a well-known and a most deplorable fact that the influence of a few misguided brethren was thrown against the success of the meeting, and found its expression in public criticism of both the manner and doctrines of those who were the managers of the meeting. The church was compared—in public conversation—to Babylon, and denounced as unworthy of the recognition of Christian men. These sacrilegious views were not only tolerated by, at least, one of our own preachers—not a worker in the meeting—by his association and co-operation with the utterer of these sentiments. Such antagonism served to stay the tide of success up to the Sunday services, when a deeper interest began to show itself.

At the close of the Sunday evening service such a move as was witnessed this writer has not seen in an experience of more than thirty-five years. Out of a congregation of between five hundred and six hundred people more than half of them (some close observers say, nearly all of them) came forward pledging themselves to begin then, and in all the future, live for God and heaven. There was no enthusiasm, but a deep, quiet swell seemed to raise the whole mass of humanity out of self and up to the Rock of refuge. It was a wonderful moving of the waters. Evidently the angel had come down to "trouble" them.

Bro. Clark and his charming "help-meet," though but novices in the itinerancy, are in high favor with their people, and have abundant cause for rejoicing over the results of the meeting at St. Tammany Camp Ground for 1895.

Notwithstanding so much mental work since I came over here, I have gained much strength, and will leave here this evening for the Epworth Conference in your city, and thence on Saturday to Simsport, where on Sunday, Oct. 6, I am booked for the dedication of Bro. Woodward's new church. J. A. PARKER.

A Great Chance to Make Money.

I want to tell you of my wonderful success. Being a poor girl and needing money badly, I tried the Dish Washer business and have cleared over $300 every month. It is more money than I ever had before and I can't help telling you about it, for I believe any person can do as well as I have if they will only try. Dish Washers sell on sight; every lady wants one. The Mound City Dish Washer Co., St. Louis, Mo., will give you all necessary instructions, so you can begin work at once. The Dish Washer does splendid work; you can wash and dry the dishes in two or three minutes without puting your hands in the water at all. Try this business and let us hear how you succeed. All the teachers in the world can not make a scholar of a boy who is determined not to study. And no amount of preaching will make a Christian of the man who will not believe.

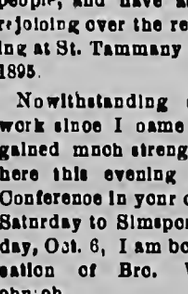
Scrofula in the Neck

The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:



Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 9 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

A Russian Philanthrop'st.

The newspapers have recently directed the attention of the civilized world to a great philanthropist hitherto unknown outside of his own country—Jermakoff, of Russia. He began life amid poverty and hardship, but by industry, enterprise and tact built up an immense fortune. His first act of benevolence on a large scale was the purchase of the freedom of all the serfs of his native town at a cost of one hundred and twenty thousand dollars. A little later he fed at his own expense for some time a large number of peasants in a famine-stricken region. This act of benevolence he has since repeated several times. In charities of various kinds he has expended in the last twenty years five millions of dollars. Here is a solution of the labor-versus-capital problem. Whenever capital consecrates itself to Christ, and expends itself for the amelioration of the condition of the toiling masses, strikes will cease, and the socialistic agitator, like Othello, will find his occupation gone. Men need not go further than the New Testament to find a solution of the gravest problems of nineteenth-century civilization. All have not millions to give, but all may possess the spirit of Jermakoff, and may give according to their means.

The Epworth League Conference.

The Louisiana Epworth League Conference was held, according to appointment, in Louisiana Avenue Church, Oct. 4 to 6. Bating a few changes made necessary by the absence of some of the speakers, the programme was carried out as announced in the ADVOCATE.

To give a critical notice of each item of the programme would require more space than we have at our command. To make honorable mention of a few of the addresses and say nothing of the rest would be an ungracious task. Suffice it to say that this was an instance of a good programme well carried out. The themes were various, and the treatment of them no less so. There were three sessions a day.

At the night sessions the church was filled to its utmost capacity. The singing, under the leadership of Mr. Adams, of the Carondelet choir, was superb. There was the utmost harmony, good feeling and enthusiasm throughout the entire Conference.

It is to be hoped that the League movement will spread rapidly throughout the State, so that at the next Conference all sections of the State will be represented.

An Incident and Its Lessons.

A short time since a Wild West show was given at East Liverpool, Ohio. Since then the boys of the town have been playing Indian. Their last performance was the tying of one of their comrades to a stake and burning him to death. This incident has a lesson. Children are much impressed by what they see. They should, therefore, not be made familiar with vice, especially in its attractive forms. Let a prize fight take place in a town, and for months afterwards fisticuffs will be the prevailing sport among the boys. Our readers will remember that two deaths occurred in this city, some months ago, as the result of pugilistic encounters in imitation of our last prize-fight. And as with the prize-fight, so with various other spectacular performances. They are demoralizing in the extreme. Satan does no better work for the advancement of his kingdom than when he prevails upon Christian parents to give their children carte blanche in the matter of attending public amusements. There are in our day public exhibitions which can to a large extent undo in an hour the work of parents and Sabbath-school teachers for months. This applies also to literature no less than to amusements. Thousands of our youth are being corrupted by what they read. Much of the popular fiction of the day is exceedingly pernicious; and not fiction alone. There are other realms of literature equally fraught with peril to good morals.

A few years since a number of small boys in a certain city organized themselves into a club for the purpose of committing crimes of various sorts. They had been reading a life of Jesse James. This is one instance out of many that might be cited to show the effect of such literature upon the juvenile mind. Let a boy of tender years read a book, either fact or fiction, which makes vice attractive, and his whole after life may be affected thereby. Parents should exercise a rigid censorship over the literature that finds its way into their homes. Just at this point there is culpable negligence among our people. We have seen in Christian homes books which no young person should be allowed to read. These books had been read by the young people of the household of both sexes, while the parents had not even examined them sufficiently to be aware of their true character. Parents need to be aroused. There are no obligations more sacred than those involved in the parental relation. It is not a light or trivial task to mould and fashion young minds that are destined to live as long as God shall live.

The End of Pugilism.

There was great rejoicing in the ranks of hoodlumism three weeks ago when a Texas court decided that there was no law in that State against prize-fighting. This jubilation, however, was short-lived. Gov. Culberson called a special session of the Legislature to meet Oct. 1. In two days a rigid anti-prize-fight law was enacted. The Florida Athletic Club, it is said, had expended nearly fifty thousand dollars in making preparations for the fight which had been announced to take place at Dallas. This fight, if it takes place at all, will take place probably in Indian Territory, on an Indian reservation—a fit place for such an exhibition of barbarism. This Texas law sounds the death-knell of pugilism in the United States. If we mistake not, every State in the Union has now outlawed the brutal thing. All honor to Gov. Culberson and the Texas Legislature!

The receipts of the United States Treasury are now in excess of the expenditures—the first time such a thing has happened in two years.

A Pioneer.

At the recent meeting of the Mississippi State Board of Health license to practice medicine was granted to Miss Rosa Wiss, of Meridian. Dr. Wiss is the first Mississippi woman who ever applied for a license to practice medicine. We have known Miss Rosa since her girlhood, having been her pastor for four years. She is a woman of fine intellectual endowments, and an earnest, consecrated Christian—a thoroughly admirable woman in every respect. In early girlhood she chose medicine as her profession, and, though many obstacles lay in her path which to others would have seemed insurmountable, she never faltered in her purpose, but pursued the even tenor of her way with an energy that amounts to real heroism. How she managed, with limited means, to secure, first, a literary, and then a professional education, would make a story full of inspiration to aspiring youth of both sexes. She is a graduate of the Industrial Institute and College at Columbus, Miss., and of the Woman's Medical College at Philadelphia. She will locate in Meridian. We congratulate the medical profession of Mississippi upon such an accession to their ranks. We have long believed that women are better fitted for a certain kind of practice than men, and that such practice ought to be relegated to them. We are glad to learn that this opinion is entertained by the members of the Mississippi State Board of Health, who not only granted this license cheerfully, but expressed themselves as delighted with the movement in which Dr. Wiss is a pioneer. She will make a specialty of diseases of women and children.

An Episcopal Decision.

We gave notice two weeks ago that an appeal had been taken by Rev. A. J. Jarrell, pastor of First Church, St. Louis, from a decision rendered by his presiding elder, Dr. B. M. Messick, on a point of law. It devolved upon Bishop Galloway, who presided at the St. Louis Conference, to render a decision. The question submitted to Dr. Messick was this: "Is it improper and illegal for a local preacher to adopt and devote himself to the work of a general evangelist?" Dr. Messick's reply was as follows: "It surely is; involving both neglect of the Discipline, prescribed duties of the local preacher, and insubordination to the General Conference, which has unequivocally refused to recognize the office and work of the evangelist in the church."

Bishop Galloway's decision is given in the following language:

The ruling is not sustained, with the understanding that the local preacher has not failed or refused to perform the services required by his pastor, whose duty it is to draw up a plan by which his (their) labors shall be regulated.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY,
President St. Louis Annual Conference.

This decision is subject to revision at the next meeting of the college of Bishops, to be held next May.

Millsaps College.

Our readers will read with pleasure the following jubilant note of Dr. Murrah concerning the opening of Millsaps:

The fourth session of Millsaps College began this morning under the most propitious circumstances. A large audience of students and citizens assembled in the college chapel, and were addressed by Presiding Elder Mounger, Pastors Watkins and West, Dr. Cooper, and President Fitzhugh, of Belhaven College. The students have not yet been enrolled, but a large attendance is assured. All the members of the faculty are in place, and the work of the session starts off most auspiciously. W. B. MURRAH.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 25, 1895.

At Natchez.

While Sister Lyons and her coadjutors were occupying the tripod we made a brief visit to Natchez. We made headquarters during our stay with Rev. W. E. Ballard. Bro. Ballard's health has undergone little change in the last twelve months. He is confined to his room and most of the time to his bed. He bears his protracted affliction with that Christian patience and resignation which would be expected of him by those who knew him in health. We spent some delightful hours at the parsonage, where we found Bro. Lewis and his family in good health and fine spirits. We met old friends and parishioners too numerous to mention. It was a pleasure to us to occupy the pulpit of Jefferson Street on Sunday, albeit it would have been a greater pleasure to hear the pastor preach one of those strong, earnest, spiritual sermons for which he is noted. Jefferson Street has lost heavily this year by the removal of leading members to New Orleans and elsewhere, but is well-organized and working with her old-time vigor and energy. Our stay of four days was a most delightful one.

The Woman's Edition.

We tender hearty congratulations to our sisters of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society upon the success of their newspaper venture. They will realize probably about seven hundred dollars—a sum almost sufficient to pay for the lot on which to erect the church which they propose to build as a domicile for the Tchoupitoulas Mission. A good day's work for the Master's kingdom will be done when that house of worship is erected.

A New Book.

PUSHING TO THE FRONT; OR, SUCCESS UNDER DIFFICULTIES. A book of inspiration and encouragement to all who are struggling for self-elevation along the paths of knowledge and of duty. By Orison Swett Marden. Illustrated with twenty-four fine portraits of eminent persons. Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. 416 Pages. Price, $1.50.

Through the courtesy of the publishers the above-named work lies on our table. It is one of the books of the Epworth League Course in the M. E. Church. In his preface the author states that his aim in writing the book is "to encourage, inspire and stimulate boys and girls who long to be somebody and do something in the world, but feel that they have no chance in life." He also says that "the power of an ideal book for youth should lie in its richness of concrete examples as the basis of character-building; in its uplifting, energizing, suggestive force, more than in its arguments; that it should be free from materialism, on the one hand, and from cant on the other; and that it should abound in stirring examples of men and women who have brought things to pass." This gives an idea of the character of the work. It is an exceedingly valuable publication. It belongs to the same class with "Captains of Industry"—Smiles. In the whole realm of literature we know of no better book of its class to put into the hands of an aspiring youth. It is a book, too, that may be read with profit by persons in mature life. Moreover, unlike many of the books of the present day, it will bear re-reading time and again. We predict for it an immense sale. The M. E. Church did well to put it into the hands of her youth.

There is a rapidly growing feeling in all parts of the United States that the United States ought to recognize the Cuban insurgents as a belligerent power. In many places public meetings have been held and rousing speeches made with a view to influencing the government in this matter. The South Carolina Constitutional Convention, by an unanimous vote, passed a resolution calling upon the government to recognize the Cubans as belligerents at as early a day as practicable.

The increase of good fellowship between the North and the South by the commemoration of the battles at Chattanooga and the opening of the Atlanta Exposition last week is very pleasing to all who love and prize the Union of the States. Said Rev. Dr. Crowell, in his remarks at the Ostorara Anniversary: "I was concerned about the few who took a religious newspaper. I wished to preach to an intelligent congregation, and so I went into the pulpit one Sunday morning and strongly urged their subscribing to a certain paper, and designated one to receive subscriptions. After a time I inquired of him how many had been received, and was answered 'three.' So I harnessed my horse to the buggy and visited every family that did not take a religious paper, and as a result secured one hundred and eight subscribers."—Presbyterian Journal.

We invite special attention to our new sewing machine offer. This machine is a most excellent one in every respect. We have never made a better premium offer. Let no one confonnd this machine with any one previously offered. It is a different machine altogether. Take notice that we prepay freight and guarantee entire satisfaction.

Notice.

Those who want Bibles at our premium rates would do well to order at once, as our offer may be withdrawn in a few weeks.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronounoing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Oct., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on this page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Oct., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for it—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The Advocate and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Bible Cause.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences of the M. E. Church, South—

DEAR BRETHREN: As the month of October is the time set apart by your respective Conferences for taking the collection for the Bible cause, I, as the representative of the American Bible Society in Louisiana and Mississippi, beg leave hereby to urge that an earnest effort be made during the month to secure for said cause a liberal offering from each congregation in the two States. The whole world is now open to the circulation of the Holy Scriptures, and it is earnestly desired on the part of those engaged in the great work of Bible distribution that lovers of God and his Word will bestir themselves and do all in their power to help put a copy of the precious treasure in every home and habitation of man. With $526,824.26 the American Bible Society circulated during the past year 403,434 Bibles, 580,754 New Testaments and 595,582 portions of the Sacred Word.

From these figures it is very evident that it costs but little, comparatively speaking, to circulate the Word of God, the great luminary of truth, which alone can truly enlighten and save the world. Then let all good people come up to the help of the Lord in the great work of printing and circulating his Word in the earth.

Let every individual, as well as every congregation, make a liberal offering for this purpose. For want of money urgent demands both in home and foreign fields, and especially in the latter, are going unsupplied. Will the good people of this enlightened age and of this Christian land allow the poor and benighted of earth to plead in vain for the Word of Life? God forbid!

Money can be sent either to Wm. Fanike, Bible House, Astor Place, New York, or to the undersigned, at 725 Camp street, New Orleans.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE DAY OF PENTECOST.
(Acts II, 1-41.)

Pentecost, a Greek compound, signifies the fiftieth day. The Jews celebrated Pentecost in commemoration of the divine transmission of the Decalogue through Moses. Said transmission took place on the fiftieth day after exit from Egypt. On one of these commemorative days—when the day of Pentecost was fully come—the Holy Spirit was poured out upon the disciples under circumstances no less astounding than significant.

Practically applying this historic incident, the interrogation is in place, Can the effusion of the Holy Spirit be acquired now as of yore, regardless of time? Yes, most assuredly. But necessary prerequisites have to be attended to.

1. Previous to the outpouring of the Holy Spirit the disciples and adherers were in the house of God on the Lord's day. An example for us to follow.

(1) It is our duty on Sunday to attend divine service.

(2) Strange, that so much "Sunday-sickness" prevails among us.

(3) Hunting, fishing, going on pleasure excursions, etc., on Sunday is responsible.

2. They, the disciples and friends, were all with one accord in one place.

(1) Christ came into the world to bring peace to mankind. Peace in state, church and family.

(2) Discord in music grates painfully on the ear. In church discord prevents revival. Too many parties factions, cliques among us.

(3) Disapprove of the policy of ignoring existing difficulties among us. Should be publicly investigated. Wrong-doers exposed. The faithful commanded. Amputation is better than blood-poisoning and death.

3. Previous to the wondrous effusion of the Holy Spirit, the disciples and associates were engaged in prayer.

(1) Adoration, offer of thanks, preservation of our petitions to God, prayer, is the Christian's loved employ.

(2) In prayer the soul communes with God. With God, the author and conserver of all physical and moral law. With God, to whom the great is small and the small great. With God, who answers prayer.

(3) Said Mary Stuart, the benighted Roman Catholic, that she feared the prayers of John Knox more than all other threatening ills.

Oh, for a Pentecost among us! Heed the prerequisites!

League Doin.

The Louisiana Epworth League Conference, which met in Louisiana Avenue Church, Oct. 3-6, was an eminent success. Attendance large. Result glorious.

Leaguers from abroad are loud in praising the hospitality of New Orleans Methodists. No trouble in finding comfortable homes for our guests.

A permanent State Epworth League has been organized, with Bro. W. M. Sloan, of Shreveport, as president.

The next Annual Conference of the State League will convene in New Orleans in May next. May will suit better than any other month.

A fund of $180 was raised for payment of field secretaries to assist the preachers throughout the State in organizing Leagues.

The New Orleans Epworth League Union, whose president is Bro. John T. Crebbin, and Miss Addie S. McKnight, secretary, will convene in our church at Carrollton to-night.

The choir, so ably led by Bro. T. O. Adams, and which assisted so cheerfully in making our late State Conference all that could be desired, will attend and lead the song service at meeting of the Union in Carrollton.

The leaguers were delighted in having so many eminent divines attend the recent State Conference in New Orleans. Among them were Bishop Keener and Drs. Jas. A. Parker.

Help Wanted.

Bro. R. A. Sibley, of Trenton, Miss., has lost his horse, and is not able to buy another. Any amount sent to him, at the above-named place, will be thankfully received. Let the preachers and lay members of the Mississippi Conference send in a liberal contribution at once to one of the fathers of our Conference to buy him a horse.

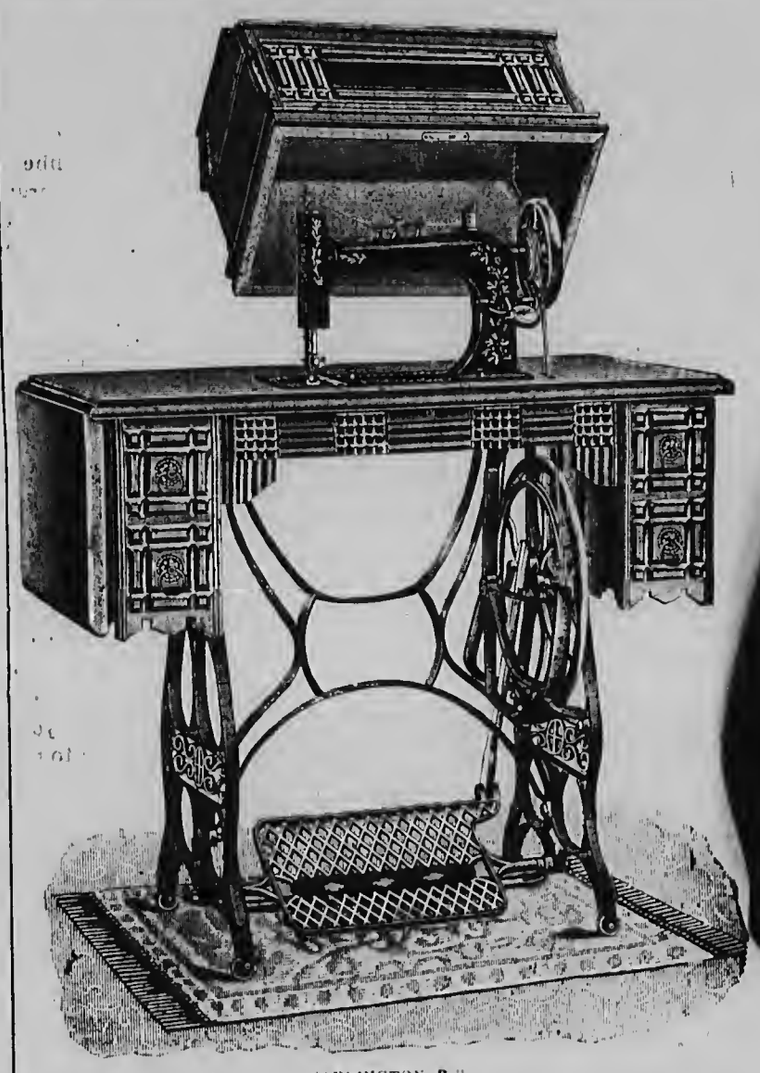
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



"ARLINGTON B."

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish, has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clear.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

RECOGNITION IN HEAVEN.

Shall we know our friends in heaven—
Kindred souls while here below?
Will the pleasure there be given
Recognizing those we know?
Yes! the Scriptures plainly telleth,
We shall know as we are known,
Songs of gracious welcome sweeteth,
Sung by seraphs round the throne.

See yon happy mother finding,
One by one her children dear;
Family ties forever binding,
None are missing—all are here!
Wife and husband fondly meeting,
No more sorrow, death or pain;
Brothers, sisters, gladly greeting,
Nevermore to part again!

The Value of Money.

The average American girl has practically no idea of the value of money. It is one of the most discouraging signs of the times to see the manner in which our young women spend their pocket-money. And nothing in this wide world keeps so many young men from marrying as the constant proof they see of the lightness in which our girls value money. Money is spent upon trifles as if silver and bank-notes grew on trees. A dollar has not its real value in the eyes of one girl out of a hundred. Where the saving instinct exists it is simply employed as a means to making possible a larger expenditure in the near future. The result is, that our young women get false notions of living and its cost, and they consider themselves abused, in a great many cases, when upon marriage they must be content with less than in their father's home. The popular notion with the young people of to-day is that they must start where their fathers left off. Our young men have only a truer sense of the value of money because they are compelled to earn it, and where the money comes hard its value is better impressed. But even among the most moderate classes in this country it is simply amazing to see the extent to which money is spent—not only spent, but wasted, and the absolute disregard to make provision for "a rainy day" which exists. The great trouble is that we have been educated in this country too much to accept luxuries as necessities, and when they are beyond our reach we cavil at fate.

In European countries all this is different. The English, whose silly traits we like to ape so much, but whose good qualities we overlook, are among the most thrifty nations in the world. The English workingman, as a rule, puts aside a portion of his earnings. But when the average American workingman earns a dollar he spends a dollar and prides himself on the fact that he can pay his debts. The French workingman does a little more than that. He lives so that he can pay his debts and have something over. Nor has he any the less comfort. One need only go into the home of a French workingman to see how comfortable he lives. And there is generally a savings book in his possession. The result is, that, as a people, the French suffer less from panics than any other people on the globe. Because habit of thrift is universal, everybody provides for the morrow. Last year the French savings banks had more than eight million depositors, and the amount of their deposits exceeded eight hundred million dollars. And this large sum was made up almost entirely of small amounts. The French father is thrifty himself and teaches the value of thrift to his children. And the lesson is taught them with their A B C's.

We ought to do this in America. Our children must be taught a different value of money than they at present have. And the beginning must be made by ceasing to keep up this nefarious practice of living up to our incomes. We must live this side of them. The French go on the theory that twenty-five per cent. of one's income must be saved. This is a good percentage. All of us can do this if we will only make up our minds to do it. And if our schools could be induced to copy the French idea of giving bank-books of small amounts to their scholars as rewards of merit, it would be infinitely better than the present system of giving books or medals. The American child needs to learn the lesson of saving. And the school teacher can do much to impress this lesson.—Quiver.

The Oil of Life.

The small, sweet courtesies of life smooth the thorny road and pour oil on the troubled waters. We are all burden-bearers of one sort or another. Every back knows what it is to be sore because of the weight it has to carry, and feet are weary because of the roughness of the way. Kind words are to burdened lives what oil is to the complicated piece of machinery—that which makes continued motion possible and pleasant.

True courtesy has been defined as that gentle refinement and grace of manner displayed towards others, which springs not so much from polite culture as from the sterling qualities of a genuine and well-regulated heart. It is the outcome of a universal and comprehensive love, the spirit of chivalry combined with the utmost delicacy of feeling. The late Dr. Dale described it to be the graceful and beautiful vesture of Christian charity. M. Joubert speaks of it as "the flower of human nature" in his charming Pensees, arguing that its fragrance constitutes the benediction of living. Courtesy is distinct from mere politeness. One is a thing of the heart; the other may be a mere trick of etiquette or expediency. Courtesy is the manners of the heart, and finds its root in the respect due to our fellows in virtue of their manhood and because of the tenderness of the bond of brotherhood which links us to them. Politeness may be deliberately adopted to serve self-interest, or it may be the conventional civility demanded by the canons of society—a lifting of the hat, a touching of the glove, a leaving of cards at the door; or it may be a free and easy geniality which involves no thoughtfulness, reverence or self-sacrifice. True courtesy must always carry in it something of the spirit of Jesus Christ, who, not without good cause, is called the Perfect Gentleman. Wherever he went and whatever he did, he always manifested a winning and thoughtful graciousness, alike to his friends at Bethany, the multitudes that waited on his ministry, and the outcasts who were stirred to nobler endeavor by the considerateness of his sympathy. The Master sweetened life by the touch of perfect courtesy, and to imitation of him all Christians are urged by the appeal of his example.

Courtesy is the oil of life in the home. Some men are pleasant everywhere but at the fireside. In business and at the social gathering their smiles are sweet and their words honeyed, but so soon as they enter their own house they are blunt, snappish, and disagreeable.—Zion's Herald.

Shoemaker, by the Grace of God.

A young stripling of a minister, who had just come to be pastor in the town, went down to talk to Hiram, because he had heard that he was a spiritual man, and said, "Mr. Golf," and Mr. Golf said: "Don't call me Mr. Golf; call me Hiram."

"Well, Hiram," said the minister, "I have come to talk with you about the things of God, and I am very glad a man can be in a humble occupation and yet be a godly man."

The shoemaker stopped and looked up at him and said: "Don't call this occupation humble?"

The minister thought he had made a mistake, and he said: "Excuse me, I didn't mean to reflect on what you do for a living."

The man replied: "You didn't hurt me, but I was afraid you might have hurt the Lord Jesus Christ. I believe the making of that shoe is just as holy a thing as your making a sermon. I believe that when I come to stand before the throne of God, he is going to say: 'What kind of shoes did you make down on earth?' and he might pick out this very pair, in order to let me look at them in the blazing light of the great white throne; and he is going to say to you, 'What kind of sermons did you make?' and you will have to show him one of your sermons. Now, if I make better shoes than you make sermons, I will have a better place in the kingdom of God."—Exchange.

Good Manners Are Home Made.

Children must be taught what the parents wish them to know. Teach them truthful, gentle ways, and they will be true and gentle. If a boy hears bad language from his father, he will repeat it just as certainly as he has a tongue in his mouth; and if a little girl hears her mother gossip, she will gossip the moment she meets a playmate. People who devour their food like cattle must not expect their children to have nice table manners. Gentlemen and good women are home-made. There is nothing on earth for which one ought to be more thankful than for having been brought up in the atmosphere of a pure home. Such a home may be narrow and even hard; it may be deficient in material comforts. A man as sturdy as an oak once said: "I was the son of poor parents, and from my youth up was inured to self-denial and hardships; but I do not remember ever to have heard a word from the lips of either my father or my mother that was not as it should be." Better such recollections than a great inheritance.—Mary Porter Langley.

Julius Didn't Know Much.

Julius Cæsar was considered a great man, and so he was. But he had his limitations, and some unknown writer gives a few illustrations. He never rode on a 'bus in his life; he never spoke into a telephone; he never sent a telegram; he never entered a railway train; he never read a newspaper; he never viewed his troops through a field glass; never read an advertisement; he never used patent medicine; he never cornered the wheat market; he never crossed the Atlantic; he never was in a machine shop; he never went to a roller skating rink; he never controlled a manufacturing company; he never dictated a letter to a typewriter girl; he never invested in railway stock; he never played a game of billards; he never saw an electric light; he never listened to a phonograph; he never posted a letter; he never had his photograph taken.—Scientific American.

The newspapers never reported a more pitiful story than the following: A wretched mother dropped dead about four weeks ago at the feet of her son who has been a burden and a sorrow to her. This son, who was thirty years old, instead of helping his mother, spent his wages for whisky. At last the mother concluded that committing him as an habitual drunkard might lead to his reformation. She was called to the witness stand to swear to the complaint, but the strain was too great for her, and she fell dead with the words on her lips: "It's breaking my heart." No orator, living or dead, ever delivered a temperance lecture equal to this in pathos and eloquence.—Exchange.

"Abstain!"

A school-boy of Australia put his youthful enthusiasm into an effective essay on total abstinence, as follows:

"I abstain from alcoholic drinks, because if I would excel as a cricketer, Grace says, 'abstain;' as a walker, Weston says 'abstain;' as an oarsman, Hanlon says, 'abstain;' as a swimmer, Webb says, 'abstain;' as a missionary, Livingstone says, 'abstain;' as a doctor, Clark says, 'abstain;' as a preacher, Farrar says, 'abstain.' Asylums, prisons and workhouses repeat the cry, 'Abstain!'"—Exchange.

Sins against Health.

The burdens and anxieties which we compel others to bear because of our thoughtlessness and selfishness are among the sins of which we rarely repent, because we so rarely recognize them. Many conscientious people often overwork, or through disobedience of the laws of health bring on illness which imposes burdens on others for a greater or less period of time, and see the errors of their ways only when it is too late; for when physical suffering calls a halt on the activities, they are forced to consider others. The selfishness of good and intelligent people is hard to understand and hard to bear, because there seems no reason for the blindness which is leading them to the personal disaster which compels others to suffer both in body and mind—in mind because of sympathy with suffering; in body because of the exhaustion which is the result of anxiety and care, as well as of physical weariness. Wives will ignore every symptom which indicate exhaustion, refuse to rest for lack of time, and yet know that at no distant time they will be laid aside, not only useless, but a cause of anxiety and suffering to others. Husbands will refuse to consider their physical condition until disease has laid them aside, and what should have been days of rest become weeks or months of anxiety. Sons and daughters too old to be controlled like little children, will, by excess of work or pleasure, or both, turn the house into a hospital and the inmates into nurses, before they realize how far they have violated the laws of health and of morals.

When we realize how closely every intelligent home is connected with the world of work and progress, and that the interruption of illness affects as many circles as there are interests represented in the family, we begin to value properly not only the health of the individual, but that of the family, and there comes to us a sense of the closeness of the tie, the dependence which is inseparable from the fact that we are links in a chain.—Christian Union.

Fresh Air and Sunshine.

An interesting experiment that proves the value of fresh air, even for young and delicate children, was tried in a well-known babies' hospital.

All the sick babies that were suffering from chronic indigestion and lack of nutrition, and who would not improve in spite of good food, perfectly ventilated rooms and careful bathing, were taken on the top ward of the hospital, where all the windows were open wide, wrapped as for the street and put in their perambulators. They were kept in this room from two to four hours daily, and soon showed a marked improvement. Their cheeks became rosy, they gained in weight and appetite, and would often fall asleep and remained so during the whole time they were in the air.

Very delicate children had bags of hot water placed at their feet during cold weather. It is recorded in the account of this experiment that not one child took cold as a result of it.—Selected.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

LEMON PIE.—Place two cupfuls of water over the fire in a saucepan. While this is heating, grate the rind of one lemon and add to its juice, strained through a thin cloth. Place a teacupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter in a large bowl. When the water boils, thicken it with two-thirds of a cupful of flour which has been moistened and stirred until smooth. This is best done by adding a spoonful of sugar to the flour, which keeps it from lumping, and when it is stirred smooth with cold water, add a few spoonfuls of hot water to it, before stirring it into the larger quantity in the saucepan. As soon as this porridge boils, pour it over the sugar and butter and stir well. Then add the lemon, when the mixture has cooled, so as not to cook the eggs; stir in the beaten yolks of two. The whites are for frosting.—Exchange.

In Memoriam.

Rev. J. W. Ellison, of the Mississippi Conference, departed this life in Jackson, Miss., Sept. 12, 1895, in full hope of eternal glory, in the fifty-first year of his age.

He was married in young manhood to Miss Fannie Rogers. She said, like the "damsel of Moab to Naomi:" "Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." Consequently his married life could be nothing but happiness.

He spent twenty years in winning souls for Christ. The church has sustained a great loss, but more keenly still it be felt in the family circle. There must be great agony in breaking the ties of love that have bound husband and wife together for twenty-five years. But he has gained his crown and exceeding great reward, and left a savor of a good name wherever he has gone. Some day many will rise and call him blessed.

He was a scholar above ordinary in the departments of learning, but above all was his diligent and prayerful study of God's Word. He was always ready and anxious to explain any passage of Scripture the ignorant might ask. Bright and grand was his character. A little spirit, trusting, uncomplaining Christian life has ended.

Only a few months since he visited the writer's family. In fine spirits he left us "good-by" with high hopes of moving to Jackson to educate his only son. "Truly, in the midst of life we are in death."

Bro. Ellison was never very stout, but always buoyant and hopeful. He suffered a great deal, but was never heard to murmur. He was perfectly submissive, and willing for God's will to be done; and when the ordeal of death came, it had no sting. He had trusted God and lived right; hence could die right. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." He has finished his course, he kept the faith; hence there was laid up for him a "crown of righteousness." Many traveling men will go down to their graves in fond recollections of his hospitable home. They have rested and recuperated beneath his roof-tree." How tenderly sympathize with his daughter, Miss Rebecca! Death's angel came so hurriedly. She being off teaching, had no time to reach home before he had to obey the summons. He leaves a devoted wife, two loving daughters, one son, a host of relatives and friends who will sorely bereft. We tender a heart full of sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to Him who has promised to be a friend to the widow and a father to the fatherless.

He was laid to rest in the cemetery near Vaughn Station to await the resurrection morn.

This is but a poor tribute to the memory of this faithful servant of God.

OBITUARIES.

WEEMS—On the thirty-seventh anniversary of her marriage to Robert D. Weems, Mrs. Mary A. Weems, daughter of G. W. and Mary Ferrill, was called from earth to her reward. Her sojourn in this life had been a very pleasant one. The love that existed between brothers and sisters, with implicit trust in their parents, was greatly admired by those who knew the Ferrill family. It is not surprising that a woman brought up in such a home should prove to be of solid character and sterling worth. Though quite young when the responsibilities of a home were assumed, yet she was adequate to the task. While she was an indulgent, affectionate mother, it was not that false affection that would indulge her children in idleness. Early in life they were taught to earn their own living. Hence the father and mother lived to see their three sons and one daughter grown to independent man- and womanhood; and how fully have they anticipated and ministered to every want of these fond parents!

She was taken ill last Winter with cancer of the face. Her youngest son, Charlie, gave up his business and came to watch at her bedside. Then her only daughter, Mrs. J. W. Powell of Kenton, Tenn., came and spent the time with the ministering to the fond mother.

I was with her often during her sickness, and found at each visit she was growing in grace, which was evidenced by her sweet resignation to the will of God in the midst of her suffering. When she saw the end was near, she called her friends and loved ones around her bed, that she might give to each a word of counsel. Her talk with the bereaved husband and loving children was beautiful.

On July 28, 1895, at her home near DeSoto, Yalobusha county, Miss., in the fifty-sixth year of her age, she rested sweetly in the bosom of the Lord from all the ills of life. The stroke to her aged mother was very great, but in her weakness she quietly waits at the river for the "old ship."

D. P. Bradford, Pastor.

WEEMS—Mrs. Mary C. Weems, daughter of Joseph and Mary Hays, was born in Marion county, S. C., Feb. 6, 1831. Her parents moved to Simpson county, Miss., in 1833, and to Smith county in 1836. On Dec. 25, 1847, she was married to Mr. John Weems. Happily they walked side by side until they had brought up their children to man- and womanhood. A few years ago God called her husband from the happy home. Her years of widowhood were spent in the home of her daughter, Mollia, and son-in-law, Capt. Ed. Delahere, of DeSoto, Miss. Much of her time was spent at the bedside of the sick. She was indeed a sister of mercy. A preacher knew, when he looked into Sister Weems' face, that he had in her a prayerful hearer of the Word. She was one of those cheerful, happy spirits that diffuse joy on every side.

For several weeks she had watched at the bedside of a sister-in-law, and when she saw her eyes closed in death she returned home, and soon afterward was stricken down with the cold fever. In her last hours she was unconscious. We needed no words of assurance as to her future hope.

On Sept. 11 she sweetly fell on sleep. What a rich legacy is left to her daughter and three sons! Beside an own brother and two sisters, she leaves a half-brother, Judge J. M. Floyd, of our town, to whom she was a great comfort, and from whom the separation will not be long. D. P. Bradford, Pastor.

WILLIAMS—Sister E. A. Williams was born April 1 1823, and died Feb. 26, 1895; was a member of the M. E. Church, South, about fifty years.

In her life we have an example of imitation rich and ripe with true faithfulness in all the relations as wife, mother, friend and neighbor, which she sustained with a truly Christian dignity. Hers was a granite-like character. Her positive, unpretentious, candid, free, honest, sincere, kind manner always won for her the utmost confidence of all who knew her. Her words, though spoken without English ornament, were forceful, respected, and submitted to without protest by those in her house as the law of authority. Her advice was sought by the younger women of her community, and heeded by men of all ages and ranks as their royal right.

She was the wife of Rev Jno. Williams, deceased, local preacher for many years of Mt. Carmel circuit; abiding by the stuff and maintaining the family government while her husband preached the gospel of Christ as a faithful minister should. Her home was always headquarters for preachers, whether pastors or travelers. The first acquaintance of this scribe in her community was made with her eighteen years ago, and found in her the same true and loyal friend. Long live her memory to bless us! G. W. Ilhown.

WHALEY—Mrs. Lucinda Lobsiler Whaley was born in Franklin parish, Oct. 3, 1865, and died in Iberville parish, Sept. 9, 1895.

Mrs. Whaley was deprived of her mother when only eight years old, but kind Providence placed her in the tender care of a half-sister and loving cousin. She was taught from infancy to love the M. E. Church, and made it her choice.

In 1881 she came to Iberville parish with some of her relatives.

In 1890 she was wedded to Mr. Frederick Whaley. They lived for a while in White Castle and then moved to their farm in the immediate vicinity. Although no M. E. Church was near enough for her to attend, she was familiar with all of its workings.

Her life was one of unselfishness and devotion to her husband; loving, tender and watchful over her children.

We extend our sympathy to the bereaved husband, to the little girls four and two years respectively), and the hope of a long and successful life to the new-born baby boy. May God give the consolation we can not give, and add manifold blessings to the kind people who are caring for the orphans!

Louis Edw. Wicht.

Jackson, La.

ARNOLD—Robert Claude Arnold, son of A. M. and Angeline Arnold, was born at Abbeville, Miss., Aug. 17, 1871, and was called to his reward near midnight, Sept. 24, 1895.

Bro. Claude showed in childhood a sweet and noble spirit. He was always obedient and well behaved. In young manhood he maintained a high moral character, and upon coming "to years" he chose to bear the afflictions of the people of God rather than the pleasures of sin for a season. He was converted to God and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Abbeville, Miss., in the Summer of 1891. He has lived an acceptable member of the church since that time.

A large number of mourning friends attended the funeral services conducted by his pastor, and just at nightfall his body was laid to rest in the cemetery.

May God comfort his sorrowing mother, sister, and aunt; and may they meet him in heaven! Ben P. Jaco, P. C.

Abbeville, Miss.

GALLEGHLY—Lottie, little daughter of B. A. and Angeline Gallegbly, was born Oct. 5, 1888, and died Sept. 7, 1895, at Abbeville, Miss.

Poor little Lottie suffered very intensely and a great deal, despite the best efforts of a skilled physician and tender and loving ministries of parents and friends; but she is now where no more suffering is.

May the Lord tenderly heal the bleeding hearts, and may Lottie be a star on the shores of everlasting safety, toward which, in calm or storm father and mother may ever steer and finally reach! Ben P. Jaco, P. C.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

Rev. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

Rev. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., October, '96. A little later it will be November, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Dr. Samuel Minturn Angell, one of the best-known practitioners of homeopathic medicine in the State, died on Oct. 5.

The directors of the Atlanta Exposition have decided against a Sunday opening by a large majority. Even the grounds are closed.

An Episcopal minister of Baltimore says that the proposition to change the name of that church is "one of those perennial agitations, which die out soon."

The national officers and executive committee of the Irish National Alliance have issued an appeal for assistance to all friends of the independence of Ireland.

The Chinamen at the Chinese village on the Atlanta Fair Midway are slipping away and getting themselves lost in considerable numbers to the no small perplexity of the treasury officials.

A terrible head end collision occurred on Oct. 5, near Atlanta, on the Atlanta and West Point railroad, in which an accommodation passenger train and the last mail for New Orleans were completely wrecked, and the engineer of the mail train killed. None of the passengers were seriously hurt.

Even some of the staunch Republican papers seem to think that it is time to call a halt on the extravagant pension expenditures of the country. Says the Chicago Tribune: "The sum paid out for pensions last year was 39 per cent. of the total government expenditures. Ten years ago the pensioners got only 18 per cent. of the appropriations, or $88,000 000."

The first step toward a union of political forces opposed to Tammany Hall for the coming campaign was taken in meetings of the Chamber of Commerce and representatives of the various anti-Tammany forces last week, wherein it was resolved to put a fusion ticket in the field and conduct a campaign against Tammany under the direction of a committee of fifty.

On the second of October a convention assembled at Topeka, Kan., to agitate in favor of a deep-water port on the Gulf of Mexico, adopting a resolution authorizing the forming of a permanent committee, composed of five members from each State and three members from each territory west of the Mississippi River, and to be known as the Permanent Deep-Water Utilization Committee.

That Europeans have come to recognize the superiority of the American type of locomotive over the English type is shown by the fact that Philadelphia has received an order for forty locomotives of the heaviest type for Russia. American locomotives have found a market in Central and South America, Japan and even Australia, but this is the first order received from a European country.

The amount of the sugar bounty claims received at the Internal Revenue Bureau is nearly $6 000 000, and the claims in this figure will be reached, if not exceeded. The amount that could be paid with the $5,000 000 appropriation would be about five-sixths of the total, but the official determination of the pro rata can not be made until all the claims have been examined and passed upon.

By prompt and decisive action, the management of railroads have run out of their employ all men who prefer getting drunk to holding steady situations, or who think they must drink liquor. Now the superintendent of the Boston and Maine railroad has commenced war against tobacco consumers, and has issued a circular to his men which forbids the use of tobacco in any form by an employee when on duty.

One of the largest fires that has ever occurred in southwestern New England broke out in one of the three mills of the Warren Manufacturing Company, situated about an eighth of a mile from the center of Warren, R. I., on Oct. 3, and before it was gotten under control it had swept through three large cotton mills, two warehouses, small sheds, freight cars and other property, causing a loss which is estimated at more than $1,000,000.

FOREIGN.

It is said that England spends $900,000,000 a year for drink.

Ex-Queen Liliuokalani has been pardoned by the Hawaiian government.

Prof. Louis Pasteur, the eminent French scientist, was buried on Oct. 5. The funeral service was attended by President Faure and the members of the diplomatic corps and numerous delegations from different scientific bodies.

The extraordinary heat that has been experienced in most parts of the United States during the last part of September was felt also in Europe. The rivers of France have been unprecedentedly low through the extreme drouth and great heat.

Foreign office officials have expressed the opinion that the disturbances at Constantinople will seriously embarrass the powers in their efforts to bring about reform in Armenia. They hold that a heavy responsibility rests upon the Armenians for precipitating the riots at Constantinople.

A most formidable competitor of the United States for the control of the European cattle markets has arisen in Australia, and in a special report to the State Department United States Consul Bell, at Sydney, gives much valuable information of the present conditions and future prospects of the industry of cattle raising in that country.

Mississippi Holiness Association.

The Mississippi Holiness Association will convene at Mt. Pleasant, Marshall county, Miss., Oct. 8, and will close Sunday night, the thirteenth, 1895. We are expecting the Rev. L. L. Pickett to be with us.

All are invited—saint and sinner—to hear as Jesus has commanded: "He that hath ears to hear let him hear," and not take hearsay for holiness.

Mt. Pleasant is sixteen miles northwest of Holly Springs, and eight miles south of Rossville, Tenn.

Published in behalf of Executive Committee.

J. W. POSTON, Pres.

Worthy Your Confidence.

The success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in conquering scrofula in whatever way it may manifest itself is vouched for by thousands who were severely afflicted by this prevalent disease, but who now rejoice over a permanent cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Scrofula may appear as a humor, or it may attack the glands of the neck, or break out in dreadful running sores on the body or limbs. Attacking the mucous membranes, it may develop into catarrh or lodging in the lungs lead to consumption. Come as it may, a faithful course of treatment with Hood's Sarsaparilla will overcome it, for working upon the foundation of all diseases, impure blood, the system is clarified and vitalized, and vigor, strength and health restored to the body.

Notice.

I would be glad if the secretaries of the auxiliary societies of the W. F. M. Society in Brandon district would let me hear from them at once, as I have literature that I wish to forward as early as possible. I notice there is a mistake in my address, as given in the Minutes of the last annual meeting of the society, and also in the ADVOCATE.

THE FAITHLESS SANDS.

BY REV. JAMES GIBBONS LYONS, LL.D.

A rosy child went forth to play,
To the first flush of hope and pride,
Where sands in silver beauty lay,
Made smooth by the retreating tide;
And, kneeling on the trackless waste,
Whence ebbed the waters many a mile,
He raised in hot and trembling haste
Arch, wall, and tower—a goodly pile.

But when the shades of evening fell,
Veiling the blue and peaceful deep,
The tolling of the vesper bell
Called the boy-builder home to sleep.
He dreamed, through all the restless night,
Of airy structures, tall and fair;
He came with the returning light,
And, lo! the faithless sands were bare.

Less wise than that unthinking child
Are all that breathe of mortal birth,
Who grasp with striving warm and wild
The fair and fading toys of earth.
Gold, learning, glory—what are they
Without the faith that looks on high?
The sand forts of a child at play,
Which are not when the waves go by.

Correspondence.

Letter from Venice.

Venice answers in full all the dreams that I ever had of its beauties. The Grand Canal leading to the lagoon which opens into the Adriatic; handsome houses of stone and marble built over the water or at its edge; gondolas moving swiftly to and fro like black-winged birds seeking rest; graceful gondoliers, clad in white garments with colored sashes and caps, standing like Greek gods at either end of their boats, swaying backward and forward in the very poetry of motion; lovely women and handsome men lounging luxuriously among the cushioned seats; many islands scattered over the face of the sea like polished jewels; and over all, the softest, bluest sky, which at sunset floods the scene with glints of glory, and at eventide sinks into an opalescent haze, star-pierced, exquisite and ineffable. Next door to the hotel where we are spending our ideal days, is the place where the Moor lived who so loved Desdemona; further down the Grand Canal is the Rialto, the famous bridge built in the sixteenth century, which was once the centre of traffic for the Lombard and Venetian merchants, in fact, for the whole mercantile life of Europe. It was here that old Shylock, the Jew, figured so extensively, and where the news of the wreck of Antonio's ship of precious freight reached the ears of Salanio. "Ichabod" is now written over its marble sides. No longer do "ministers from twenty nations," with "more than royal pomp and ease, transact the affairs of commerce or policy on that noble structure." It is now the headquarters of all the Cheap Johns of Venice, with their variegated and malodorous goods.

The first place that tourists wend their way toward, on arrival at this unique city, is St. Mark's Church, which is built facing a beautiful square of that name, on which flutter thousands of pigeons that are fed by the government. Around the Piazza are elegant stores containing all sorts of Venetian glassware, laces, paintings, and precious stones. At night the fashionables of Venice congregate there, dressed most elegantly, in the very tip of Parisian style, to drink their lemonade or wine, and talk and laugh and listen to the music, which is invariably on hand in every direction, as in Naples. St. Mark's Church presents a most magnificent exterior. It is richly ornamented with mosaics, and gilded. The style of architecture is Romano-Byzantine. The interior is oriental, of Alexandrine origin. The famous four bronze horses stand over the principal doorway, where they were placed after the battle of Waterloo by the allied armies. There is a stone at the left of the altar in the church, which is said to be the identical one on which John the Baptist was beheaded. It was impossible for us to study the rich mosaics of the interior and the other wonderful artistic work very closely, on account of the cathedral being full of people who had come to celebrate, by high mass, the memory of a man who died many years ago, leaving a handsome legacy to the church on condition that at regular intervals a ceremonial should be held in his behalf; when prayers should be made for the repose of his soul. A bier was heavily draped in black, four long tapers were burning around it, the priests were chanting, and the most magnificent music was rolling in volumes through the building from a grand organ, and a full orchestra hidden somewhere from view.

The Doge's Palace is the next place to be visited. It is considered one of the finest buildings in Europe; its rich frescoes and superb mural paintings are a surprise and delight. A terrible fire in the sixteenth century, and the relentless raid of Napoleon, destroyed most of its beautiful decorations, but enough are left to give a striking idea of its former glory. The ceilings and sides of the walls are perfectly gorgeous in wood-carving and beautiful frescoes, the work of Tintoretto, Palma the younger, and Paul Veronese. The most interesting rooms are the Grand Council Chamber, the ante-chamber of the State Inquisitors, the Council Rooms of the Ten, and of the three Chiefs, and the Senate Chamber. A hole was left in the walls in two or three places, where the "lions' mouths" were, in which were put anonymous letters, or whisperings were made condemning some poor man to nameless horrors. The two colored marble columns are still standing, between which the Doges appeared before the people and pronounced the sentence of death upon a criminal or political offender or innocent victim. The Bridge of Sighs connects the Palace of the Doges with the State Prison. The man or woman in the old days, who passed out of the Court of Justice (?) over that fearful space, never saw the light of another day. Seventeen stone steps lead down into the midnight darkness of those horrible cells, with their sloping slabs of rock for beds. In one of these a light is kept burning. It is shown to visitors as the place in which Lord Byron would sit for hours, while he lived in Venice, trying to conjure up some of the hideous feelings of a condemned prisoner, so as to work the sensation into his writings with startling effect.

We had visited so many splendid galleries of painting and sculpture, that we were inclined to pass by all such temptations in Venice, but finally yielded and went to the Academy to study particularly the works of the Venetian School, in which it is especially rich. From there we were rowed to the Browning Palace, which is the most ideally beautiful and fascinating home I have ever entered. It is built of white marble; its broad steps are reached from the side of a gondola; the hall door opens into a spacious rotunda, which is tastefully adorned with plants. A stairway leads from the rear of this into a handsome suite of rooms, dancing-hall, library, sitting-room, etc., all with polished oak and marble floors, with elegant furniture, exquisitely frescoed ceilings and marble busts of Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning; also their portraits and some statuary and paintings done by their sons. On the tables were open books, looking as if they had just been laid down. In front of the palace sweeps the Grand Canal; at the right, through the open windows, is seen a most enchanting garden full of trees and flowers and soft green grass. It made the most prosaic of us poetic to gaze upon such a scene. The Venetians are great people for bathing. At night, while riding over the water through the city, groups of men and boys are seen on the steps of their homes ready for a plunge, and dozens of others are splashing about, with heads gleaming on the surface like black and white balls. The children are taught to swim by being tied to a flat board by a rope or long rag, which the mother holds while she sits on the steps and encourages their frantic efforts. Every afternoon steamboat excursions on the Lido, or through the lagoon to watering resorts, are enjoyed by the Venetians. Those who do not care to try the bathing or swimming dress elaborately and sit in the pavilion at the water's edge, drink their iced beverages, and look at the bathers. Venice was quite a revelation to me. I had an idea that one could go nowhere except in a gondola, and last week I was laughing heartily at a woman who said she would need her overshoes there. To the rear of the Grand Hotel a narrow passage leads to a street, and this to other streets and open squares and public gardens, etc., as in all cities. One could walk for many miles in Venice without stepping into a boat. Bridges cross the numberless canals, and lead on from place to place endlessly on dry ground. One hundred and fifty islands form the group in which Venice is situated, but it is built only upon one hundred and eighteen. Of course, gondolas have to be pressed into service in going from one island to another, but upon the main body a person gets all the pedestrian exercise he could possibly desire. The view gained from the top of the bell tower of St. Mark gives an admirable idea of the situation of this marvelous city, beautiful Venice, "the bride of the sea."

On the night of June 20 every year a magnificent festival is held to commemorate the staying of a terrible plague that visited the Venetians centuries ago. This is the evening of the great anniversary. Barges and gondolas gorgeously decorated with festoons of vines and flowers and lace and colored lanterns, filled with merry-hearted people singing and laughing, sweep down the Grand Canal and out into the lagoon like fairy creations. The waters gleam with iridescent lights, reflected shimmering like, quivering rainbows. In front of the Doge's Palace thousands of boats are shifting to and fro, while the heavens blaze with flashes of fireworks. The sound of the guitar and violin is in the air. Over the bridge of boats and along the streets the tap, tap of many feet is heard hurrying to the glorious scene. The hooded friar and black-gowned monk, the vegetable woman and beggar child, the rich American in loads of diamonds, and the aristocratic native with lace-draped head and soft, clinging robes, the old and young, the sad and gay, the ugly and beautiful—all are out in Venice. It is twelve o'clock, and still the rush and swish, the song and chatter, the light and gladness continue. To-morrow will be Sunday, but the festival will go on just the same until seven o'clock; then an adjournment will be made and high mass celebrated.

The Atlanta Exposition.

The Exposition is now in full blast. It is ready for all who wish to see one of the wonders of our great country. It is wonderful. When we consider the devastation of our fair lands by war, and the dark days that followed, it really seems magical. And I care not who it is that will visit the show, they will be amazed. I am only sorry that all of the Southern States are not represented. Ours is a wonderful country—the climate, the soil, the product. Why will people live in the cold, frozen regions of our broad land when such inducements are offered by the South? You have watched the wheel of time as it swung around. For awhile the output was in the West; now it is coming this way. God save us from that foreign disturbing, Sabbath-breaking class that so rapidly filled the West. We invite immigrants, but prefer Americans. This is a broad subject, and I am not expected to write upon it, so will call a halt.

One purpose of the Exposition is to show to the world our resources and products. This means an invitation to come and enjoy the benefits of a section. The eyes of this great country are upon us, Mr. Editor. It behooves us, therefore, to make our best bow. Fourteen foreign countries are represented here by exhibits. The European exhibits, while not official, are of excellent character. They will be found in the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building. The following foreign countries are represented: Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Russia, Mexico, Venezuela, Argentine Republic, Salvador, Chili, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica. The South American countries' exhibits are official, and show a wonderful appreciation of this means to display their wealth. The trade of these countries, so long held by European capitalists, must be and is being turned to our shores. The official recognition of this Exposition by our own government was quickly caught up by these countries to mean closer trade relations. The South is the natural ports for their products, and now that the entering wedge has been placed, why not drive it home? This fair brings the two countries more closely together than did the World's Fair. Fourteen States are represented. Eight of these have buildings, and six will exhibit in the Main Building. Pennsylvania made an appropriation of $38,000; New York spent $25,000; Massachusetts appropriated $25,000; Connecticut, $7,000 for an exhibit; Georgia, $17,000; Illinois, $15,000 Alabama did not appropriate, but the citizens raised a subscription of $20,000. California has a building erected by private subscription. The State has sent the material of the great exhibit collected for the World's Fair. South Carolina, North Carolina, Florida and Arkansas have excellent displays. I am sorry my native State, Mississippi, failed to show up. If the outside world is to know of us, we must show what we have.

The crowds are fast gathering; the weather is lovely. I have had inquiries about rooms, board, etc. There will be no trouble about that. You can be accommodated from $1.50 to $5 per day. The Exposition has established just in front of the union depot an office for furnishing visitors with information about rooms, etc. If anyone will send to the Public Comfort Department, 38 Wall street, for a list of boarding-houses, hotels, etc., they will get a pamphlet giving hundreds of places for board and lodging. I would advise the leaving of trunks at home, unless the stay is to be a long one. Overcoats for the men and wraps for the ladies are necessary, especially at night on the grounds. Umbrellas are always in order, rain or shine. The concerts on the grounds after dark are well worth hearing. The electric lighting of the grounds and buildings is also an attractive evening feature. The fireworks, given two or three nights in the week, are worth the price of an admission. They are free, of course, to all in the grounds; so is the music. When you wind your way to Midway, then you must pay for all you see.

On the grounds is a fire department, a police department, and emergency hospital, with one of twenty-four physicians constantly in attendance. Every effort is made for the comfort and safety of guests. Charges nowhere are exorbitant. The grounds can be reached from almost any part of the city by electric cars. From the centre of the city the Southern railroad runs a train every few minutes. The fare on either of the lines to the Exposition is ten cents. Hacks and hacks convey passengers from the centre of city for five cents.

I would advise all who are so situated that they can come at any time to come early. Everything is new and fresh; there is no rush. A much more pleasant visit can be made than to wait till the rush is on from all sections. Atlanta is well prepared to take care of fifty thousand people at one time. I may safely say seventy-five thousand.

After I have answered inquiries about cost, etc., I will close. People from different quarters are writing me, having read my letters. So much for the scope of territory covered by the ADVOCATE. Excuse me, I will fly off. Here is an estimate of the expense for one person per day. It does not include railroad fare. Board per day, $2; admission to grounds, fifty cents; street car fare, twenty cents; total, $2.70. Et ceteras just as much as you wish to make them. If you buy everything offered for sale in the grounds, and go into every place on Midway every day, you must add $4 per day extra. Now suppose, say four will come together, and they want to spend just as little as possible: Let them take a room with two beds in it. Cost, $1 or $1.50 per day. They can eat at the lunch places for eighty cents a day, each. Now, suppose two will come together, and they propose to make the trip with the very least money possible: Let them take a small room for $1 per day. Now, for their living on the very cheapest plan, and they will live better than at the majority of boarding-places and lunch counters, if they will only take the trouble: Let them bring a small oil stove for coffee-making and egg-cooking. Buy a cup, spoon, plate, knife and fork each. All of these can be bought here for a very small sum. With this small outfit they are prepared to live, and, as I said, to live well. At the grocers they can buy three loaves of bread for ten cents; one quart of pickles for ten cents; ten buns for ten cents; one pound of butter for thirty cents; one pound of jam or preserves for ten cents; half gallon of sweet milk for twenty cents; eggs, fifteen and twenty cents a dozen; cheese, twenty cents per pound; canned beef, twenty cents per pound; canned turkey, forty cents per pound, or twenty cents per can; sliced tongue, forty cents per pound; oysters, forty cents per quart; boiled ham at lunch places can be bought for twenty cents per pound—in fact, anything can be bought ready to eat. They don't have to buy a dollar's worth of anything. City merchants are used to selling by the dime, quarter, or half-dollar's worth. I could tell you more, but the editor says, Stop!

Resolutions

ADOPTED BY THE MINISTERIAL BRETHREN COVERING THEIR POSITION REGARDING MRS. SNELL.

A meeting of the preachers of the Seashore district in attendance upon Palmer Camp Meeting, located in Whittington circuit, was called on the afternoon of Oct. 7, 1895 at which Rev. J. M. Pugh was elected chairman and Rev. Robt. Selby, secretary. After which election the following preamble and resolutions were offered by Rev. C. F. Emery, and upon careful and deliberate consideration were adopted and signed by pastors and local preacher as below:

Whereas, It is contrary to the law of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to permit unlicensed persons to occupy the pulpits of our church, or to have control of the services held therein, or in any property owned by said church; And, whereas, In violation of said law, and in open disregard of the expressed opinion in writing delivered in this case by Bishop J. C. Keener, and officially communicated by the presiding elder, Rev C. A. Powell, at the Quarterly Conference, to the preacher in charge of Palmer Camp Ground, Rev. E. T. Breland, and to the trustees and official members of said camp ground, Mrs. M. M. Snell was invited by the preacher in charge to assume control of the religious services to be held there; And, whereas, The president of the camp ground association had written the presiding elder expressing the hope that he would not interfere with their plans; And, whereas, The presiding elder removed Rev. E. T. Breland from the pastoral charge of Whittington circuit, appointing him to Escatawpa circuit, and Rev. G. R. Ellis to Whittington circuit; And, whereas, After satisfactory explanation made by Rev. E. T. Breland to the presiding elder, the latter deeming the ends of the law to have been conserved by the use of author zed means, revoked his former order reappointing both Revs. E. T. Breland and G. R. Ellis to their respective circuits; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the undersigned members of the Mississippi Annual Conference and local preachers of the district present, that we hereby express the high sense of honor and esteem in which we hold Rev. C. A. Powell for his firm and faithful administration of the law of the church, bearing cheerful testimony to his bearing towards all the parties concerned as uniformly wise, kind and loving, characteristic of the true Christian gentleman.

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and to the papers published at Hattiesburg, Purvis, Lumberton, Bilcxi, and Scranton.

Selections.

Some people who stand well, and whose reputation for uprightness is worth more to them than any earthly possession, seem to have no conscience about some things. They would not think of leaving any store account unpaid, and would spurn the thought of getting the services of anyone without compensation; but they will turn the steward down when he comes to collect for the pastor, and, without blush or shame, pay so much of a church assessment, and flatly refuse to pay the balance. Sometimes the same class of people will let their church paper run twelve months, or more, over the time, and then coolly tell the collector that they never ordered it, and do not mean to pay for it.—North Carolina Advocate.

Dr. Palmore, the genial editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, is an earnest opponent of tobacco. He recently had an amusing experience. He was conducting religious worship at a meeting where there was a large number of preachers. In his prayer he prayed fervently to the Lord to arrest the curse of worldliness in the church. "Amen!" responded the brethren. "Oh, Lord, cast out the devil of covetousness." "Amen!" rang out in full chorus. "Oh, Lord, help us to destroy the accursed liquor traffic." "Amen!" thundered the salute. "Oh, Lord, help us to quit the use of tobacco." There was a dead silence. One brother, it seems, started to say "Amen!" but turned it off in a cough, and poor Palmore was left to finish his prayer unholped by another amen.—Epworth Era.

The above sounds somewhat apocryphal, but that is about the way it happened. The chorus of amens was like the roar of a multitude of gigantic frogs about a sequestered lake. The succeeding silence was like that after all the frogs had leaped into the water. One fat presiding elder snorted in trying to suppress laughter.—St. Louis Advocate.

The crime of suicide is nothing more nor less than the outgrowth of that infamous doctrine which teaches that man's life, like that of the beast, ends in the grave. One who is familiar with the Bible knows that God has declared against self-destruction, and that the words of Holy Writ concerning the fate of Judas are sufficient to prove that it is contrary to divine law.—Exchange.

Mr. Moody's "Gospel Hymns and Sacred Songs" have yielded the enormous sum of $1,250,000 in royalties to Mr. Moody. It is estimated that 20,000,000 copies have been sold, ranging in price from five cents to a dollar and a quarter. Mr. Moody has always insisted on a Board of Trustees handling this money.—Exchange.

The story of Enoch Arden, as it stands in the poem, is in every detail a true one. It was related to Lord Tennyson by the late Mr. Woolner, the well-known sculptor, whose widow has the manuscript of the story still in her possession.—The Bookman.

In the Living Present.

Holmes, the supposed wholesale murderer, told a newspaper reporter, who was interviewing the criminal at the jail in Philadelphia, that he believes in the teachings of Paine and Ingersoll. This confession of faith is a complete triumph of Col. Ingersoll's school of philosophy.

The Chicago Times-Herald interrogated a hundred and forty-seven Methodist preachers in Illinois if the time-limit of the pastorates should be abolished or extended. A hundred and seven declared themselves for abolishment. That looks as if the extinction of the itinerancy is impending.

George Muller, of Bristol, England, now old and feeble, is a living testimony to the fact that God hears and answers prayers. Though he never told any man of his wants, making his requests only to God, he received for his orphanages during the last half-century from various parties the enormous sum of $6,869 130.

A Petersburg paper laments the increase of drunkenness in Russia. Says that on an average a million dollars are spent in that empire every day for alcoholic beverages. The effect is apparent: Poverty, squalor, incompetency, effeminacy, imbecility, corruption.

The Outlook thinks that the so-called servant girl problem is actually a mistress problem. Frequently more incompetency in the housekeeper than in the help employed. In order intelligently to manage a servant girl, the mistress must have a practical knowledge of the proposed work. The ignorant and impractical mistress is usually very exacting. The mistress should cultivate self-help. That would make servants less arrogant.

Justice, a radical French paper, assures that among each hundred soldiers seventy are analphabetes. While France spends annually a hundred and ninety million francs for education, Russia, which has three times more inhabitants than its Western friend, devotes only thirty-seven million francs for that purpose.

Leopold II., King of Belgium, liberal, progressive, is sovereign of the Congo Free State. Said country has twenty-seven million native inhabitants. Of Europeans, a thousand have made their domicile there. To support the enterprise has nearly wrecked the large private fortune of the king. He proposes to sell the Free State to either England, France, or Germany.

Religion the Preventer of Crime.

The general prevalence of crime in this and other countries has led most of the thoughtful minds of the day to turn their attention to the study of criminology in all of its various phases. I am glad that the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has been thinking lately along this line, and has in spicy editorials recently brought the subject before the reading and thinking public. The subject deserves the earnest and most considerate attention of the people everywhere; and to religious people, above all others, it should be a special study, for they desire not only reformation in the life and character of man, but the salvation of his immortal soul. They desire not only to know the cause of sin and crime, but the way to prevent it, and to offer to the world the only sure remedy for its cure and prevention; and what other remedy can Christians offer the sinful and criminal world, to stay the progress of sin and crime, but the grace of God? They can offer no other, for no other will ever cure its deadly evils of sin and crime. Nothing but the grace of God can save this lost and ruined world of ours; and the sooner the church and the world realize this fact, the better it will be for all concerned, for it is only God in the hearts of men that will keep them from sinning and from committing great crimes and misdemeanors. The cause of crime is godlessness, the want of vital religion in the soul of man. No man will commit crime that is thoroughly religious, who has God continually in his soul, and who walks daily and nightly in "the light of life." The love of Christ will restrain him, and make him walk in the ways of pleasantness and the paths of peace, and he will do no harm, because the love of God is shed abroad in his heart. "He that is born of God, doth not commit sin, because his seed remaineth in him." The great and good John Bunyan exemplified this great truth in his life when he saw criminals going to jail and the gallows, and said, "There, but for the grace of God, goes John Bunyan." And but for the grace of God there would be twice the criminality there is in this and other countries. To sum it all up, then, we see that godlessness, or the want of vital religion in the soul of man, is the cause of all crime and sinfulness. A godless people and a godless nation will become a people and nation of profligates, criminals, and prostitutes. No nation, or people, can live or exist without God, for the Bible tells us that "righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." History confirms the fact that the people and nations that eliminated God from their land and creed degenerated back into the most abject barbarism, or became entangled in the horrible web of infidelity and atheism. The history of France exemplifies this great truth. France sought by every means in her power to enlighten and develop her people without the idea of God, and she filled her borders with lying hypocrites and merciless criminals. She caused her whole land to be drenched in the blood of her bravest and noblest people; and whose heart does not quake and quail within him as he reads in history of the terrible Reign of Terror in the land of France? —and who does not lament that some of the greatest minds this country ever produced were tinctured and spoiled by French literature and French associations? Had Thomas Paine never put his feet on French soil, there never would have been any "Age of Reason" and "Common Sense;" and had there been no "Age of Reason" and "Common Sense," there would, perhaps, be no Robert G. Ingersoll to malign and slander the religion and people that made this country grand and glorious. The Pilgrim fathers did not come from a land that had no God, but from a land that cherished religion, and upheld the principles of virtue and morality. The generation of men that laid the foundation of this country's success did not come from infidel France or Germany, but from noble old England, the land that has done so much to defend the cause of truth and virtue. France has produced but few great men since the elimination of God from the mind and creed of her people. On the other hand, she had sown the seeds of discord and discontent everywhere. Every land is infested with her ruinous and poisonous doctrines. Robert G. Ingersoll to-day is a living embodiment of her fearful and awful teaching, and as he goes through this land of the free and home of the brave, sowing the seeds of dissension in the hearts and minds of the people, he is but setting forth the great doctrines and ideas that laid waste the fair and beautiful land of France. In his great advocacy of personal liberty, he transcends the bounds of truth and decency, and leads the souls of men out into a great ocean of doubt, to be lashed and driven by its waves into everlasting destruction and death. Such teachings of personal liberty as he gives the people but aids and abets them in the prosecution and commission of crime; and while he is considered as the father of noble thoughts and ideas, and a speaker of great force and power, yet few realize the fact that he is also the father and instigator of many of the crimes that grace our court dockets. His ideas and sentiments, actuated by motives black and impure, has caused many a poor fellow to commit suicide, or take the life of his fellow-man without a cause. Following out his ideas has landed many a poor fellow in the asylum, or turned him out a pauper upon the cold mercies and charities of the world. To frown down such heinous and impious doctrines as he seeks to instill into the hearts and minds of the people, and instill into their hearts and minds the religion of the Son of God, is the only way to prevent sin and crime, and save the immortal souls of men.

Our Hymn Book.

Our hymn book, M. E. Church, South, is a most valuable collection of sacred poetry, of hymns and songs most admirably adapted for the expression of praise to God. The compilers of the book have displayed a broad catholicity of spirit in their selection of hymns. Like everything connected with Methodist doctrine and polity, the selection has been most liberal and tolerant. The hymns of Charles Wesley and John Wesley were so numerous and so fine that a sufficiently large hymn book could have been filled with their hymns; but our church has never claimed to possess all the best hymns, nor that all the best hymns have been confined to the authorship of Arminian, or even Protestant writers. Two hundred and ninety-five of our hymns are Charles Wesley's. Twenty-six of our hymns are from John Wesley. Twenty-three of these are translations from German and Spanish authors. Only three of his hymns were original. Three of our hymns are by Samuel Wesley. The hymns have seventeen Roman Catholic authors. One hundred and seventy-five have Presbyterian and Congregational authors. Fifty-three of our hymns are by Episcopalians, twenty-five are from Baptist authors, ten of the hymns written by Lutherans, eight were written by Moravians, seven by Unitarians, and one by a Quaker. Seventy-eight of our hymns were written by women. Some of the authors were Romanist, some Lutherans, some Arminians, some Calvinist, some Unitarians, Mystics and Quakers; some by monks, some by Bishops, noblemen and physicians; but the majority by ministers of the gospel. Our oldest was by Clement of Alexandria. His real name was Titus Flavius Clemens; born A. D. 160; his hymn 690, "Shepherd of tender youth." Many of our hymns are the productions of eminent poets, as Milton, Pope, Dryden, Addison, Cowper, Montgomery, Hemans, Sigourney, Walter Scott, Bryant, Barbauld, Luther, Watts, Henry Kirk White. Some, like Dr. Watts and Charles Wesley, wrote many. Others wrote but few, and our compilers have sometimes selected but one. Cecilia Elizabeth Clephane never wrote but one, the famous No. 844, "There were ninety and nine." She died before it was set to music by Sankey. She never knew the power of her song, nor, we suppose, ever dreamed of the unspeakable good it was to accomplish. Sankey sang it with pathos and heart-melting power wherever the English tongue is the speech of the people—in the United States, in Canada, in the British Islands, and in Australia; and through it multitudes were brought to Christ. Some were suggested by and written under peculiar circumstances. We may write about it. J. B. W.

College Presidents, Attention!

The following circular addressed to a girl in the senior class of one of our colleges was intercepted. Names, etc., are here left blank for obvious reasons. Let our college presidents and professors look sharp. It were infinitely better to have no orations and essays at all than have your pupils patronize such an institution as this.

"We are at the present, as in the past, supplying the busy students of the country with all kinds of literary productions. We still continue to furnish the highest quality of literary work at the very lowest rate. We are no strangers to the educational institutions of the country, and our work is becoming more and more a necessity to the student as he becomes a specialist in education, and to the man, who, as the victim of circumstances, is forced to perform literary labors for which he has neither the time nor the adaptability. Our increasing business will testify to the truth of this statement, as well as to the merits of our work. In the last seventeen years, during which time we have been conducting this business, it has increased from a merely local institution to the limits of the English-speaking world.

"O! you, who have not patronized us before, we ask nothing but a trial. We do not ask you to speculate upon the question of our honesty. We require no money in advance. Our prices are as follows: High School orations and essays, $3 to $8; College essays, oration and debates, $3 to $15; Political speeches, $10 to $30; lectures, $10 to $50; sermons, from 50 cents to $25.

"Our work we guarantee original, with the exception of the low-priced sermons. (See enclosed letter.)

"We are, Yours confidentially,"

The "enclosed letter" referred to is as follows:

"DEAR SIR: We beg leave to call your attention to the enclosed circular with its advertisement of our work and the price list of the same. We especially call your attention to our college work: orations, debates, essays, theses—mathematical, medical and law—of which we make a specialty, and upon which we have built the foundation of our enormous business. Each year brings its proof that honest, conscientious work is the greatest of advertisements.

"In addition to terms stated in the circular, we would add that original orations, debates, etc., range in price from 35 cents to 90 cents per hundred words, owing to style, length, nature of subject, etc.

"We ask you to patronize us, if you are in need of anything in our line. With the exception of the low-priced sermons, we guarantee all of our work original and that the customer ordering will have the exclusive use of same. If it is not entirely satisfactory, we want it returned to us. On these terms we respectfully solicit your patronage.

"We are, Yours confidentially,"

Evidently somebody in these United States does a great deal of lying.

Correspondence.

Letter from Rev. J. L. Futrell.

The thirtieth session of the Columbia Conference, which was held in the picturesque town of Oakland, Oregon, Aug. 29 to Sept. 2, was a real pleasant one. Bishop A. W. Wilson presided, and it was a presidency to be remembered. Many brethren thought it a thing unheard of to be called upon for their reports at the first morning session, but they know differently now. There did not seem to be any hurry, and yet four sessions finished the business. I need not tell your readers of the Bishop's sermons. He gave us three, and one address—yes, I may say two addresses, for the "talk" just before reading the appointments would be good for an appendix to the Discipline. Your correspondent was elected secretary, with P. A. Moses and J. L. Jones, assistants. All the preachers were present except J. W. Shreve and J. T. Thornton, who, with J. W. Bryant, were located. A larger number of laymen were present than usual, which we deem encouraging. One preacher and his wife—R. C. Oglesby—came 270 miles in a private conveyance across the Cascade Mountains. I think about three-fourths of those present—both preachers and lay—came in their own conveyances; times too hard to spend money for traveling. All had to cross mountains, for when you get away from the Willamette Valley—30 to 50 miles wide and 150 miles long—you can go to but few places in Oregon without crossing mountains ranging from two or three to six or eight thousand feet high. There was a gain in Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues, W. P. and H. M. Societies, and of church members—the latter about twelve per cent. Two of the best parsonages in the Conference were built—one at Applegate and one at Roseburg, the latter to be occupied by a young man. Dallas is soon to finish the best church-building. There was a little falling off in missions, but an increase in church extension collections.

I got Bro. Skipworth, one of our laymen, to write to the Nashville Christian Advocate. Suffer me to quote from two paragraphs:

"The salaries received by the preachers were small indeed. Nobody but the preachers could tell how they had lived on incomes so small."

"The W. P. and H. M. Society held its anniversary in the afternoon of the second day of Conference; Mrs. J. L. Futrell, president, presiding. She delivered a very instructive and encouraging address. The meeting was well attended, and no more profitable meeting was held during the session. A goodly number of our women of the church showed a deep and intelligent interest in the work specially committed to their care. The good work accomplished by the society during the past year—and that, too, under the most adverse circumstances—should inspire the sympathy and cordial co-operation of every preacher and layman in the Conference."

My work is Corvallis and Dixie.

Edward McGehee College Burned.

On last Monday, Sept. 30, at 5 P. M., Edward McGehee College, of Woodville, Miss., was burned to the ground. It caught on the roof from sparks from a chimney. Nearly all the effects were saved, though in a somewhat damaged condition. No one was hurt. Those who saw this historic building go up in flames thought that this school, which had opened so favorably—yea, flatteringly—just two weeks before, was ruined. But the teachers, gathering the students together next day, resumed recitations. Our Jewish friends generously tendered the Sabbath-school room of their synagogue to the president and his faculty, and the college is being conducted in that. By the way, while the building was yet burning, one of the leading Jewish merchants of the town slipped fifty dollars into the hands of the president as a personal gift. The Board of Trustees met and decided to build at once. The building was insured for five thousand dollars, and one thousand was raised by the Board, making six thousand. Many wish to increase this sum to ten thousand dollars, and put up a building, modern in all its equipment. I have no doubt this will be done.

The opening of this year was larger than for several years, and at the time of the burning had a larger enrollment of day and boarding pupils, severally, than at any entire session since the presidency of Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan. Not a pupil has been lost. On the contrary, new boarders and day pupils have been entering ever since the fire. Six were enrolled this (Monday) morning. While we were all greatly grieved to lose the old building because of its historic, almost sacred, memories, yet we believe its destruction augurs a more glorious future than all the past.

"The Bible Chair."

Why not endow a chair for the study of the Bible in Millsaps College? As times are brightening, our college interest should keep pace with all improved conditions of our people, and enterprise worthy and great things for the future of our church in Mississippi. Some who carry the welfare of their forward movement of Methodism in the behalf of Christian education in their hearts desire to have a chair as an exponent of Bible and Methodist Christianity, to give our boys and young men who go to Millsaps—nine-tenths of whom never have any other like opportunity—such advantages as can be given in no other way, and is not offered anywhere else as they should be.

Why should not our church schools prepare for, and aspire to, the complete development of the highest type of manhood? The spiritual man should be trained and educated equal to and beyond the physical and mental. We believe in growth in knowledge and grace. Let us have a chair equal in importance to any in the institution for the study of patriarchal and Hebrew history, and modern church history and doctrine, with their evident application. No doubt such a department added to Millsaps would greatly enhance the importance of the institution in the minds of the people. No doubt the eighty thousand Methodists of Mississippi are able to make the addition. No doubt it ought to be done. It will in time. Why not now? May God speed the day of its consummation!

Jacob's Ladder.

There is a ladder between earth and heaven on which angel messengers carry up our prayers to God and bring his answers down. Nay! this is but the hope of our dreams; the reality transcends it, for God is here, and needs neither ladder nor angel to communicate with us, or open to us communication with him; here in our hours of sorest need, of bitterest loneliness, of self-inflicted sorrow, of well-deserved penalty, of more poignant remorse; here as he was in the burning bush to Moses, and in the mysterious visitor to Gideon, and in the still, small voice to Elijah, and in the child wrapped in the swaddling clothes to the stable guests, and still by most of us unseen and to the most of us unknown. But when the veil is taken from our faces, and we see him, then the ground becomes consecrated ground, the stable a sacred place, the lowing of the cattle an anthem, Horeb a sanctuary, the land of Midian a holy land, our pile of stones a Bethel.—Lyman Abbott.

Total specials, $549.50.

Statistics, as reported at last annual meeting: Whole number of adult auxiliaries, 58—members, 1,500; young people's and juvenile societies, 9—members, 200. Total members, adult and juvenile, 1 700. Life members, 35 (about 40). Number of subscribers to Woman's Missionary Advocate, 300; Little Worker, 175. Outgoing missionaries accepted by the Board, $110 subscribed. Our Conference made a number of life members. Mesdames Hays, Chatfield, Master Heard Wimberly, Mesdames Russell, Mellen, Annie DeMoss, Miss Clara Chrisman, and Mrs. Rachel Gunning made life members at annual meeting in Natchez. Miss Annie Linfield, life member of Little Rock, Ark.; Mrs. C. B. Galloway, of two societies, who also holds membership in five auxiliaries.

OTHER APPROPRIATIONS.

No Bible women are supported now. Woodville supported one several years. There were two girls supported in China during the first years of organization—one by the Raymond auxiliary, Nettie Hunter. The girls supported in Laredo Seminary were distributed as follows: Natchez, two; Jackson, one; Meridian, one; Crystal Springs, two; Hazlehurst, one; Wesson, one; Woodville, one; Brookhaven now has one. There may be others. These boxes are sent twice a year, and cost from $15 to $20 each. Contributions have been made to outgoing missionaries other than our own; to Mrs. Lambuth for Kobe school, and Miss Julia Roldan's education. We raised in shares of ten dollars for Miss Haygood's school, McTyeire School, about $150. Fifteen cents per capita annually provides for Conference contingent fund, and auxiliaries arrange for auxiliary contingent fund. Assessment according to membership constitutes a fund for the publication of the Minutes of the annual session. In the Minutes of 1889 one page is set apart in loving remembrance of Miss Clara Chrisman, missionary to Brazil, and Miss Bessie Fearn, recording secretary, who entered into glorious rest after the tenth annual session.

A beautiful book, a sketch of the life of Anna Clara Chrisman, who was lost in the Conemaugh flood in Pennsylvania as she was traveling from her home to New York, to sail from thence to Brazil, was given to the Woman's Board of Missions by the author, Miss Agnes Chrisman. Price, $1.

Dr. W. C. Black gave his valuable book, Christian Womanhood, to the training-school.

Mrs. R. R. Parker presented to the Conference society of her own composition a beautiful poem, etc., for use at public meetings.

Dr. Featherstun, while president of McGehee College, kindly gave two years' board and instruction to Miss Julia Roldan (missionary to Mexico, but not from Woman's Board). Contributions were made throughout the Mississippi Conference to further her education.

Rev. B. F. Jones, while president of the Port Gibson Female College, offered "free tuition in English and music to anyone seeking an education preparatory to going out as a missionary."

Rev. T. B. Holloman, president of East Mississippi Female College, gives free tuition to Miss McNamar, and made the following proposition at our annual meeting: "If the missionary society sends ten girls who take regular literary course only, we will take Miss McNamar (or other) for $100. If five of the ten take extras in the course, the expense shall be only $50. If the society send five girls who take regular literary course, we take Miss McNamar (or other) for $150. If those five take extras, we take Miss McNemar (or other) for $100. If you can aid us in securing $2,500 in $50 bonds, we will give one girl free of all charge. For every bond thus secured, when $150 in $50 bonds shall have been secured, a credit of $5 for every such bond will be given."

Sunshiny Christians.

There is no sunshine for those who persist in keeping their shutters barred. Joy is not gained by the asking for it, but only by the acting for it; we have got to walk with Christ if we want to walk in the sunshine. There is a lamentable lot of moping and grumbling and sour-spirited Christians who disgrace the name they bear. If one of this sorry regiment should ask a shrewd man of the world to embrace Christianity, he might well reply: "No, I thank you; I have troubles enough now, without being troubled with such a peevish and doleful religion as yours seems to be." What a letter of recommendation some Christians carry in their observant countenances! . . . Here are three things which you, the ailing souls, most need—more faith, more vigor, more joy in the Holy Spirit. Your Divine Physician offers them to you, if you will accept them; but you must let him bestow them in his own way and on his own terms. A happy day would it be in all our churches if the fever patients and the emaciated dyspeptics and the restored paralytics would come trooping out of the hospitals and report themselves for duty.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

One of the best ways of helping yourself is by being helpful to others. If you are especially burdened, help some other troubled and anxious one to carry his heavy load, and your own heart will be lightened. Few of us are so badly off that we can not find others more unfortunate to whom we can render assistance and give comfort. The brightest objects are those that reflect the sunshine; those have most light who give most light and cheer to others. God helps those who help themselves; but he especially delights to help those who are helpful to others. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus."—The Northern Christian Advocate.

Learn to entwine with your prayers the small cares, the trifling sorrows, the little wants of daily life. Whatever affects you—be it a changed look, an altered tone, an unkind word, a wrong, a wound, a demand you can not meet, a change you can not notice, a sorrow you can not disclose—bear it into prayer and send it up to God. Disclosures you may not make to man you can make to the Lord. Man may be too little for your great matters, God is not too great for your small ones. Only give yourself to prayer—whatever be the occasion that calls for it.—London Sunday-School Times.

There is no higher function which a human soul may take upon itself than this: to make men see and love God. It imparts to those who rise to its opportunities a sanctity and beauty past all power of speech to express. In countless households there are women who are patiently, in sweet unconsciousness of their saintly service, spelling the ways and mysteries of God in words so simple that he who runs may read. Year in and year out in these blessed homes God becomes real, near, and divinely compassionate through this silent revelation of character.—The Outlook.

We must not be in a hurry to fix and choose our own lot; we must wait to be guided. We are led on like little children, by a way that we know not. It is a vain thought to flee from the work that God appoints us, for the sake of finding a greater blessing to our own souls; as if we could choose for ourselves where we shall find the fullness of the divine presence, instead of seeking it where alone it is to be found, in loving obedience.—George Eliot.

The hour before attendance at religious service has vital relation to that service. The manner in which that hour is spent has much to do with the character and result of the after meeting. Those who prayerfully prepare themselves for divine worship open the way for direct approach to divine blessings; such persons never find any meeting unprofitable.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

In looking forward to future life, let us recollect that we have not to sustain all its toil, to endure all its sufferings, or to encounter all its crosses at once. One moment comes laden with its own little burden, then flies, and is succeeded by another no heavier than the last; if one could be sustained so can another and another.—Jane Taylor.

Not only is he idle who is doing nothing, but he that might be better employed.—Socrates.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. A. Breland, P. C., Camden circuit, Oct. 4: "We report for one month: Miles traveled on railroad, 140; by private conveyances, 70; sermons preached, 20; pastoral visits made, 15; funerals conducted, 2; members received, 6; adults baptized, 4."

Rev. S. S. Bogan, Slaughter charge: "We have just closed a ten days' meeting at Ethel, Sept. 30, resulting in ten accessions to the church, six infants baptized and three adults. I was ably assisted by Bros. C. C. Miller, W. R. Harrell and M. F. Johnson, all of Centenary College, Jackson, La. The Lord richly blessed us in our labors, and to him be the glory. God bless the ADVOCATE! It now makes 1 s appearance in a good many homes at Slaughter."

Rev. R. S. Gale, Meadville circuit, Oct. 8: "We have held four protracted meetings. At Meadville our meeting was quite a success. Several conversions and eight accessions. Rev. B. S. Rayner came to our help on Monday, and did some fine work. He is a strong, solid preacher; denounces sin in every shape and form. At Nebo we had a delightful time. Fifteen conversions and two accessions. Rev. R. E. Rutledge was our help—the right man in the right place. By his sweet and genile preaching he won all hearts. At Galatia Rev. L. S. Jones, our presiding elder, did all the preaching, and it was well done. Several conversions and two accessions. At Oak Grove we had a good meeting. Church quickened and eight added to the church. Our circuit is in a very good condition. Finances coming up well. Expect to make a good report in December. On Sept. 30, while we were out calling, the good people in and around Meadville took possession of the parsonage, and when we returned we found too much to mention. Suffice it to say, wife is now busy sewing and soon all will be clothed for the Winter. Thank you, friends; your kindness, to me and mine shall ever be remembered. God's blessings upon you and yours!"

Rev. J. H. Foreman, P. C., Oaffadeliah, Miss., Oct. 1: "I send you some accounts of Neshoba circuit. I am just through with my protracted meetings for this season. We have had some good meetings. We have six churches on Neshoba circuit, and we have held seven protracted meetings—five of which was decided successes. Many backsliders were reclaimed; quite a number of conversions, 19 additions to the church. All praise to the Lord who must give the increase!—though Paul preach and Apollos water. We have had valuable help in the way of preaching. Rev. F. B. Ormond, of the Linwood charge, was with us in two of our meetings and did a good work. Rev. Irvin Miller, of Walnut Grove, was with us in one meeting, and did all the preaching to the delight and pleasure of the congregation that heard him. Rev. J. C. Long has been in and out among us all the year, and has done some valuable work. Bros. Hays and Vandenburg, of Walnut Grove, was with us in our first meeting at Philadelphia, and did a good work. We closed our protracted meetings for this year with our third Quarterly Conference, at which time we had the pleasure of having our faithful and much-beloved presiding elder with us—Rev. R. J. Jones, of Meridian, who preached us eleven very interesting sermons, enjoyed by all that heard them. He made for himself a host of friends while with us at Philadelphia. Neshoba charge is in a very good condition, spiritually. We are doing all we can on our Conference collections, and hope to be able to make a good report at Conference. Pray for us."

Rev. E. S. Isbell, Calhoun, La., Oct. 4: "Since my last report I have held two successful meetings: one at Cadeville, the other at Calhoun. My meeting at Cadeville continued five days, and the members of the different churches represented were gloriously revived, and the effects of the meeting were felt throughout the entire community. Many conversions and but few additions, as nearly all present were members of some church. A good Conference collection taken up in cash and subscriptions. My meeting at Calhoun commenced at the appointed time and continued nine days. Bro. M. M. Morphis, of Tehuacana, Texas, was with me and did the preaching. A more glorious religious upheaval I have never witnessed, reaching every class in the town and community. As the immediate results, there were more than one hundred conversions and reclamations; forty accessions to the Methodist Church, and twenty-four to the Baptist, with others to join each church. Bro. Morphis is a man of many propositions, by means of which he gets the church to work, and then the real work of the meeting begins, viz., sinners are invited to the altar, and to kneel in the congregation; Christians are invited to kneel beside and pray for them, which they do, and God wonderfully blesses the labors of his servants. This is the sum of the whole machinery. There is no clap-trap work in it, such as the joining of the church by the lifting of hands, etc. After sinners are converted, then they are invited to join the church of their choice. I can commend Bro. Morphis to any who may desire his services."

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND SUMMER SUNDAY SCHOOL.

This school held its closing session on Sept. 22, after an existence of fifteen weeks. The first session was held on June 9 in the historic Felicity Hall of Prayer, where the usual organization was effected and the work in behalf of our Brazil Mission in Piracicaba was resumed. The school is regularly supplied with all our literature; while its attendance is made up of a number of transients, besides residents on the camp ground—these are members of the various evangelical churches in addition to our own. A good work is accomplished in keeping the children in touch with the regular Bible lessons taught in their home schools, as well as interesting them in our mission work and educating them in the grace of giving. The published letters from our missionaries in Brazil are carefully read to them, in order to draw out their sympathy for those children living in a country filled with idolatry, ignorance and superstition.

We call for their offerings, in behalf of our mission work, every Sunday. Each class has a name, and responds, when called, through the scholar handing in the largest contribution. Their enthusiasm is thereby aroused, and kept alive throughout the term by the prizes offered by the superintendent to the three scholars who may be banner scholars for the largest amount when the season closes.

The following is a list of the classes, and amounts contributed by each during the past term:

Bible class (adults)	$11 35
Lambs of the Fold ("the little folks")	5 87
Soldiers of the Cross (boys)	2 75
Pearl Seekers (girls)	2 40
Flower Gatherers (girls)	1 75
Pillars of the Temple (boys)	1 70
Lilies of the Valley (girls)	1 45
Gleaners (girls)	65
Band of Hope (boys)	55
Always Ready (boys)	30
	$28 27
Sundry individual contributions	2 57
Birthda offering—special service	12 81
	$43 65
Deduct for Literature and Picture Roll	8 15

SOULE CHAPEL NEIGHBORHOOD.

This historic church, as its name imparts, is fragrant with precious memories, bearing the name of the noble Bishop who embraced the cause of truth and right in spite of the prejudice of nativity and education. This beautiful church is in Noxubee county, belonging to the Brooksville circuit. Let me write a few lines, giving an account of Children's Day, celebrated the second Sunday of June, last. A pleasant ride through varied scenery, now passing fields with growing crops, the expectant harvest of the adjacent farms; then passing through shady thickets, where glancing sunshine brightens the leafy groves, brings us to a dense tract of trees. We drive rapidly up a slight ascend and arrive in front of this lovely Soule Chapel, embowered in a beautiful forest. "The groves were God's first temples." There is something peculiarly attractive in the worship of a country church, away from the shriek of the locomotive, nor disturbed by the noise of careless passersby on a crowded street. There are many carriages, wagons' vehicles of all kinds, and horses standing, resting in the shade. Faces of happy, innocent children bright with pleasure (for is not this their day?) pressing to greet the pastor who has the peculiar gift of winning their hearts.

"E'en children gathered with endearing wile,
And plucked his gown to share the good man's smile."

We are good Methodists, and accept the itinerancy as a wise institution, but regret to think this must be Bro. Cogdell's last year with us. Now we pass into the church, called by the sweet hymns they are singing. Here were pretty, simple decorations, mottoes suited to the day. "Suffer little children," etc., and others worked with evergreen letters, fresh flowers, and all making an object lesson more impressive than many a labored discourse. The children, after the song, said many appropriate recitations, those older read such pieces as would be interesting and instructive, carrying on the excellent programme for the year, which is calculated to give much useful information as to the public enterprises of the church, of which we are too often ignorant.

Were we more abreast with the times and movements of missionary work, we would surely never want to keep back anything we could possibly give. The old proverb is true, in substance this, "What I spent I lost, what I gave I kept." After the children's exercises we had an earnest, interesting address from our pastor, and, with closing hymns, etc., the services ended. As we pass into the aisle we had kindly greetings, friendly words from all, making us feel that we are all brethren and sisters here.

I would like just, in passing, to note the picturesque cemetery near the church, "God's acre," where rests the sacred dust of so many of the "giants in those days" now past. First, there sleeps Major Kiger, a leader in this county in Church and State, earnest for his God and his country. Here also Mrs. Augnains, whose hoary head, her crown of glory, was a loved object in the church and community, and at last, like a shock of corn in due season, was gathered by the reaper, Death. Here also are many loved and honored names, the young men and women who in their pride and beauty were stricken in early youth—all sleeping till resurrection morn. But I trespass up further. We go home feeling a door keeper in the house of God is better than treasures, etc. We thank God and take courage. It was good to be here. God bless the church, pastor and members, especially the little ones.

A Chance for Women to Make Money!

I saw one of your subscribers tell in your columns a few weeks ago how she made money selling Dish Washers. I wrote to the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and obtained one of their Dish Washers and tried it myself first. It is just lovely; you can wash and dry the dishes for a family in two minutes, without touching your hands to a dish or putting them in hot water. I made the first day $5 00, and everybody wanted a Dish Washer just as soon as they saw me wash their dishes. Since then I have made as high as $18 a day, and I believe that I can get enough money to keep my brother at school next winter and have money in the bank, too. Any lady or gentleman can do as well as I am doing, I am sure, as I had no experience. When everybody wants to buy, it is not hard to sell. Anyone can get information by writing the above firm, and I am glad to add my experience, because I think it is my duty to others to help them over the hard times.

Honesty in Prayer.

Our prayers should be frequently examined to see whatever we are asking for what we really want, or only for the things we have an idea we ought to want. There is too much of this unreality and practical dishonesty current both in the closet and the public prayer-room. People sometimes get into quite a glow of pleasurable devotional excitement as they pray; their imagination works finely, they have a good flow of language, and become somewhat healed with their own rhetoric, and as the fine phrases roll trippingly off the tongue they ask for things which they would not only be much astonished to receive, but actually sorry, in their cooler moments, to get. What we sincerely desire we shall be willing to pay the price for; and there is always a price attached—that is, a condition. If we want to sit on the right hand of Jesus, we must be willing to drink of his cup. There is much more of poetry than of piety in some prayers. They sound well, but the Lord, who knows the heart, does not find satisfaction in them. "Lip prayers or lost prayers." "Don't pray cream, and live skim milk."—Zion's Herald.

Love is greater than faith, because the end is greater than the means. What is the use of having faith? It is to connect the soul with God. And what is the use of being connected with God? It is to become like God; for God is love.—Henry Drummond.

Life is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the same dark journey with us. O be swift to love! Make haste to be kind.—Amiel.

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. "Where to Rest Without an Appeal."

The St. Louis Advocate, of the second, contains an editorial "write-up" of the recent session of the St. Louis Conference, from which we make the following extract:

DOCTORS DIFFER.

One evening our general book agent preached one of the most entertaining sermons we ever heard from him on the life and character of Jacob. "Excepting the Man of Galilee, no better or nobler character ever lived on this earth," said the book agent. The next evening our book editor preached a very strong and helpful sermon to an immense and appreciative audience, in which he regarded Jacob, previous to his Jabbok experience, as one of the grandest rascals of the olden time. Between these two great and good men their audience is somewhat bewildered and hardly knows where to rest without an appeal. Let us hear from others of our connectional officers on the character of Jacob. Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde were hardly more antipodal in character than the two pictures here drawn by two such master-artists. Who will give us a brief biography of Jacob suitable for our Epworth League and Sunday-school libraries? We nominate Bishop A. G. Haygood to write such a book, which we believe would have an extensive sale.

We second Dr. Palmore's motion for a life of Jacob from the pen of Bishop Haygood. The theme is worthy of any pen, and we have no abler pen than Haygood's. But we wish it distinctly understood that we second the motion from a very different motive from that which seems to animate Dr. Palmore in making it. His idea seems to be that we need such a book in order that we may know whether Jacob was a saint from childhood up, or only during the later years of his life. To this we demur. On this point the Scriptures are so full and explicit that we can see no foundation whatever for a difference of opinion. The Bible teaches as clearly as language can be made to teach anything, that Jacob, during his earlier years, was not only not a saint, but that he was an extraordinarily bad man. Did he not buy Esau's birthright for "a mess of pottage?" And who will attempt to defend him on moral and religious grounds for this act? Suppose a young man at the present day should drive such a bargain with his own brother under such circumstances—take from him when faint with hunger an inheritance worth many thousands of dollars (to say nothing of other items) for the paltry consideration of a morsel of food. Would he not be universally condemned? Gambling is high-toned morality in comparison with such an act. Of course, Esau was culpable; but that does not justify Jacob.

Again, at a later period we find him perpetrating an outrageous fraud not only upon this same brother, but also upon his father, who was aged and blind. He was not only guilty of fraud, but in order to consummate this fraud he told a wicked lie. Paganism would scorn to inculcate such morality. The man who can successfully defend Jacob at this point is competent to the task of defending Ananias and Sapphira.

Jacob's later life was most exemplary, and his death was one of the most glorious ever portrayed by the pen of inspiration; but this does not authorize us to predicate saintliness of him from infancy up. Jacob's life, like that of Saul of Tarsus and many others, divides itself into two parts, which are thoroughly dissimilar. Saul was transformed into Paul; and Jacob, the Supplanter, became Israel, the Prince. Jacob's later years are worthy of the highest eulogy that can be pronounced upon them; but not so of his earlier life. The Scriptures record his vices, but nowhere do they set the seal of their approval upon them. We would just as soon undertake to defend the adultery of David, the lying and profanity of Peter, or the treachery of Judas, as to justify Jacob in the above-mentioned acts of his early life which God has seen fit to record for our instruction. We will not assume such a task until God gives us a new Bible with the Decalogue left out, and with a new verse in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews reading somewhat after this fashion: "By faith Jacob bought Esau's birthright for a mess of pottage; by faith also he lied unto his father, and thus deceived him and procured the blessing intended for Esau, knowing that otherwise God would not be able to fulfill his promises."

If we had the ear of those Missourians who are "bewildered and hardly know where to rest without an appeal," we would suggest that they appeal to the Bible. That Holy Book forbids lying, fraud and extortion in all their forms and phases, and hurls anathemas against all who engage in them.

It is one of the most alarming features of the church life of the present day that there are multitudes of professing Christians who are easily "bewildered" concerning matters on which the Scriptures speak with no uncertain sound. All the D. D.'s in the universe, and all the Bishops as well, ought not to be able to "bewilder" a Christian audience on a point of this sort. If the Bible does not settle questions of this character, then of what use is it? Would not the Koran do as well?

What the Laymen Think.

The St. Louis Advocate, of the ninth, contains a symposium of eight articles from representative American laymen concerning the value of the religious press. The following is one of the articles. It is from the pen of Hon. Elijah A. Morse, Member of Congress, Twelfth District, Mass.:

I take the leading religious newspapers of the country, and as a public man and a member of Congress, I find the editorials and comments of these papers upon the public affairs and questions of the day instructive and exceedingly helpful to me in the discharge of my public duties. The high moral and religious ground from which these observations and editorials are written, and the absence of political animosity, makes them especially instructive and helpful. All great moral reforms, all great charities and philanthropies, the cause of education, the cause of good citizenship and good government are being prompted and set forward by the religious press of the country, and they are doing much to hasten that day, so long predicted in the Book, when none shall say, "Know thou the Lord, for all shall know him, from the least even unto the greatest."

Dr. Featherstun's Fund.

The communication of Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, on our second page, merits special consideration. Sermon factories have been in existence in England for a long while. A preacher who is too stupid or too lazy to manufacture a sermon can have one made to order on any subject in good English for a small monetary consideration. It is said that these sermon-factories do a thriving business. There are numbers of preachers who make no sermons of their own, but make yearly contracts with these establishments. This business has recently gained a footing in America, and, though it is conducted here on a comparatively small scale, it is said to be gradually extending its operations into new fields. Dr. Featherstun calls attention to a new feature of this business. The preachers are no longer to have a monopoly of its benefits. School-boys and school-girls and commencement orators generally are to be equal participants. What a boon to Young America! No more ransacking histories and cyclopædias and the nooks and corners of literature in search of materials for an essay or an oration. No more laborious writing, revising and rewriting. What would be the sense in going through all this irksome drudgery to bring into existence a very mediocre literary production, when a few dollars will buy a much better one? So the school-boys and school-girls will reason. This is a matter that should not be overlooked by educators. Whenever this practice becomes general, then we favor abolishing commencement oratory altogether.

BOOKS.

"THE SPIRIT OF THE AGE," and other Sermons. By David J. Burrell, D. D., Pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, New York City. 331 pages. Bound in cloth. Price, $1.50, postpaid. Wilbur B Ketcham, Publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

These sermons are reported from the author's own lips and comprise the sermons delivered on Sunday morning during the past year. Dr. Burrell's sermons are vigorous and spirited presentations of truth and reveal a master-hand in their preparation. He has a happy faculty of getting at the central truth of a passage, and then stating it tersely and pointedly. He uses vigorous, forceful Anglo-Saxon. He gives men something to think about in every sermon, and puts it in a clear way. His thoughts are inspiring, sentences are suggestive and often eloquent. Sound in doctrine, simple in diction, forcible in argument, happy in illustration, and faithful in application.

THE SWORD OF THE LORD: AND HOW TO USE IT. By D. W. Whittle, the well-known evangelist, and author of "Life, Warfare, and Victory," "Thus Saith the Lord," etc. Vest-pocket size, bound in flexible leather. Price, postpaid, 25 cents, net.

This valuable little book contains two series of "Forty Questions": (1) From Christian Workers, about the equipment for work, plans for special meetings, and the best methods of conducting all forms of evangelistic services; (2) From inquirers, including all the difficulties and objections offered by those who are invited to become Christians, with full Scripture answers. Besides these there are tables of Bible Weights, etc., an Outline for Reading the Bible Through in One Year, and a poem full of suggestion—"Why Art Thou Cast Down, O My Soul?"

Every young Christian, every pastor who plans special services, and everyone assisting in evangelistic work, will be helped by this.

In Japan there are more than 1,200 places where Christianity is taught; more than 7,000 Protestant schools, and every year about 1,800 young persons go out from these schools into the life of the nation.—Holston Methodist.

Books Needed.

Solomon said that there was no end to the making of books in his day, and if he were here to-day he would say the same thing with a greater emphasis. Though the assertion of the wise man is true, still every person who reads much feels that there are some books which need yet to be written. But that is not what I mean by my caption. I mean that there are a great many valuable books now in existence which we need in the libraries of Centenary College. We have been so "poor in purse" since the reorganization of our college just after the war that we have added nothing whatever of modern literature to our libraries. I suppose we have as good a selection of old books as can be found anywhere, and I know we have some of the rarest books in existence. But no college can do good work these days whose literature belongs almost exclusively to the past. We do not undervalue what we have. We make the best possible use of it. But humanity grows and runs as it grows, and the press sends out constantly a vast number of books touching upon the vital interests of the present; and how can we educate our boys for future usefulness if we do not bring them in personal contact with the books that are being made by the great leaders of the thought and work of to-day?

If there is any part of a college which needs a permanent and ample endowment, it is its library. While text books are necessary, reference books are necessary also. There are many interesting questions which come up in the class-room which are not fully discussed in the text books, and, of course, can not be definitely settled without access to the best and fullest and latest sources of information. Here is where we are in need. I believe this need can be easily supplied.

There are many persons who read this little note who have the very books we need, and they are lying idle on the shelves. Why not send them to our library, where they will work for good through all the coming years? There are many persons who read this note who could without any special self-denial send us a dollar, and we could put it to good use in supplying our boys with fresh literature, which will broaden their minds and fit them the better for the future. There are many persons who read this note, who, having done either of the above, will feel better than they have felt for a long time. The doing of such little things always results in double good, and who would not do that sort of good?

If pastors would always follow the plan of writing, when any members of their church move away, to the pastor of the church where they are going, recommending them to his courtesy and care, it would save a good many members who are now lost to our church, and often to the cause of religion. As a pastor, we have always followed this plan, not only with communicants, but with those identified in any way with the church, and the results have been such as to fully satisfy all the labor that was involved.—Michigan Presbyterian.

From information to date, Emory, Wesleyan at Macon, LaGrange Female College, Andrew Female, and Dalton Female are all opening with an unusually large number of pupils. Oxford will likely run to three hundred. Wesleyan and LaGrange are far beyond former years in number. We are rejoiced to know that our people are waking up on the subject of Christian education.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

Rev. Z. A. Parker, of the North Alabama Conference, has been elected to the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Dr. V. O. Hawkins, president of Athens Female College. The college will be entirely reorganized in its teaching force. The boarding capacity will be increased by the erection of additional buildings. The new administration begins under most favorable auspices. The outlook is exceedingly bright.

Miss Florence Nightingale, at the age of seventy-four, is enjoying excellent health. She is said to be a rich woman, having, beside some private means, the £50 000 publicly subscribed for her by the English people at the close of the Crimean War. Quite recently she confided to a friend her intention to settle the money as a trust, the interest to be devoted to nursing wounded soldiers, should her country ever again be engaged in a war with a European power.—Pittsburg Advocate.

On the evening of the fifteenth we had the pleasure of celebrating the rites of matrimony between Mr. J. K. Donn, of Paducah, Ky. (formerly of Water Valley, Miss.), and Miss Lexie Lewis, of this city. The marriage took place at the residence of the bride's father, 2835 Carondelet street. The bridal party left the next day for their home in Paducah. The bride is a niece of Revs. W. B. and H. P. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference. May prosperity and happiness be their lot through life!

Bishop Coxe, of the diocese of Western New York, preached the opening sermon at the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, now in session in Minneapolis. The following quotation from it is now going the rounds of the secular papers: "The apostle's terrible portraiture of final apostasy is paralleled by what comes to us in journals at every day's report. Shameless nudity in bathing and semi-nudity in evening attire, with lascivious dances, long banished by Christian decorum from social life, are flagrantly characteristic of American manners." Remember, this is not from a Methodist, but from a Protestant Episcopal episcopos.

The City of Mexico, which is filled by nature to be one of the healthiest cities in the world, has been for generations one of the sickliest, its annual death rate being about four per cent.—nearly twice that of New York. This anomalous condition is largely due to the want of proper sewerage. This desideratum has at last been supplied. A sewerage canal twenty-nine miles long has been constructed at an expense of $13 000,000. The canal penetrates one of the environing mountains and discharges its contents in the regions beyond. A rapid decline in the death rate is confidently anticipated. The canal has been in progress of construction about twelve years.

In the twenty-nine Conferences whose votes on the constitutional amendment to make women eligible have reached us, 8,198 ballots have been cast, of which 2 445 are in favor of admission. This is more than the necessary three-fourths majority. Excluding the five large German Conferences from the list, the vote stands 2,451 in favor of admission to 365 against, or nearly seven to one. We feel certain that if the English-speaking Conferences alone could settle this question it would be done very decisively in behalf of woman's cause, and this, too, in spite of the extreme conservatism engendered by one or two official papers.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

Two statisticians working independently have collected statistics running through a number of years showing how longevity is affected by the story of a house in which one lives. Their figures show that the average length of life among those who reside in underground basements is a fraction less than forty years. On the ground floor the average is about forty-three and a fourth years. On the second and third floors the average is forty-four and a sixth years. On the fourth and fifth floors the average is only forty-two years. Thus it seems to be established that sleeping apartments ought, if possible, to be on the second and third floors. It is hardly necessary to say that these figures apply exclusively to cities. In the country the difference between the first and second floors would be exceedingly small.

Letter from Meridian.

BY REV. R. S. WOODWARD.

MR. EDITOR: We donnt tronble yon, any other "knight of the tripod," often from this part of our Zion. Presiding Holloman occasionally gives yon an article from his racy pen; but he is very busy with his college work now to indulge in the luxury of journalistic utterances. Though not the equal of Bro. Mellen in swiftness, nor as handsome as our "beloved presiding elder," R. J. Jones, neither possessing the dignified elegance or stature of Dr. Andrews, he has a very engaging manner of his own, original, pleasing and exceedingly becoming. Gentle, kind and persuasive in government, he commands the universal esteem of the governed.

East Mississippi Female College is in better trim than it has been for years. We are much pleased with the entire faculty. We would not change one of them. The opening was good, and everything is moving off nicely. Central Church is in a healthier condition, I think, than at any time since my pastorate began here. We had a most glorious daily service of two weeks in the latter part of September. Not a sermon was preached except on Sunday. We spent an hour daily from 5 to 6 P. M. in songs, prayers, Bible readings, short talks, etc., varying the exercises as the spirit indicated. These services were largely attended, and we think did much good. Our people are loyal church goers.

Bro. J. W. Chambers spent last Sunday with us, and gave us two excellent sermons. The morning sermon was followed by the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. There were a large number of communicants and a precious season of grace. The night sermon was followed by a hearty handshaking and a renewing of our covenants to do the will of the Lord more faithfully.

Rev. J. T. Nicholson spent the fifth Sunday with us, and preached a good practical sermon in the morning. Rev. J. P. Bradford also preached for us acceptably to our edification and pleasure.

Our Epworth League has improved. The Sunday-school—the largest in the city of any denomination—is flourishing. It has the largest regular attendance of all classes—from wee tots to old folks, not excepting eight-year-old boys and sixteen-year-old girls of any school I have been connected with. We draw our teachers from the advanced classes, and have such an abundant supply that we are never under the necessity of taking one of doubtful Christian character or fitness. This applies also to the choir and all official places in the departments of church work.

A society lady gave us quite a compliment recently. She said, "I attend the theatre and popular balls of the city, but I never see a Methodist at one of them." This, as applied to the greater part of our membership, is true; but a very few among us are lovers of pleasure more than of God," much to the grief and humiliation of the pastor and the more consistent and devout element in the church. We hold that worldly, pleasure-seeking members are not suitable persons to teach in our Sunday-schools, sing in our choirs, hold official positions in our Leagues, or indeed any other place of leadership in the church. God can use such for his glory. Therefore, we should be our constant and prayerful effort to bring our entire membership up to that state of consecration where he can use them for the advancement of his kingdom.

Our Woman's Missionary Society is active and doing good work. The meeting of the Woman's Board here was an occasion to be remembered with pleasure for a lifetime. Our juvenile and Sunday-school missionary work is in advance of any financial work in the church. The Woman's Aid, Nos. 1 and 2, are regular and faithful. The gentleman's prayer meeting is a strong factor of spiritual strength in the church. Our weekly church and cottage prayer meetings are taking on new life since the Summer's heat has passed. The Sunday afternoon services for prisoners is an important and successful work conducted by some of our faithful laymen.

Now, Doctor, we have a rare and most interesting prayer meeting every Friday afternoon, conducted by laymen of our church, known as "the Policemen's Prayer Meeting," and I am told every policeman in the city longs to it, and they attend with remarkable unanimity and interest. We are preaching and laboring to the old scriptural holiness. True, we do not all pronounce the Shibboleth right, but we are pressing the life rather than the technical password. I believe our old Methodist ship will weather the storm, and that we will yet become a united people. Extremes and uncharitable men will come to an end or pass away, and Christian charity will take the place of intolerance. The ebullition has reached its crucial, the seething process will soon have accomplished its work, and the church will be calmer and clearer and stronger than ever before in the history of our beloved Methodism. How is this? Why, every Methodist who has any spiritual or intelligent concern for his church has become a student of Methodist theology and polity as well as history. Some may have been actuated by motives of ambition, that they might arm themselves for war against those of opposing sentiments. But such an honest, diligent and prayerful search after the truth, among the better element of the church, has not been known since the days of Wesley. This can not be a fruitless investigation. All of this brain and heart work, consecrated to a diligent search for the truth, must be rewarded in clearing away the difficulties that obstruct the light. I think I was well instructed on this subject from my youth, and had the advantage of some bright examples, for which I am devoutly thankful. But I do not claim infallibility for myself or my teachers. As a rule, we can give those who differ with us credit for being sincere. The few, on either side, who know they are right, and that those who differ with them are wrong and yet have no plain, "Thus saith the Lord," for their assertions, are in danger of warping or perverting the Scriptures to suit their views. Such are not to be trusted as safe guides, but are likely to produce discord and schism in the church. We need more of the gentle, loving spirit of John—yea, we want to be more Christ-like! Heated discussions generally bring strife, for "they savor not of the things of Christ." "Charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, thinketh no evil." Let us pray for the peace of Jerusalem."

We have felt the stringency in finances this year, but "Central Church" expects to pay in full. So, I think, of all our churches in the city. Our country brethren are wreathed in smiles since the late rise in cotton.

Questions of Importance.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read paragraph 120 in our Discipline, which reads, that is the duty of the pastor in charge of a work to preach the gospel, and in the absence of the presiding elder or Bishop to control the appointments of all the services to be held in the churches in his charge.

Question 1—Are laymen loyal who invite other ministers to come into their pastor's territory without the consent of their pastor?

Question 2—Can a Methodist minister, without violating every rule of courtesy, go into another pastor's charge, unless he be invited by the pastor? Can he go simply on invitation by loyal laymen, who have not consulted the pastor, without producing confusion, in encouraging disrespect to our government?

MEMBER, METHODIST CHURCH.

Corner Stone Laid.

This morning, in the presence of a large concourse of people, Rev. C. A. Powell, P. E., assisted by the pastor in charge, conducted the impressive ceremony of laying the corner stone of the Lumberton Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In addition to the various articles mentioned in the Discipline, a paper containing the names of Dr. David Morton and the Board of Church Extension, setting forth the aid derived from said Board, was placed within the stone. This church, when completed, will cost between two thousand and twenty-five hundred dollars and will be one of the handsomest houses of worship between New Orleans and Meridian.

Lumberton, Miss., Oct 10, 1895.

Official Notice.

Inasmuch as the law of the church has been conferred in the control of the services of the Palmer Creek Camp Meeting by the presiding elder, and satisfactory assurance given to adjust to the administration, I have reappointed Rev. E. T. Breland to Whittington circuit, and Rev. G. R. Ellis to Enon-Salem circuit.

Holiness Association.

The East Mississippi Holiness Association will be held in Meridian, Miss. from Oct. 22 to 31. Rev. H. C. Morrison, evangelist, will conduct the services assisted by other workers. The only object of the meeting is the conversion of sinners and the entire sanctification of believers, according to the teachings of Mr. Wesley's "Plain Account of Christian Perfection." All preachers and workers are cordially invited to attend. All preachers will be entertained.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE CHOOSING OF THE SEVEN.

(Acts vi, 1-8.)

1. The apostles did not deem it right to leave the Word of God and serve tables.

(1) A faithful preacher is half of his time among his books, the other half among his people.

(2) It is indicative of spiritual degeneracy when among preachers the best financier, securing large collections, and skillful business manager, is deemed chief.

(3) Too many of our preachers are burdened with the temporal affairs of their churches. Soon, not the blood of Christ, but money becomes the habitual theme.

2. The apostles chose seven stewards to attend to the wants of the poor, etc. The elected were men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom.

(1) Many churches thrive not because stewards and trustees possess not these qualifications. A worldly steward and a spiritual church are never found together.

(2) The induction into office should, as a rule, be more impressively religious. Should be invited to the altar, and after fervent prayer and pertinent exhortation be introduced to the congregation.

3. The commendable design of the apostles. "We will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the Word."

(1) Prayer first. Prayer always. 'Tis the greatest praise when a preacher is called a man of prayer.

(2) Public prayer should be made a matter of study. Threadbare iterations and commonplace phraseology nauseate.

(3) A pastoral visit without prayer is a misnomer. Pray when visiting.

(4) Preaching is "ministry of the Word." Too much wordy pyrotechny. 'Tis the Word of God which is "quick and powerful."

A Literary Programme for Epworth League Meeting.

1. President read Isaiah ix, 19, 20 Hymn 38 Prayer.
2. Every member read a Bible verse to which the word "sun" occurs.
3. Hymn 900.
4. The Sun: Nature and Influence. (Lecture, by an invited guest.)
5. Hymn 93. (Two verses.)
6. Sunshine in the Family. (A brief treatise by a female member.)
7. Sunshine in the Church, Sunday-school and Epworth League. (A brief treatise by a male member.)
8. Hymn 101.
9. Sunshine in the World around Us. (Short lecture by the pastor.)
10. Hymn 910. Benediction.

Union Epworth League.

A most enjoyable meeting of the Union Epworth League was held in the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Representatives of nearly every League in the city were present. Every League has accomplished much good during the past month, and frequent allusions were made to the success of the first Epworth League Conference.

The following were elected to serve as officers for the coming six months. President, J. T. Crebbin; first vice-president, H. B. Ruse; second vice-president, E. H. Prescott; third vice-president, T. L. McKnight; secretary, Miss A. S. McKnight; treasurer, Miss S. Lutz; editor, Rev. H. H. Ahrens.

The president appointed T. O. Adams, H. B. Ruse and Mrs. H. H. Ahrens as the Programme Committee.

During the past six months two new Leagues have been added to the Union.

Every League in the city will take an active interest in the tent meeting now in progress.

Louisiana State Conference.

Epworth Leaguers in this city are congratulating themselves that the next Conference will be held in this city next May. The result of the last Conference is already being exhibited in the different Leagues. The delegates from the country, including the preachers, have promised to lend their efforts for the success of the next meeting.

The officers for the ensuing year are: President, W. M. Sloan, Shreveport; first vice-president, Rev. H. H. Ahrens, New Orleans; second vice-president, Rev. Thos. Carter, Jackson; third vice-president, Miss Roberta Grout, Patterson; secretary, H. B. Ruse; statistical secretary, Miss A. S. McKnight; treasurer, E. H. Prescott.

The idea of having field secretaries is meeting with much favor, and about $175 has already been collected for that purpose.

A Correction.

In the sixteenth annual report of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, held at Crystal Springs, Miss., the Meridian district is reported as paying $37.10, when it should have been $401 82. The Meridian district pays more than any other district in our Conference, and it is due the societies that this correction be made.

The Holman Bible for $1 65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Oct., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Oct., '97, can get this Bible at $1 35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2 45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

NOT LOST.

BY ELLEN M. COMSTOCK

"They are not lost." Oh! say this in your weeping
O'er the still faces that your lips have kissed;
For God himself doth take unto his keeping
The jewels from our household treasures missed.

He, the great Father, knows each heart's sore aching;
His hand will wipe away the falling tears,
And gather up the links, unclasped and breaking,
To shine undimmed through the eternal years.

—Woman's Journal.

Food for the Mind.

A vast army of idlers are drifting on the ocean of life without hope or purpose. The responsibility of their nonentity and ruin rests with the home. Hungering and longing for something to fill the empty hours, they idle away their time on the streets because home offers nothing better. The boy whose soul has been cultured in the home atmosphere where Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes, Cooper, and like authors are familiar friends, will not readily seek debased companions. He who has, from childhood, felt the inspiration of example flowing into his soul from such men as Washington, Webster, Clay, and Lincoln, will be likely to form noble ideals and purposes of life. He will catch the inspiring thought of the poet:

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime."

There is no excuse for the home without books, in the present age. They may be had by the most limited in purse. The few cents saved from some mere vanity will purchase the masterpiece of any of the great writers. A very few dollars each year will keep the home supplied with a few fresh books which will prove a benediction to its youth. Even if the cost were greater, no home could afford to do without books. It would be better to dispense with some furniture, and some of the things that produce mere beauty, than to neglect to provide for the intellect.

Religion for the Young.

Did it ever occur to you how much the world is dominated by the idea that religion is only for the day of darkness and doubt? When the clouds gather thickly, almost everybody has a prayer to say. They are like the little child who naively confessed that he said his prayers only at night, "because in the day-time he could take care of himself." We are ready enough to feel that men and women who are drifting out of life, beyond the care and help of human hands, need the hand of the great Father to lead them through the unknown valley; and yet the awful crying need is for those who are trying to live in this life, where they are making not only their own, but others' destinies, without Christ.—The Outlook.

The Good Night Kiss.

How glad a true child is to kneel by his mother's knee and say his evening prayer, or to have his father kneel with him as he prays! How he enjoys words of approval or encouragement when they precede to good-night kiss from either parent! With what warmth and grateful affection his young heart glows as he feels the tender impress of his mother's hands or lips upon his forehead before he drops asleep. How bright and dear does that home seem to him at such an hour! How sorry he is for every word or act of unkindness which he then recalls from his conduct of the day! How ready he then is to confess his specific acts of misdoing, and all his remembered failures, and to make new resolves and purposes of doing for the future! Whatever else a child is impatient to grow away from, he does not readily outgrow the enjoyment of his mother's good-night. As long as she is willing to visit his bedside, and give him a kiss, with a loving word, just before he goes to sleep, he is sure to count that privilege of his home as something above price, and without which he would have a sense of sad lack. And at no time is he more sure than then to be ready to do whatever his mother would ask of him; at no time do gentle, tender words of loving counsel from her sink deeper into his heart, or make a stronger impression.

A Sensible Girl.

Some months ago a young English girl came to an American city to marry a young man to whom she was affianced in England, and who had come to this country two years previous to engage in business. She was to marry him at the home of a friend of her mother's with whom she was stopping. During the time she was making up her wedding outfit, he came to see her one evening, when he was just drunk enough to be foolish. She was shocked and pained beyond measure. She then learned for the first time that he was in the habit of drinking frequently to excess. She immediately stopped her preparations, and told him she couldn't marry him. He protested that she would drive him to distraction, promised never to drink another drop, etc. "No," she said, "I dare not trust my future happiness to a man who has formed such a habit. I came three thousand miles to marry a man I loved, and now, rather than marry a drunkard, I will go three thousand miles back again." And she went. Let all the women take this stand, and all the men who love law and order vote for prohibition.—Guardian.

Hurried, Worried, Wearied

Worry is a token of weakness and a cause of weariness. There is a calmness in strength; weakness struggles and exhausts itself in fruitless efforts.

"Probably nothing tires one so much as feeling hurried. When in the early morning the day's affairs press on one's attention beforehand, and there comes the wonder how in the world everything is to be accomplished; when every interruption is received impatiently, and the clock is watched in distress as the moments flit past, then the mind tires the body. We are wrong to drive ourselves with whip and spur in this way. Each of us is promised strength for the day, and we must not wear ourselves out. If only we keep cool and calm, we shall be less wearied when we have reached the eventide. The children may be fractions, the servants trying, the friend we love may fail to visit us, the letter we expect may not arrive; but if we can preserve our tranquility of soul and demeanor, we shall get through everything creditably."—Selected.

On Novel-Reading.

The young people who read the greatest number of novels know the least, are the dullest in aspect, and the most vapid in conversation. The flavor of individuality has been burned out of them. Always imagining themselves in an artificial relation to life, always content to look through their author's glasses, they become as commonplace as pawns upon a chess-board. "Sir, we had a good talk!" was Sam Johnson's highest praise of those he met. But any talk save the dreariest commonplace and the most tiresome reiteration is impossible with the regulation reader of novels or player of games. And this is in my judgment, because God, by the very law of mind, must punish those who kill time instead of cultivating it. They can not help paying nature's penalty, and "mediocre," "failure" or "imbecile" will surely be stamped upon their foreheads.—Frances E. Willard.

How soon the dead drop out of the life and thought of men. There is something pathetic in the reflection that those who now hold the largest place in the lives of their fellows will very soon cease to be thought of when death has removed them from the scene of action. The gap is immediately filled up that death makes, and the busy world goes on as before. Even love after awhile ceases to miss the absent one, and finds new objects on which to lavish affection. There is something very humbling to self-importance in the realization that we are so inessential to the world around us. Even those interests which we have created survive us, if they are of any value to the world; others take our places and everything moves on as before. And yet not the same as before, either, for while we personally may be forgotten, influences set in motion by us survive. Whatever that is useful or good we have called into existence lives after us. Impressions we have made upon the characters of others survive, though we may cease to be thought of. Thus while we are forgotten, we nevertheless continue to live in the influences we have started, and in the impress that we have left on men.—Selected.

The Test.

A man came to Stephen Girard for work, and he told him to go down to the end of the lawn, and throw a huge pile of stones into the roadway, which he did. When he had completed this task he returned, and Girard told him to go back, and throw them all back again into the lawn. He wanted to test the man's spirit of obedience. He immediately obeyed without question. "You are just the man I want," said he, and he gave him a position of trust. God often appoints women to more tedious drudgery than men. His way of developing character is by giving us things to do that we do not see the reason for.—Prof. Moore.

GONE HOME.

BY MRS. S. W. HARTWELL.

Lines to Rev. R. A. Burroughs and wife on the death of their bright, beautiful little daughter, Sue Ella, who died at their home in Water Valley, Sept. 23, 1895, aged seven years seven months and sixteen days!

What else can fill the tender place,
Kept pure and sweet for baby's face?
What music like her little voice,
Can make our loving hearts rejoice?
The baby gone? Ah! sad the day,
That saw her beauty fade away.
How glad we'd watched a little longer
'Till her tiny limbs were stronger;
Such hopes we had for future years!
Alas! those hopes are quenched in tears,
Her wealth of waving golden hair,
Her soft blue eyes and brow so fair
Have often claimed our tender thought,
As in our hearts her place she wrought;
For who can know how firmly set,
In our loving hearts, this flowret?
Parents who have loved like we,
Full well they know our misery.
But oh! how sweet for us to know,
There's been an end of pain and woe,
For the little one we loved so well,
And numbers round the throne she'll swell.
Where we shall see her by and by
In the home we seek beyond the sky.
Her little life in love was spent,
She's filled the mission for which sent;
Earth was brighter for her being here,
Heaven seems to us so sweet and near;
We almost hear her dear lips say,
"Mama, He's just the same to-day."
She'd sing it oft so clear and sweet,
When on the porch, at eve, we'd meet.
We'll strive to think that God is good
The same as if we understood
Why this jewel, kindly lent,
Back to its owner must be sent.

Water Valley, Miss.

A friend of mine told me of a visit he had paid to a poor woman, overwhelmed with trouble in her little room; but she always seemed cheerful. She knew the Rock. "Why," said he, "Mary, you must have very dark days; they must overcome you with clouds sometimes." "Yes," she said, "but then I often find there's comfort in a cloud." "Comfort in a cloud, Mary?" "Yes," she said, "when I am very low and dark I go to the window, and if I see a heavy cloud, I think of those precious words, 'A cloud received him out of their sight;' and I look up and see the cloud sure enough, and then I think—well, that may be the cloud that hides him, and so you see there is comfort in a cloud."—Treasury of Religious Thought.

HYGIENE.

It's a Nap You Need.

"A dose of dozing"—that's good medicine, advocated by Hall's Journal of Health in the following pleasant way. Take the dose:

A room without a couch of some sort is only half furnished. Life is full of ups and downs, and all that saves the sanity of the mentally jaded and physically exhausted fortune-hunter is the periodical good cry and momentary loss of consciousness on the up-stairs lounge or the old sofa in the sitting-room. There are times when so many of the things that distract us could be straightened out and the way made clear if one only had a long, comfortable couch on whose soft bosom he can throw himself, boots and brains, stretch his weary frame, unmindful of tidies and tapestry, close his tired eyes, relax the tension of his muscles, and give his harassed mind a chance. Ten minutes of this soothing narcotic when the head throbs, the soul yearns for endless, dreamless, eternal rest, would make the vision clear, nerves steady, the heart light, and the star of hope shine again.

There is no doubt that the longing to die is mistaken for the need of a nap. Business men and working women want regular and systematic doses of dozing; and after a mossy bank in the shade of an old oak tree that succeeding seasons have converted into a tenement of song birds, there is nothing that can approach a big sofa, or a low, long couch placed in the corner, where tired nature can turn her face to the wall, and sleep and doze away the gloom.

Breakfast.

The influence of breakfast on the affairs of each day is little realized. The Watchman says:

It may be almost said, as goes breakfast so goes the day. The appearance of the breakfast table has power for good or ill over the appetite. It is not so much the kind of food placed before one, as it is the way in which it is served, that makes it inviting or uninviting. So, too, it makes a vast deal of difference whether one sits down to breakfast in a thankful, pleasant frame of mind, or in a moody and fault-finding spirit. Breakfast should be eaten amid smiles and cheery conversation. Bright looks and merry words are most excellent appetizers and digesters—better tonics than any apothecary can recommend. Nor, if it can be helped, is one's breakfast to be eaten hurriedly. It is much wiser to abridge the morning nap than to abridge the morning meal. If you want to be a pessimist, and win the reputation of a chronic growler, you are on the right road to success. A generous hour devoted to breakfast is time well spent. Eat leisurely and not too heartily, and you will be stronger and happier for it all the day. The art of breakfasting rightly is one of the distinguishing marks of higher civilization.

Eat Slowly.

Children should be trained to eat slowly, no matter how hungry or what important business is pressing. Much safer a little food well ground than a hearty meal swallowed in haste. Cold food is even more difficult to digest than hot if taken too rapidly. The normal temperature of the stomach is about ninety-eight degrees. Food has to be raised to this temperature before digestion can take place.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SCRAMBLED EGGS.—Break each egg by itself in a dish, before putting in the frying pan, which stands on the stove warmed and buttered. For each egg allow a tablespoon of milk, which put into the buttered "spider," as we call it here, and let it get hot before putting in the salt and eggs. Set where all will cool slowly, and don't stir until the whites begin to "set." Then move to where they will cook more rapidly, and stir with long strokes. (This will give the opaque part of it a chance to distribute in larger pieces than if cut by "chopping" and is prettier.) Turn into a hot dish while yet soft.—Exchange.

OBITUARIES.

ANDERSON—Mrs. HELEN M. ANDERSON was born in Louisville, Ky., Nov. 27, 1831; died at the home of her son, Dr. W. H. Anderson, Sardis Ky., Aug. 17, 1895. She was the wife of the late Rev. W. H. Anderson, A. M., M.D., D. D., of the Kentucky Conference, and the daughter of Samuel K. and Rebecca Richardson, of Louisville.

She was of Methodist stock, her father and mother both being Methodist. Her father was very active in helping to build one of Louisville's first Methodist Churches, and was prominent in assisting in establishing the Western Cemetery, of that city, where Sister Anderson was buried. She had four sisters and one brother. Two sisters—Mrs. H. B. Grant and Mrs. James Chambers, both of Louisville—still live. She was married, in Louisville, by Rev. Wm. Holman, to Rev. W. H. Anderson, on Feb. 23, 1853, from which union there was born four daughters and one son. The daughters—Mollie, Maggie, Jenale and Eliza—have preceded her to the grave. The son, W. H. Anderson, M. D., lives to mourn his loss. We think, to the memory of both his departed parents, he is a high credit, being one of Kentucky's very promising young physicians and a member of the M. E. Church, South, and a very efficient steward in the same; was converted last January. Her daughter, Mollie, left one son, Samuel A. Coughlin, a very excellent young man, whom his grandmother was privileged to see converted and join the church last January.

Sister Anderson joined the church at an early age, and told me that she was converted, I think, a camp meeting near Louisville, and near the age of thirteen. She was a woman with an unusually strong mind. She graduated at Science Hill College, Shelbyville, Ky. Her intellectual fervor never ceased; till her death she was a student. In a weary hour it was a treat to me to drop in and listen to her interesting and instructive conversations. She kept thoroughly posted as to what the church was doing throughout her borders and seemed delighted with every success. I found for me to know her better was to love her more.

When I came to Sardis I found her in the Sunday-school with a class of very bright little girls, who appeared very devoted to her; but she soon became too feeble to get to church. Her devotion to "Will and Sam," as she called her son and grandson, together with her tenderness toward her son's little two-year old boy, was beautiful. She talked to me very freely concerning her own soul and the spiritual welfare of "the boys," as she called them. She greeted me as pastor in words with the request that I do what I could for "Will and Sam." When the revival was held in which they were both converted she was not able to get to church, but had prayer meeting come to her house, and had me to come to her home and baptize Sam with water from river Jordan. She was to me in some respects like a mother. Her counsel was always wise and safe. Her last conversation to me was deeply spiritual. When I asked her with regard to the saving power of Christ, she said, in substance: "It is sufficient, and I am trying to live for the last hour."

I regretted very much that it was impossible for me to be with her at the last. A very appropriate, impressive and pathetic service was held at the house of her son, in Sardis, by Rev. W. H. Childers, of the M. E. Church, Sardis. At Louisville, Rev. J. H. Young, formerly of Kentucky Conference, ministered tenderly the last ritualistic ceremonies at the cemetery, where her body, by her husband's and with her family and friends, was laid to rest till He who gave life shall speak the sleeping dust into life again.

J. D. REDD.

PURVIANCE—Mrs. ELIZABETH FLETCHER PURVIANCE (nee Schrook) was born near Camden, S. C., March 3, 1809, and died in Camden, Miss., Sept. 11, 1895. She became a member of the M. E. Church in 1821, and was married to Mr. A. Purviance by Rev. Benjamin Capers, Nov 3, 1829. In 1833 she moved with her husband to Illinois, and thence, in 1838, to Camden, Miss. Bro. Purviance was a man of God, and she walked by his side in piety and peace till she was left a widow by his death in 1864.

She was indeed one of the "saints in the earth and of the excellent," of whom the Psalmist says, "In them is all my delight." The beauties and virtues of her character are among the divine results of Christianity, which demonstrates its heavenly origin by its heavenly fruits.

As wife, mother, neighbor and Christian, her daily living was an illustration of the work of the Holy Spirit. The remembrance of her in her community will long be as ointment poured forth. Her children rise up and call her blessed. They could wish no richer inheritance than the remembrance of such a mother. Many have the habit of growing angry or moody by turns, but she had the habit of rejoicing in God at her family prayers and amid the cares of domestic life.

Her final moments were such as her life might have led one to expect: some transient and bodily suffering, followed by a heavenly repose in the consciousness of her Savior's precious presence and of this sweetly saving love. It makes heaven seem nearer to see such a servant of God pass from earth into the promised land. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

ALLEN—JULIA FRANCES, wife of C. E. Allen, and daughter of John Henry and Mary Mollard Siebe was born in Crystal Springs, Miss., Jan. 12, 1817, and passed to her reward from her home near Crystal Springs, August, 1895.

The subject of this sketch was converted while young, and united with the Methodist Church, in which she lived consistently till death called her to the church triumphant.

In May 1886, she was married to Chas. E. Allen. One child was given them.

Sister Allen for four months was confined to her room, and most of the time to her bed. Her sickness and death was the most triumphant this writer ever saw. Her last weeks on earth were spent in exhorting her friends to live right, not simply to prepare for heaven, but for life. She did not speak of heaven and decease nervously, but calmly and as sweetly as a child would talk of home.

Her life had been one of trials and afflictions, and she said among her last words, "The Lord has been with me in the darkest hours of life, and to my view heaven is now open," and thus expressing her confidence in God, she suffered till she fell peacefully on sleep, awaiting the glorious resurrection.

We would commend husband, brothers, sister and child to the God of goodness and mercy. M. L. BENTON.

THOMAS—MARY FRANCES ELIZABETH THOMAS, daughter of J. W. and M. L. Thomas, of near Union, Newton county, Miss., was born Feb. 3, 1894, and died Sept. 1, 1895.

Little Bethie, as she was familiarly called, was an unusually bright child. She was just learning to talk and call "papa" and "mama." When she would hear papa coming she would run out on the gallery and call to him. She was a great pet with her grandparents and aunties. She was the only little one in the whole family, which made it harder for them to give her up. All was done for little Bethie that loving hands and kind physician could do. God had ordained that she should cease from pain and join in the heavenly chorus of little voices around the throne of God in heaven. "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Decatur, Miss.

KENTON—THOMAS S. KENTON was born Aug. 5, 1855, and died at Winnsboro, La., Sept. 4, 1895.

He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, his father and mother also being members of the same church. I have lost a good steward and true friend, the church has lost a valuable member, the children have lost a kind and loving father, and the wife has lost a devoted husband.

He was a descendant of the old pioneer, Simon Kenton. The name has remained in the family, his oldest son being named Simon.

A short time before his death he said, "I have a strong arm to lean upon," and again, "I see the angels on both sides of the path, and my way is clear. May we meet him in that Celestial City!

IRA L. BRONSON, P. C.

LYONS—Little JULIA LYONS, daughter of J. M. and Mrs. Eugenia Lyons, died at Crowley, La., Sept 26 1895. She was born Feb. 24, 1887.

From the age of three years to the day of her death she was a regular and punctual Sunday-school scholar. Through the example and training of a devoted Christian mother she was led to give her heart to Christ at a very early age, and was received into the church on May 13, 1894.

At home and among her playmates she was always kind and self-sacrificing, and her memory remains a sweet fragrance among those who knew her. She could not speak a dying testimony, but before her last illness she had given good evidence of her conversion. To her loved ones is held out the blessed hope of a reunited family in heaven.

W. WINANS DRAKE.

PILGRIM—CHARLES MIMMS PILGRIM, infant son of Bro. W. P. and C. J. Pilgrim, died Sept. 12, 1895, aged eleven months and two days.

Little Charlie suffered lateasely for fourteen days, then God called him home to be with the other children that had gone on before. He died near Union, Newton county, Miss.

The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., October, '96. A little later it will be November, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Eureka, Ark., proposes to erect a "home for aged teachers" at an expense of $150,000

A Chicago preacher married a couple on a license which they brought from Springfield, and has to pay $100 for ignorance of the law.

The Board of Pardons has refused to interfere with the sentence of ex-Alderman Dunnessal, and he will have to go to the penitentiary.

By an accident on the Carnegie branch of the West End Traction Road, in Pittsburg, three people were killed and twelve or fourteen people badly injured.

The New England Cotton Manufacturers' Association will hold their Autumn meeting in Atlanta, Oct. 24 and 25. An excursion party of 200 will leave New York on Tuesday, Oct. 22

The recent fire which destroyed the roundhouse of the Louisville and Nashville railroad at Ocean Springs, Miss., has aroused the citizens of Scranton to an effort to secure the removal of the business thus interrupted from the former place to their town.

It is at last positively decided that Mr. D. L. Moody is to be one of the attractions at the Atlanta Fair. The necessary cash for the necessary big tabernacle is in sight, and orders have been issued to begin its construction at once, so as to have it ready for services to begin by the first of the coming month.

The meeting at Chicago, a few weeks ago, in the interest of securing the recognition of the belligerency of the Cuban insurgents by Congress, has attracted the attention of the whole country, and preparations are making for the holding of similar meetings in all the large centers of population throughout the United States.

The Congregational Home Missionary Society is in unusual straits, financially. It is in debt to the banks $179,000, its treasury is empty, and, inasmuch as only $100 000 of the indebtedness is secured by collateral, the banks have refused further unsecured loans. The salaries of the home missionaries were due Oct. 1. Failure to receive them means, in many cases, borrowing of local banks at high rates of interest.

FOREIGN.

The Hungarian diet, it is reported, has passed bills intended to remove all obstacles in the way of a complete recognition and toleration of the Jewish religion.

It is reported in Paris that the Alsace and Lorraine population has decreased in a marvelous way between 1870 and 1895. A statistical authority states that there has been an emigration of so many hundreds of thousands that only a fifth part of the indigenous population remains.

The Turkish government had finally presented to the envoys of the six powers a reply to their collective note on the subject of the recent disturbances there. This reply, however, is not satisfactory to the ambassadors. The Porte, in its answer, enumerated the measures taken to preserve order, and declared that the Mussulmans were not aggressors in the recent rioting, but that, on the contrary, the Armenians killed inoffensive Mussulmans.

A body of Corean troops, accompanied by a band of Japanese, entered the palace at Seoul, Corea, and killed the Queen, the minister of the household and three women. The King is a prisoner, and his father is now dictator. Russia has landed forty marines in Corea and sent them to the capital, according to Minister Kirino's reports from the Japanese foreign office. Thus far they have confined themselves to guarding the Russian legation at Seoul. Sixteen United States marines were landed from the "Yorktown."

It is said that General de Campos, commander of the Spanish troops in Cuba, has notified Consul General Williams, stationed at Havana, Cuba, that he will not hereafter be recognized as the representative of the United States. Secretary of State Olney, who was officially notified of this action on the part of Spain's commander-in-chief, has rescinded it and has protested to Spain's premier. His dispatch was peremptory. Treaty rights have been violated, and for any injury to American citizens Spain will be held responsible.

Dr. James Parker, of London, has written a letter to the Pope in answer to the pastoral letter advocating a reunion of Christendom, in which he says: "Were this a personal matter, I could hardly forgive myself for seeking to approach a presence so august and so venerable. But inasmuch as you have appealed to all sections upon the question which affects the standing of the soul before God, I have emboldened myself to bear witness to the headship of the blessed Christ, and to decline communion with any man or church that would officially or proscriptively come between me and my Savior."

La Paz Mexico, it is said, has been completely destroyed by a hurricane. The storm was followed by a tidal wave, the waters in the bay rising to an unprecedented height, invading that portion of the city fronting on the bay and carrying out to sea men, animals and debris of wrecked buildings as the tide subsided. One hundred and eighty-four houses were destroyed, four lives lost and twenty-one persons injured. Nineteen craft, including the American schooner "Czar," partly loaded with dynamite, were beached, and a government cruiser sunk. Gardens and orchards were washed away. The sugar refineries at Aguila and Florida were totally destroyed. The cane fields were all washed away.

Louisiana Epworth League Conference.

The following resolutions were passed by the Louisiana Epworth League Conference:

Resolved, That, being as Epworth Leaguers, an integral part of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, it is our duty to accept her doctrines, uphold her peculiar institutions, use our Standard Hymn Book and such other books of song as may be indorsed by our General Conference for the use of Epworth Leagues, in all our gatherings as individual chapters, as Union or District Leagues and as State Conferences; and in every way give our best energies of head and heart to the peace and prosperity of our beloved Zion; all to the end that, as loyal sons and daughters, we may help her, by our lives and active labors, to fulfill the end of her existence as a church—the spreading of "scriptural holiness" over all lands.

Resolved, That we regret exceedingly that Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Steele, our general secretary, found it impossible to be with us at this Conference, held in so important and needy a section of Southern Methodism; that we, nevertheless, extend to him our hearty support as editor of the Epworth Era and as general secretary of the Epworth hosts of our church.

Resolved, That, as Christian citizens, we are the uncompromising foes of the licensed liquor traffic, and will embrace every opportunity by pen and mouth and vote to compass the utter overthrow of this greatest enemy of church and state and home

Resolved, That, deploring the flagrant and increasing desecration of the holy Sabbath, and the evident and criminal indisposition or the utter incompetency of those whose duty it is to enforce the State Sunday law and other laws enacted for the protection of peaceful and law-abiding citizens, we do, in the name of the many thousands of young men and women of this State, demand of our State, municipal and judicial authorities the prompt and rigid enforcement of our Sunday law and all other laws intended for the good of the people.

Resolved, That since the work of the literary department has not proven generally successful, and the difficulties in the way of its success are the too great expense of the reading course and the lack of sufficient facilities for study, the Epworth League Board is hereby earnestly requested to consider the matter of providing for the publication of suitable cheap periodical literature, containing both lessons for study and suitable notes and helps, similar to the literature provided for the use of Sunday-schools.

Resolved, That the editor of the Epworth Era be requested to devote one full page of the paper to notes and helps, directly bearing upon the course of study.

Resolved, That our State officers be authorized, if they find it expedient, to employ a State organizer.

Resolved, That our hearty thanks are due to the New Orleans Union Epworth League for their preliminary work, through efficient committees, that has made our first State Conference a success; to the pastor, officials and members of the Louisiana Avenue Church for the use of their beautiful church-building for the holding of our sessions, accompanied by Christian courtesy and genuine hospitality that we can never forget; to those kind people who have opened their hearts and homes to us, and who have so generously cared for us while here; to the New Orleans Picayune, Times-Democrat and other city papers who have given such full and correct reports of our proceedings; and to the railroads that have extended special rates to our delegates.

Excellent Results.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier, and it has given excellent results. I have taken it two consecutive years, and shall hereafter use it as a blood purifier and tonic."—W. S. Jordy, No. 416 Gravier St., New Orleans, La.

A Chance for Women to Make Money.

I see so many men giving their experience in the Dish Washer business that one would almost think one men had "taken to washing the dishes." But ladies can do just as well as men. I have been devoting my time for over a year to selling Climax Dish Washers. My husband has aided mornings and evenings, and we have cleared over $5,000 in a year. The trouble with people is they won't try new things, and so let the golden opportunities pass. Every family wants a Dish Washer, and any one can sell them if they TRY. I do not canvass at all; people come or send after Washers. I have examined all the Dish Washers made, but the Climax has no equal. You can get complete instructions by addressing the Climax Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio. I want ladies everywhere to try this business and let us hear how they succeed.

HOPELESS.

Alas! for him who never sees
The stars shine thro' the cypress trees,
Who hopeless lays his dead away,
Nor looks to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marbles play.
Who hath not learned in hours of faith
The truth to flesh and sense is known;
That life is ever lord of death,
And love can never lose its own.

Letter from Milan.

We feel very much at home in Milan, as it is particularly like an American city. There is neither filth nor stench, nor beggars here, as in so many other Italian towns; but the streets are broad, beautifully paved, and delightfully clean, even the by-ways. The houses are exceedingly handsome and quite modern, the mercantile establishments are elegant and complete, the hotels capacious and luxurious, with elevators and electric light; trains and electric cars run in every direction, making locomotion expeditious and enjoyable. There is an air of thrift and prosperity about the whole place that renders it difficult for us to realize that we are in Italy. Immediately upon our arrival in Milan we went to the great cathedral, which is noted all over the world. It is built entirely of white marble. On the outside there are 1,500 sculptures in relief and 1,928 statues, while within there are none less than 680. The architecture is indescribably graceful and imposing. From a short distance it looks like lace-work, and as delicate as a spider's web. By moonlight it rivals the Alhambra. It is a peculiar fact that there are no seats in these splendid European cathedrals. The mosaic floors reach out into everlasting coldness, and the poor worshipers harden their knees by bending on them for hours at a time. A common little chair can be hired for ten centimes. On especial occasions they are in great demand, and many an honest (?) lire is turned by this means into the church treasury. At every city that we have been to in Europe this Summer we have inquired if there was service to be held on the Sabbath in the Protestant Churches, and the answer invariably has been, "No, the ministers are out of town during the hot season." During all this time of rest for them not one Catholic Church has been closed, nor one service omitted. It is not to be wondered at that Roman Catholicism gains and holds such a tremendous power over the common people who are not able to go away for the Summer. In the refectory of the Dominican Convent, near the church of Sta. Maria della Grazia, in Milan, is found all that remains of The Last Supper, Leonardi da Vinci's masterpiece, a fresco, which is almost obliterated. In 1800 the little room was flooded during an inundation, and Napoleon's soldiers daily used it as a stable, and had the walls whitewashed. An opening was made for a door in the wall where the fresco was painted, ruining the lower portion of the picture, part of the table cloth being entirely dug away. The face of Christ, which is clearly distinguishable, is of unusual sweetness and power. The hair is Titian red. The figures of the disciples can be easily outlined, but the entire picture has a most decidedly faded aspect. European Catholics are famous for displays and general spectacular effects in their religious ceremonials. Sunday, at midday, in Milan the principal street was thronged with an immense procession of nuns, monks, priests, and other ecclesiastics. Those of the higher orders robed in the most gorgeous paraphernalia. The houses along the route were all draped with bunting of the national colors—black, yellow and red—flaring in every direction. The populace surged in such masses that carriages were stopped and every form of movement seriously impeded except that of pedestrianism. Above the din and tumult the voices of the "fathers" and "sisters" rang out in their monotonous chants, and the canopies under which the leaders marched were seen to move majestically on, filling the hearts of the simple spectators with awe and their eyes with wonder. In spite of the subjection that is taught women by the Catholic Church over here, it is pleasant to note signs of the breaking up of old forms of social crystallization. In Pisa there is a normal school into which men and women are admitted on a basis of perfect equality; and I was told that a number of women were there studying medicine. Throughout the kingdom of Italy widows have the right to vote for members of Parliament.

The innate tact and grace of Italian people is delightful. A few days ago our party of W. C. T. U. women were crowded in a railway compartment. The only men present were our conductor, a cultured young Englishman, the son of the Bishop of Winchester, and an elegant-looking young Italian gentleman of the higher class. The latter could not speak a word of English, and was an entire stranger to the rest of us. As we entered he was smoking, regardless of the fact that the carriage was not a smoker. The ladies, by heavy frowns and audible groans, gave evidence of severe disapprobation; but the innocent sinner smoked on unconscious of the misery and discomfort he was creating. Finally our escort leaned toward him and said in the native tongue: "Will you please discard your cigarette? The ladies object to it." The Italian looked up perfectly amazed. I suppose it was the first time in his whole life that he had been made aware of the fact that ladies objected to smoking, as so many women indulge in the habit, not only in Italy, but in France; and even in staid old England, among the upper circles, it is a common thing for ladies to take an after-dinner cigarette with the gentlemen. When the Italian saw the looks of disgust on the faces of the stern (?) set of reformers about him, he colored to the roots of his black, curly hair, and immediately threw away his offending cigarette; but his discomfort seemed to increase as he looked from one to another. He was evidently anxious to propitiate the anger he had created. Suddenly a happy thought struck him. He sprang to his feet, and, opening a large wicker-basket in the rack above him, took therefrom a beautiful lemon, with a long branch and leaves attached, and, with a graceful bow, handed it to the lady opposite.

In meandering about the continent one of the most engaging sights to be seen is an English family traveling. If they are rich, they always have a grown nurse and a valet along. The latter buys the tickets, attends to the baggage, and plays the "Man-Friday" act on all occasions. Attending to their baggage is a stupendous undertaking in countries where the checking system is an unknown quantity, for not only does the family usually have two, or more, trunks, but they always carry a large bath-tub with them and a baby carriage. To see all of these traps mounted on the top of a wagon rattling over the stony streets is enough to make an American weep. Milan is the last stop we shall make in Italy. From here we go to Paris.

The Atlanta Exposition.

Now that we have talked in a general way about the Exposition, which grows on me with each visit, let's enjoy some of the beautiful paintings in the Art Building. This building is a beautiful structure. The exterior is a picture, and would seem to indicate the nature of its contents. Almost as soon as you are on the grounds, a seller of official catalogues will confront you with his pamphlets; price, twenty-five cents. It is not absolutely necessary to have one of the guides; yet they make a good souvenir of the whole Exposition. You can enjoy the pictures and statuary without one; but with a copy in hand, the enjoyment is greater. If you have an umbrella or cane, you will be asked to check it at the door before entering the building. This precaution is taken to keep the unthoughted from punching or defacing the paintings or statuary.

Now we are inside, let's walk slowly, for you may expect to stay several hours in the building. One of the first, as you enter the south wing, to attract your attention is the "Building of a City." This is a panel piece, about six feet long, and represents a wagon, with four yoke of oxen, hauling a very large piece of stone from a quarry. Everything seems so natural. You can almost hear the driver say, "Git up, Spot; step up thar, Logan." The early morning light is beautifully rendered. The way this painting would be viewed by some would be to see simply an ox-team and wagon hauling a large stone. If you are fond of art, you will see a great deal in it that is so true to life.

There was a man who entered the Exposition grounds at one P. M., and came out two hours later with the assertion that he had seen it all. This man could not have told a single thing he saw. It all passed before him, or he passed before it as a panorama, and nothing definite was left. So it is with many who pass through life. They make no impression, and get nothing as they go through.

Such an Exposition as this is a study in every detail. After these side remarks let's proceed. Here is a splendid picture. Just look at it! It is the "Royalties of the Desert." The lion and lioness are standing on a mountain cliff. Just above them, on a crag, sits the condor. The proud look of this king of beasts, and the contented, satisfied look of his mate, is remarkably well done.

Isn't it wonderful how, with a brush and paint, such living pictures can be put on canvas? I can understand how the house can be conceived in the brain, put into drawings, and executed in wood or stone; but this creature of almost life on the canvas is too much for me. Surely it is a gift of God.

Time is slipping, and we have only looked at two pictures. We can talk as we go along. What a beautiful picture that is up there! Yes, that is "Sunlight on the Sea." The waves are not boisterous. They reflect back the sunlight, accompanied by the soft murmur of the sea in its ever-restless motion. Close by you see a lone woman. Beyond the deep her all has gone. She thinks it strange that a picture so beautiful should cause such a cruel separation. I know you could stay there a long time enjoying that lovely painting, but come along. Here is the "Baptism of Jesus." A picture so purely imaginative, and yet with interest. The face you do not like. There seems to be too much care and anxiety there for one so young, though in after years he became acquainted with grief and was a man of sorrow. Here is an historical picture, "The Oath of Allegiance at Valley Forge." Let the younger readers make themselves acquainted with the incident, and then see how truly the artist has painted it. Now, here is one that all can understand, but all do not. It is "A Pleasant Service." It represents an humble apartment, in which is seated the aged grandmother sipping a cup of tea prepared and served by a granddaughter. We do see such pictures in life; but how often do we fail to see them! I have often envied sons who had aged parents to care for; yet how lonely these parents are made to feel sometimes! If I were an artist, I could paint a picture the reverse of this. I would name it "Forgotten." Let's not dwell here; there are enough real sorrows to claim our attention. Now, here is one that will enliven those of the party who are fond of the chase. It is called, "Off the Scent." The pack of hounds have trailed the stag to the edge of water, and lost the scent. The old dog in the lead is worried over the misfortune. The younger ones, bringing up the rear, are very actively howling, and seem to think they will have the game in a short while. Can't we compare this picture to life? The aged have about lost the thread of life, and the young are bringing it up. Here is another in the shooting line, "The Trout Stream." As I stood before this picture I could imagine myself standing on a rock catching these sporty fish. It is refreshing to look at. I wonder if ye editor knows anything about such fun. Atlanta being several hundred miles away from such sport, of which I am very fond, I have to take it out looking at such pictures and imagining how I would enjoy it. Let's hurry, on account of an impatient editor. Here is a wonderful picture, "The Combat." It is a fight between two large bulls. What a terrific struggle it is! Every muscle in each animal is strained for the mastery. Death will be the fate of the vanquished. They have fought until both have gone down in front to the ground; the blood is staining the ground about them; the end is not far. I can easily run back in my mind to the time when I used to drive two such animals together to see them fight. Now, here is "Sad News." An old woman is sitting by a window, where she had been busily knitting. A letter has been handed her. She read the news. The envelope marked with mourning has fallen to the floor; the poor old soul is crushed; the sting of death has almost pierced her. No doubt, a few moments before she was anticipating a joyful visit from the loved one whose death has just been announced. Despair is painted there. Another of the realities of life. To the Christian these things are sad, but to them there is joy even beyond the black-bordered envelope. There will be a meeting again; there will be a time when parting is no more, and sad news will end. Hope in this life is centered in the next picture before us, "The Two Great Ears." An angel told Joseph to take Mary and the Babe into Egypt. Here we find them at night. One bright star is shining. Mary is sitting, holding the precious Child. All in strange wonder at the events that have happened. There is stillness and sublimity about the painting that will cause you to stand lost in reverie. "The people that walked in darkness hath seen a great light; and they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shone." (Isa. ix, 2.) Now, let's turn to this group of children gathered on the sidewalk to listen to the organ grinder's merry music. It's a 'Sidewalk Dance." Just such a crowd has gathered as you will see on such an occasion in any city. The bootblack has forgotten his hunger and his miserable habitation for the night. Joy is pictured on his face; his feet are moving in response to the music. The errand boy has stopped with the loaf of bread for which he was sent. His delay in getting back will be accounted for to his mistress in other than a correct tale. One girl has gathered another, and they are enjoying a whirl. Every face in the motley crowd is pictured in delight, and when you have studied them awhile, yours will wreathe with smiles, and you will turn away with a "God bless the children!" Come, here is another group, not of children alone, but the silk-hatted gent and the fur-wrapped woman, viewing the pantomime. A policeman has come up to spoil the street arab's fun. "Get back out of the street!" he shouts. One little fellow has left his ragged hat in the street, and is appealing slyly to a comrade to dare the cop and get it for him. One fellow, at a safe distance from the policeman's club, has his thumb on his nose and is wiggling his fingers in a kind of "ya ya ya" voice at the intruder and disturber of their pleasure. "Home Comforts." Here it is depicted in reality almost. The stove is burning, the tea-kettle is singing, the supper is done; the wife is walking back and forth humming some sweet tune. All waiting for "him."

These are only a few, but we must stop.

Reader, have you home comforts?—and do you thank God for them? While you are enjoying them, do you think of those who are comfortless?—those in whose poor homes the tea-kettle does not sing, and where even the fire does not burn? Don't wait for Thanksgiving Day to make them happy.

"Created Anew."

We have much talk about the nature of man, depravity of nature, regeneration of nature, sinful nature, sanctification of nature, and many such expressions. Comparatively few people, I am led to believe, rarely ever stop to consider carefully what the nature of man is; what is affected by sin and what changed in regeneration. If we could get a clear view of this, I believe we would have a clearer view of the work of grace in the human heart. To this end, and by way of help in this direction, this article is written. The views here presented have been helpful to the writer, and he believes that if they were calmly considered and deeply pondered, they would be helpful to others.

The nature of man is made up of intelligence, sensibilities, and will. These constitute man a moral agent and make him capable of moral action. Being thus constituted, he is accountable for his conduct. Law and government, both human and divine, recognise these three factors in the constitution, the make-up, the nature of man. This is the whole of the spiritual and moral nature of man as we know him and understand him.

The intellect, the understanding, has been darkened by sin, so that we do not now see truth clearly, or do not see it at all. "We have eyes, but see not." "We hear the Word, but do not understand it." Whatever power we have, intellectually, to see the truth and to understand it, comes to us through the prevenient grace of God. We are what we are by the grace of God as it is, and not by the nature of man as it was. The prevenient grace of God by Christ gives us enough intellectual light to make us responsible and accountable for the measure of truth we have. This is true of all men, of every age, nation, tribe and tongue.

The sensibilities have been perverted by sin. Man finds pleasure in wrong things. He is naturally inclined to pleasure and to excess in all that pertains to his animal nature—fleshly appetites and passions. "He is in the flesh, and minds"—seeks and obeys—"the things of the flesh." He finds pleasure in the "works of the flesh." They are agreeable and delightsome to him. He follows after them, is led by them, and finds his chief joy in them, and so he lives for self and not for God. This perversion, or depravation of man's sentient nature leads him into all kinds of excesses in personal gratifications. The prevenient grace of God has so quickened man's sensibilities that he is susceptible and capable of exquisite pleasure in right things and in right doing. With a mind for it, religion gives him more and higher pleasure than sin ever gave, or ever could give. Somehow men never see this, never know it, never believe it till after they are born again. What we call "heartfelt, Holy Ghost religion" belongs to this department of the human mind, or being. It would be just as impossible for one to have religion, and not to enjoy it, as it is for the sinner to sin and not find pleasure in it. The joy of the one and the pleasure of the other naturally and necessarily spring up in the sensibilities. If we do wrong, we feel mean and condemned over it, whether we want to feel so or not. We do, unless the sensibility has been indurated and made insensible by sin. If we do right, we feel good over it, and we can not help feeling so. Wrong doing and bad feeling, and right doing and good feeling, are inseparably connected. God has united them. The sin of a wrong act is not in the bad feeling, and the religion of a right act is not in the good feeling. The fact is, sin and religion do not originate in the feelings—in the sensibilities. They find an answering response in the feelings, but they do not originate there. The feeling we have makes us know whether we have done right or wrong, but the right or wrong doing always precedes the feeling. It should be remembered, and never forgotten, that the standard of right and wrong, known and accepted by an individual or by a people, is the measure of the good or bad feeling of that individual or people. The Word of God is the standard among Christian people. When we "love our neighbor as we love ourselves," we have "a conscience"—a feeling—"void of offense toward man;" and when we "love God with all the heart, mind, soul and strength," we have a "conscience"—a feeling—"void of offense toward God." This is a high standard—the highest known among men. By this, and this only, we measure.

The will has been warped and twisted out of proper shape—has been bent and inclined in the wrong direction—by sin. The natural tendency of it is away from God—to please and gratify self rather than God. The depraved and perverse human will resents authority and refuses to be governed. It is bent on having its own way in spite of God. In the nature of the case it must be free. It could not, and would not, be will if it were not free. The ground and reason of man's responsibility and accountability grows out of the God-given freedom of his will. Whatever of this gift of power and of freedom was lost in Adam was restored in Christ, so that "we have no power to do good works, pleasant and acceptable to God, without the grace of God by Christ preventing us, that we may have a good will, and working with us, when we have that good will." We are what we are, and have the powers we have, by the grace of God. The great trouble with us is that we do not have a will to do the will of God. This is what we need, and this we get, in regeneration, the new birth. "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin, because he is born of God." His purpose, bent, desire, inclination, will, is to obey God in everything. This makes him a new man. He "puts off the old man and puts on the new man." He "crucifies the flesh with the affections and lusts thereof." He is "buried with Christ by regeneration into a death unto sin, and is raised with him into a new life." Hence he is no longer the servant and slave of sin—does not live in sin, but becomes the willing and loving servant and subject of Christ. The intellect is wonderfully cleared up and enlightened, the sensibilities purified and toned up, and the will set right toward God. A new man. A man born of God. "Created anew in Christ Jesus."

GILDEROY.

In the Living Present.

Help should not impede self-help. A writer in The Forum discusses "Well-Meant, but Fatile, Endowments." Proves that donations, in many instances, prove positive injury. The endowment of universities and colleges would make scholars; that of poor-houses, paupers. Thus Bishop Taylor advocates that extraneous help for missions prevents organization of self-supporting congregations.

A writer in The Arena assures that this is an age of embezzlement. Fraud and corruption everywhere. During the year 1894 bank-wreckers, embezzlers and defaulters have robbed the people of the enormous sum of $25,000,000. Lanterns should be provided for search of honest men.

In the Episcopal Address to the General Conference of the Evangelical Association, now in session at Elgin, Ill., the Bishops emphasize that in many instances the Sunday-school has not been a source of spiritual benefit. Of yore the Sunday-school had been a helpmeet to the church. Now said school was frequently but a social gathering devoid of seriousness. Recommend return to the old ways.

Dean Farrar, in the North American Review, treats prominent problems of our time. Among these he mentions socialism as most difficult of solution. Our labor organizations are transfused with revolutionary ideas taught by socialism. Even certain political parties embrace it. But a chief tenet of socialism is the rejection of our holy religion. Preachers are denominated vassals of the wealthy; churches, for promotion of ignorance.

It can not be denied that Roman Catholicism has a better hold on the working people than Protestantism. Prominent preachers of the latter declare that not one in ten of their membership belong to that class. Of late the Salvation Army has come to the aid of Protestantism, gathering in the horny-handed people of toil.

In two years the Salvation Army in Cincinnati has secured nine hundred recruits. The Army has rented a prominent theatre on Vine street. Not administering the holy sacraments militates against them. It is, hence, not a Christian church. Still, many of the praying members of other denominations have joined the Army.

The author of "Tongues of Fire," Rev. William Arthur, D. D., has been an invalid for many years. Has almost entirely lost his speech. He has made his home in Cannes, France. His recent visit to the Wesleyan Conference in Plymouth proved a benediction to the brethren.

How to Be a Pastor.

Determine to become a pastor, cost what it may. If you are shy and bashful, conquer your difference; a man has no business to be a shepherd if he is afraid of his sheep. If you are naturally reserved and reticent, unlock your lips. Go and talk with your people about anything or everything until you get in touch with them. It is not best that a minister should talk exclusively about things spiritual. Talk to them about their business and show your interest in what they are doing.

Watch your chances to put a timely and loving word for your Master. You are Christ's man on Christ's business. If you can only gain your point by going often to the house, then go often. One soul wins others. You can reach the parents sometimes by reaching the son or daughter.

Personal conversations with individual souls will train you to be a closer, more suggestive and practical preacher. They will make you colloquial and simple and direct in the pulpit. Half of all the preaching is fired into the air. You will gather most precious material for your sermons by going about among your people and finding out what they are doing, what they are thinking, what they are suffering, and what they need.

Devote a portion of every day to pastoral service. To visit a large congregation consumes a vast amount of time; but can you spend it more profitably elsewhere? Be on the lookout for sermon hints wherever you go; one hour with a live man may teach you more than two hours with a dead book.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

LIFE'S ANSWER.

BY THE LATE HENRY ALFORD, D. D.

I know not if the dark or bright
Shall be my lot:
If that wherein my hopes delight
Be best, or not.

It may be mine to drag for years
Toil's heavy chain:
Or day and night my meat be tears
On bed of pain.

Dear faces may surround my hearth
With smiles and glee;
Or I may dwell alone, and mirth
Be strange to me.

My bark is waited to the strand
By breath divine:
And on the helm there rests a hand
Other than mine.

One who has known in storms to sail
I have on board:
Above the raving of the gale
I hear my Lord.

He holds me when the billows smite,
I shall not fall:
If sharp, 'tis short; if long, 'tis light;
He tempers all.

Safe to the land—safe to the land,
The end is this:
And then with him go hand in hand
Far into bliss.

Somewhat Romantic.

It would scarcely be supposed that this dignified, prosaic ADVOCATE ever became the means of awakening and kindling in a flame the "tender passion" which lurks in every youthful bosom. Yet this very thing, in at least one instance, it has been known to do.

Not many years ago a young lady visiting friends in one of our large cities became attached to a young man who was not thought worthy of her affection. Her mother was so deeply concerned about the evils that would probably grow out of this misplacement of her daughter's affections that she appealed to God to prevent by his providence a marriage which she believed would be worse than death. At this juncture she suggested to her daughter that she should write an article for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE which she did. A young man, living hundreds of miles away, in another State, read the article, and became much interested in its unknown author. For months visions of the young woman who had so candidly advocated the retaining of the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony haunted his imagination. Meanwhile she had taken a school near her home in the country, and one of her pupils had written a letter for the children's column of the ADVOCATE about his teacher, Miss S. Mr. M., reading this letter, imagined that Miss S. might be the author of the article which had so struck him months before, and wrote to the boy, asking various questions about his teacher, finally requesting him to ask his teacher if he might write to her. With the consent of her mother, she gave him permission to write one letter. He wrote, declaring his great interest in her, and giving her the name of one of the corresponding editors of the ADVOCATE for reference. She was sufficiently impressed by his letter to make inquiry about him as follows: "1. Is he religiously inclined? 2. His standing in society? 3. His business qualifications? 4. His general appearance? Please mention age, color of hair, eyes, etc." The corresponding editor, not unaware that his answers to these questions involved the grave responsibility of possibly making or marring the happiness of two souls forever, answered with care, being happily able to make quite a favorable report of Mr. M. Correspondence with the first-mentioned young man was broken off and interchange of heart-messages between the latter and Miss S. grew into the usual frequency of such communications.

The missives of love between them did move
With the eager-winged speed of the carrier dove.

In due time they, who had loved and wooed unseen, met and were not disappointed. Sight and acquaintance sanctioned and deepened the impressions which imagination had created. Preliminaries being arranged, the couple were married. A happy mother saw her greatly loved daughter saved from a union which, to her wisdom's eye, promised nothing but evil, and clung in a wedlock upon which all the powers of good promised to smile. Beginning well their married life, they may expect a peaceful journey, unless some evil spirit shall make their tempers jar, or stir their tongues to strife. Doubtless, the poetry and the prose of matrimonial experience are being mingled in due proportion for them as the years glide by. W. L. C. H.

Cold Logic Alone Will Not Do; There Must Be Living Examples.

Recently I listened to four sermons, delivered by a Jesuit priest. The first three were about like first-class Methodist preaching. In the fourth he undertook to prove by the Protestant version of the New Testament that the confessional is a divine institution. The main text he depended on was the twentieth chapter of the gospel by John, twenty-third verse. He quoted from the New Version, "Whosoever sins ye forgive," etc., and after arguing his point in quite a masterly style, he made this broad assertion, "that if it did not prove that the apostles forgave sins, then the English language could not be depended on, and the Bible was a failure." Many non-Catholics said there was no way of getting around it, but there was at least one present who had been studying the Acts of the Apostles for over sixty years, and had read twenty-eight letters written by five of said apostles, in which reference is made to every conceivable subject of the Christian religion, but not a word about priestly absolution as practiced in the Roman Catholic Church. This Rev. Father must have known this, too, for if it had been there, he would surely have quoted it; but there are a vast number of instances and references of the preaching of the Word being the power of God unto salvation, in which cases the subjects of that power had their sins forgiven; and when they resisted that power, their sins were retained.

And now comes one of your correspondents with the same kind of cold logic to prove no one must preach in our church but such as are licensed to do so; but that same old man that listened to the holy father could remember no instance where the Methodist Church had dared to say to anyone, "You shall not preach until we are ready to license you," except the person was known to be immoral—in fact, he has often heard old ministers say, "If you feel you are called of God to preach, we dare not forbid you." But these orderly and disorderly persons have been in the church ever since the time of Moses. The orderly wanted the prophet to stop the unlicensed from prophesying, but he would not. T. R.

Letter from Rev J. L. Futrell.

MR EDITOR: Since my last so many inquiries have come that I am compelled to ask you to help me answer some of them.

HEALTH.

There is comparatively little to fear in this respect, but people get sick and die. Our town numbers about 1,500. We have four physicians, but they have to take in a circuit of about twenty miles to enable them to make a small living.

SCHOOLS.

It seems to me the system of public schools is the best I ever saw. There are monthly meetings of the teachers for the whole county, and weekly for the towns. If a person receive one class of certificate this year, he must go higher next year, or receive none at all. As to higher schools, they are comparatively poor.

LIVING

"It is as you make it." But people can live plainer, dress plainer—I had almost said shabbier—and cause less remarks than anywhere I know of. I told you flour was about $2 40 per barrel; pork, five cents per pound, and most things we raise in proportion. Potatoes, wheat, oats, barley, hops and prunes are our chief products. Most fruits, berries and vegetables do well. Allow me to quote a description of a pear tree at a place called Eola, in this, Polk county. "It is of the variety called Fall butter; is 50 feet and 2 inches high, 7 feet and 9 inches in circumference. Seven feet from the ground there is a limb that is 4 feet 7 inches in circumference. It is estimated that the tree holds 100 bushels of fruit." I have seen limbs on prune trees 9 and 10 feet long, grown in one season; and a man told me of one 12 feet 2 inches. Corn does poorly; so do peaches and watermelons and sweet potatoes. Grass grows from now till, say, July. Of course, in Winter it is slow. It has now come up, and if left undisturbed, it will be 6 or 8 inches by Christmas—maybe more; then, if a mild Winter, we may expect a few inches more.

As to farming, it is the hardest land to cultivate I ever saw. They never think of using less than three, and often four, horses in plowing. And land that was in wheat this year they will break up as soon as they can, let it lie till Spring, and break and harrow it again; then keep sheep in it until Fall, and break, harrow and sow in wheat again. Occasionally a man will venture to sow stubble land, but not often, as it is too full of wild oats, cheat, etc., and needs this "Summer fallow" to keep it clean enough. The Winter is not severe enough to kill the wild growth. They keep enough sheep thus to bring in this county about 150,000 pounds of wool. We (?) raise between two and three million pounds of hops; so I'm told.

One great drawback in this—Willamette (accent, lam)—valley is the long wet season from October or November to May, when so much of the time people must either work in the rain, or be idle. True, the rains are not hard—more like what we in the South call "sprinkle"—but everything is wet, and for weeks together you never see sun or star. Of course, all this applies to this valley; but half the people of Oregon live in this valley.

OUR CHURCH.

Well, we are doing as well as the other churches, and, considering the amount we appropriate here, better than most of them. The Presbyterian Board gave $1,500 to help build a church, and $400 to $500 per year for a preacher in Dallas. Our church has been giving $150 a year for a preacher on Dallas circuit, and in May last gave us $800 for a church. We will soon have a much better church than theirs, and our membership is more than double theirs. Thirty years ago, I am told, the field was practically ours; but our preachers followed the pioneers into the valleys, canyons and mountains, and left the growing towns and cities to others; hence we are still beating in the brush. I am glad to see we have gotten awake, and, instead of depending on brush arbors and schoolhouses, are now building churches and the W. F. and H. M. S. is building parsonages; so that our Conference, with 19 charges and 60 societies, has 30 churches and 16 parsonages, with 12 local preachers and 1,477 members—a net growth of 20 per cent. in 1894 and 12 per cent. in 1895.

TIMES.

They are hard, harder, hardest. One of my members has just returned from a four-months' business trip to Missouri, and he says there is no comparison; that dollars are more plentiful here than dimes are here.

There are other questions asked, but I can not write more now. I think if I were a laboring, or business, man in the South, I would stay there. If I wanted to spend a most delightful Summer, or year, abroad, in travel, hunting, fishing, etc., I'd come to Oregon and California.

SLEEP SWEETLY.

The following lines by Rev. J. G. Sibley, of the Mississippi Conference, were suggested by the death of an old soldier of the Confederate Army, who was also a soldier in the army of the great King:

Sleep sweetly, old soldier,
The battle is o'er,
And the roll of the drum
Disturbs thee no more.
The throat of the cannon,
The shriek of the shell,
The wail of thy comrade
Thou knowest so well,
Are hushed into silence,
And peace is declared;
From ocean to ocean
The breach is repaired.

Sleep sweetly, dear husband,
And rest from thy toil.
The tie is not sundered
That bound us in one.
I soon shall come to thee,
And just by thy side
We will rest and await
The bright morning tide
When Jesus shall call us
To come from the tomb,
To spend eternity
Together at home.

Sleep sweetly, kind father,
We will not invade
The peace of thy slumber,
Thy rest and thy shade.
Thy children are waiting
Their summons to hear;
But God being with us,
We've nothing to fear;
And when life is over,
Each finished his quest,
We'll come to thy mansion
And all be at rest.

We kindly urge the following: Will not each preacher in charge secure at least five subscribers to the Evangel, the organ of the training-school, as quickly as possible? Where there is a W. F. M. Society, the president can aid. If none, please select some sister or brother who will be sure to get them. The editor of this paper is one of our best women, and aids so largely in stamping genuine piety on the characters of the pupils. We know whereof we speak. The advantages to be derived: 1. You secure a scholarship for a young woman of our Conference, well recommended and now ready to enter. 2. You arouse sympathy and interest in one of the most potential agencies for obtaining intelligent Christianity, and hastening the evangelization of the world. 3. Persons are personally benefited by its perusal. 4. You may secure many aspirants for thorough preparation in your charge, for mission work, Sunday-school, Epworth League, Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, temperance work, and last, but not least, in the home. Trained workers the imperative need of the church. We need 600 subscribers. No matter if you obtain more, we have another nearly ready to enter. It is published monthly at twenty-five cents in advance. One and two-cent United States postage stamps are received in payment. Address all subscriptions and communications to Miss Elizabeth Holding, Scarritt Bible and Training-school, corner Askew and Harris avenues, Kansas City, Mo. When sending for the paper be sure to request credit to be given to a missionary of the W. F. M. S., Mississippi Conference.

Clipping received: "Yesterday Mrs. Fryant entertained the Woman's Missionary Society of Capitol Street Church (Jackson, Miss.) very delightfully at a Brazilian tea. After a map study and a discussion of woman's work in Brazil, refreshments were served. Voluntary contributions, 'obligations' on other subjects, so the evening hours glided by but too rapidly, so enjoyable was the occasion."

Mrs. Siebe, secretary Brookhaven district, Sept. 29: . . . . "I attended the District Conference in Wesson in August, and made a little talk. Miss Marshall was present, and made a nice talk, and Bishop Galloway an excellent one on Sunday afternoon. We were well received by the brethren, and had promise of assistance from quite a number. Sunday evening Sister Collier called on me for another talk. . . . Several names were added to the Wesson auxiliary. . . . I have sent literature to all the organizations I know of; written quite a number of letters and postals; also attended Bethesda protracted meeting, and Bro. Robertson gave me the afternoon of one day to talk to the women. . . . I have reorganized Mt. Pleasant auxiliary." She has planned to visit several places, and hopes "to visit a number of charges in October, and make a better report for second quarter."

Corresponding secretaries of auxiliaries will please take notice that they, as well as district secretaries, are now required to send reports to the editor of items.

Woman's Missionary Advocate: "The members of our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will notice with pleasure that the secretary of Home Affairs reports this month 41 new auxiliaries, with 596 members; also 12 young people's and juvenile societies, with 235 members. These are encouraging facts. Somebody has been at work. We wish we could know how many of these new members have begun this special work for their blessed Lord by subscribing to the Woman's Missionary Advocate and Little Worker. They can not work intelligently unless they read and understand what has been done, what work is now on hand, and what is the right proportion for them to do. They can not feel any enthusiasm, any pleasure in the work, without knowing who is carrying it on, who are acting as their representatives, who are disbursing or paying out the money they contribute—often by some sacrifice that has caused some loss of pleasure or comfort."

Woman's Missionary Advocate: "Dr. Walter writes to the foreign secretary from Suchow, China, July 4, 1895: 'I can not express my delight at the interest evinced in the children's ward, nor my deep appreciation of the kindness and generosity shown me by the ladies of the Board. I will try to prove myself worthy of their confidence. We have just bought a lovely plot of land opposite the hospital, and I want to put up a building on it and call it the "Mary Black Memorial Hall." In this I want the "Alice Bonnell Ward" (children's ward); and I must have a sun room, a few rooms for the nurses, a few private rooms, a bath-room, and I can not get along without an obstetrical ward. I am using one of the rooms in my house for that purpose now. The Mary Black $2,000 and the Alice Bonnell $500 would do this. The cost of an endowed bed is, I think, $2,000; to furnish a bed requires $40. If any societies want to make me sheets for single beds, towels, pillow-cases, scarfs for tables, buy me swings, horses, dolls, baby chairs, etc., I would be delighted. Oh, please help me!'"

Said Mrs. Butler: "What object could appeal more directly to human hearts, or fill them with such tender, glowing zeal?"

Surely Mississippians, north and south, will feel proud of this great woman's achievements, and come to the rescue, especially the Masons, as she "is a protege of their order, and most highly esteemed by the brotherhood."

The Board granted the request made by the North Carolina Conference W. F. M. S., the privilege of directing the "Aunt Mary Black Fund" "to the erecting and equipping of a children's ward in said hospital." Will the Mississippi and the North Mississippi permit other Conferences to surpass them in helping this worthy Mississippi woman? How it would strengthen her to be thus appreciated by her own State! May the Holy Spirit move their hearts and cause a response worthy of the great enterprise, which is doubly missionary!

"Since Mrs. Campbell's departure the evangelistic work has been in Mrs. Park's hands," wrote Anne Walter, M. D., in report ending June 30, 1895.

Annual Meeting P. and H. M. S., North Mississippi Conference.

The fourth annual meeting of the P. and H. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference was held in Greenwood, Oct. 6-8. On Saturday night, Oct. 5, a preparation service was led by Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, which proved a most fitting introduction to the meeting. On Sunday, at 11 o'clock, Rev. John R. Athey, of Winona, preached an able, helpful and strengthening sermon from Rev. iii, 8. He made very plain the outer doors we have to pass before we can enter that "open door" which "no man can shut." The sermon was followed by the Lord's Supper; Rev. J. B. Stone, P. E., conducting the services. It was a truly spiritual occasion. Sunday afternoon Mrs. Hargrove conducted a children's service in her usual happy style. The rapt attention of the children, and the warm greetings she received after the service, showed the esteem in which she is held in her husband's former pastorate. Sunday night Miss Daisy McGlathery delivered the address of welcome, and Mrs. J. R. Thrasher the response. The president's address came next, followed by a beautiful recitation, "The Lord Hath Need of All," by Annie Belle Thayer, of Greenwood. The corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. S. Featherston, then gave a report from the recent convention of P. and H. M. S. at Asheville. This report, while much condensed, was so clear and graphic that we seemed to catch the very spirit of the sermons and lectures delivered by the brethren, and of the addresses and plans of the workers. Rev. J. B. Stone, who was with us throughout the meeting, encouraging and helping, conducted the devotions at this Sunday night meeting, and, at its close, gave a brief, but earnest, talk in regard to the necessity for this P. and H. M. S., and of the hardships that preachers might have been spared if it had been organized long ago; then, in a very happy manner, called for a collection, which was most liberally responded to by the congregation.

On Monday and Tuesday the business of the meeting was carried forward. Reports of districts and auxiliaries showed steady advance, and that much ground has been sowed for future reaping. Monday night we had a talk on the Western work from Mrs. H. C. Parrott, which pictured plainly the hardships our frontier preachers have to endure. Addie Watts then recited in a very forcible manner, "Our Heathen at Home." Mrs. Shipman followed with a beautiful "Fraternal Greeting" from the local auxiliary of W. F. M. S. Little Rowena Thayer recited very sweetly, "The Five Loaves and Two Fishes," and Mrs. Featherston read her report as corresponding secretary, which gave the number of auxiliaries as sixty-one, and showed that much progress had been made along several lines, and that three parsonages had been aided during the year in our Conference.

On Tuesday the secretary read a letter from the Greenville auxiliary of the W. F. M. S., tendering our society the S. Myra Smith scholarship in the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, on which $1,500 has been already paid. The society voted its acceptance of this offer, and the delegates made liberal pledges to complete the endowment. The corresponding secretary was instructed to send a circular letter to corresponding secretaries of auxiliaries, urging them to press the claims of this scholarship. A resolution was adopted thanking the North Mississippi W. F. M. S. for the loan of the Helen Finlay scholarship to Miss Streater, of Black Hawk, for home mission training while there is no candidate for foreign missions in the Conference. Miss Streater will offer her services to our Central Committee when her course is completed. Bro. Luter, of Minter City, gave us one of his characteristic talks, which contained a wise suggestion to preachers in regard to the care of parsonages, and wound up by a liberal contribution to our scholarship. The Application Committee recommended that, after Corinth circuit parsonage shall receive the appropriation already promised, Panola circuit parsonage shall come next in order, and then Sturges parsonage. This was adopted, and these places will receive help as soon as the funds are in hand.

Oxford was selected for the next place of meeting.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. B. Stone, Winona; first vice-president, Mrs. Logan Walker, Holly Springs; second vice-president, Mrs. A. B. Finlay, Greenville; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. S. Featherston, Macon; recording secretary, Mrs. D. L. Cogdell, Brooksville; treasurer, Mrs. Rowan Thayer, Greenwood; auditor, Mrs. J. R. Bew, Greenwood; editor, Mrs. H. W. Foote, Macon. District secretaries: Winona, Mrs. Shivers; Sardis, Mrs. Wall; Columbus, Mrs. Westmoreland; Grenada, Mrs. Collier; Aberdeen, Mrs. Parrott; Corinth, Mrs. Thasher; Greenville, Mrs. Shelby; Holly Springs, Miss Lucy Matthews; Kosciusko, Miss Lelia Baobmar.

If the men would pray as earnestly over their elections as our Nominating Committee did, and as the whole society prayed for it, we would hear less complaints in our towns of lawlessness and inefficient officers, in answer to these prayers, we believe the guidance of the Holy Spirit was given, and the result is a strong body of officers under whose leadership the society may expect to go forward to greater success than ever before.

Resolutions of thanks were offered to the citizens of Greenwood for their hospitality, to Bro. Athey for his helpful sermon, to the choir, to the brethren who encouraged us by their presence and sympathy, and to the untiring officers. Special thanks are considered due the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for the use of a column and other courtesies, and to Rev. W. Shipman, the Greenwood pastor, who was with us throughout the meeting, ready to help by word or deed.

The memory of this pleasant meeting in Greenwood will long linger in the memory of the delegates.

MRS. H. W. FOOTE.

The Bright Cloud.

Suffering is remedial when rightly received. Troubles are the tools by which God shapes us into beauty and usefulness. Sorrow is Mt. Sinai where one may talk with God face to face, and he will not be afraid of the thunder and lightning. The black threads in the loom are as essential to the perfection of the pattern as are the white. Trials are the rough file to rub the rust off our virtues; they are the sharp, whirling wheels that cut and polish the jewels of character; they are the fire in the furnace purging away the dross that the pure gold may appear; they are the medicines, bitter but healing, that cure us of our moral maladies. Sanctified afflictions are the shadows of God's wings. They show us our weakness, and drive us to Christ. They wean us from the world, and draw us toward heaven. Hallelujah for the cross! The truest philosophy and the purest Christianity are one.

No man can pass into eternity, for he is already in it. The dead are no more in eternity now than they always were, or than every one of us at this moment. We may ignore the things eternal, shut our eyes hard to them; live as though they had no existence—nevertheless, eternity is around us here, now, at this moment, at all moments; and we will have been around us every day of our ignorant, sinful, selfish lives. The stars are ever over our head, while we are diligent in the dust of our worldliness, or in the tainted stream of our desires. The dull brute globe moves through its ether and knows it not; even so our souls are bathed in eternity and are never conscious of it.—Canon Farrar.

Mr. Spurgeon tells a story of a beggar in Ghent who was accustomed to beg alms upon the pretense that he had a secret disease lying in his body and weakening his whole body, so that he dared not, for shame, mention the name of it. This appeal was successful until an eminent physician insisted upon an examination. At last the beggar confessed as follows: "The pains which pains me you see not; but I have a shameful disease in my body so that I can not work. Some call it sloth and others term it idleness." It is to be feared that others have the same complaint.

One has said, "Example is a light-guide, carrying a lantern in the road before us." Blessed, then, are the lantern-carriers, a vocation which angels might well covet. It is a small matter to direct the feet of those who are called to walk a dark road, to carry a lantern, well lighted, is a great privilege. But, the highest service in this regard is, to direct erring men into the way of peace and everlasting life. If you would do this, your example must be pure, covered with the light and beauty of your life.—Intelligencer.

Some people think it is a sin to be rich. There will be many rich men in heaven, as well as many in hell. There will be many poor people in heaven as well as in hell. The question is, how did you get your riches and how will you get your poverty, and what will you doing with it?—Rev. Dr. Sizer, Evangelist, Winston, N. C.

Faith, some one says, is the rope which we ring the bell up in heaven to call attention to our wants—without it, we will receive no answer.

Never speak when your silence will do more good; never be silent when your speaking will do more.

The mistake of a moment may be the sorrow of a lifetime.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. L. Sheppard, Pelican, La., Oct. 15: "I have been able to meet all my appointments since Sept. 1. We have had some very gracious meetings. We dedicated our new church at Fort Jessup last Sunday, easily raising all needed funds, and some over. Cleo, the little daughter of Bro. S. S. Holladay, our pastor here, has just died. May God mercifully sustain him and his dear wife in this sore trial!"

Rev. E. P. Craddock, Sarkville, Miss., Oct. 15: "We have finished our meetings. Seventy-five conversions, forty-one have joined our church, several have joined other churches. Have organized a church at Sessums with twenty-three members, and are preparing to build a house of worship. Have organized three Leagues, and have had a Sunday-school at each church. The preacher's salary will be paid, and the Conference collections nearly so. Sarkville circuit is on a 'boom.' Pray for us."

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Binnsville, Miss., Oct. 15: 'Our fourth Quarterly Conference was held yesterday at Wahalak. Wahalak reported everything paid up in full. The other three churches are behind, but the prospect in this respect is fair. Our assessments for foreign missions and Conference claimants are nearly paid in full. There have been 39 members received on the circuit up to date. There is some scarcity of water on the prairie here, but roads are fine."

Rev. L. P. Meador, Chunky, Miss., Oct. 7: "Six appointments, and a few days' protracted meeting at each of them. The work, as a whole, is in good condition, spiritually. Prayer meetings revived, family altars put up again, etc. Our best meetings, from our standpoint, was at Sequalena and Edgeville. Several converstons, and 7 accessions at the former; 23 conversions, 12 sanctifications and 10 accessions at the latter. Finances wofully behind, but with the advance in the price of cotton we are going to make a strong pull on the home stretch. Crops will range from 60 to 70 per cent. Very dry at this time. Thanks to Bro. Bell, of the Marion circuit, and Bro. Crosby, of the Porterville work, for faithful preaching."

Rev. Ira L. Bronson, P. C., Winsboro, La., Oct. 15: "Bro. B. F. White, P. E., was with us a week at Winsboro on his second round. He delivered some good sermons, and the result was eight accessions to the church, besides being a help to those who were already members. On his third round we had quarterly meeting at Bear Prairie, and again he remained with us a few days. The people were not only helped and strengthened by his preaching, but also by his visiting among them. The church was revived, several added to our number, and more to come in. Six children were baptized. In the early part of the year Bro. Whiteso arranged his work that he might help each pastor in a protracted meeting. This system has been of great value to me."

Rev. J. M. Johnston, Pineville, La., Oct. 11: "I send you an account of three protracted meetings which we have held on the Pineville charge. Our first was held at Oak Grove—result, 14 accessions; Pleasant Grove—8 accessions; Fellowship—11 accessions. At each of these meetings we had good order and good attention to the preached Word. It is said by the old-al members that these meetings have been productive of more good to the young people at each one of these churches than they have ever seen. Quite a number of backsliders reclaimed, and now promise to be steadfast. We were assisted at Oak Grove by Bro. Cammack, a local preacher, and at Fellowship by Bro. Wilson, of the Nugent circuit; also by Bro. Martin, a local preacher. Both of these brethren and some of the exhorters on the charge did good work for the Master's cause."

Rev. R. L. Phillips, Supply, Theadville, Miss., Oct. 7: "Slate Line Church has had a mighty visitation of God. It was opened Sept. 27, and closed Oct. 5. Bro. D. C. Farmer came on the twenty-eighth, and did most of the preaching, assisted by Bro. N. Broadway and the writer. There were old backsliders and rebellious sinners to contend with, but Satan was roused from his lair, sin was condemned and fought on every hand. We had the evidence of victory from the first, and soon penitents crowded the altar seeking pardon. Glory to God! No man could withstand the power in that meeting; some, not willing to succumb, would leave the house. There were no great demonstrations, but the experience meetings would often run two hours, until the entire assembly would be rejoicing in the love and glory of the Holy Ghost. Results: 25 or 30 reclamations, several conversions, 8 baptisms and 16 accessions. Bro. Farmer is a deep, scriptural and Holy-Ghost preacher."

Rev. Ervin Roberts, Vancleave circuit, Mississippi Conference: "I thought, in my fifty-seventh year and the twenty-seventh year in the ministry, I would write my first letter to the ADVOCATE. I remember well when the gospel came to this country. It came here by Joseph Rodgers paying $3 in a Quarterly Conference, on the east side of the Pascagoula river, to have the gospel sent to the west side. It came, and in my twelfth year I heard it in a sheep-house for the first time in life. It was preached by the Rev. George Gregery—loud voice and large mouth. I made on foot eighteen miles in a day to the first Sabbath-school I ever attended. I am the first man ever known to superintend a Sunday-school in this neighborhood. Now, we are better fixed; a number of good churches have been built, and we have good meetings and a good preacher, Bro. Huff, and I believe he is sanctified. Since there is a great deal said about sanctification, it seems to be mostly in his heart and not all in his head. I have a good home here at Vancleave, but a poor man. A wife and twelve children, all in the Methodist Church—all got religion. One in heaven. I expect to die here, and to die in Jesus. But I am local warp and itinerant filling to cross waters and climb hills to preach. I need not. There is a work at home. We need not cross the ocean to find sinners. While God is here, the devil is here also. I love to help do good. I help the itinerants, and refuse to preach at the forks of the road, to have it said that I was doing a work of my own. May God's blessings rest upon the ADVOCATE, its editor and all the brethren!"

OBSERVATIONS.

During July I made a trip through a portion of our Conference in the interest of our mission work, both at home and abroad. Spending nearly three weeks in this canvass, I took in one district meeting, our camp meeting, and several points of interest in the Alexandria district. The results of this little canvass persuade me that an arrangement by which some energetic man can press the claims of this work would be a very fine investment, to the extent of "traveling expenses." Official presence is a great thing in running any sort of organization, and is particularly potent in our economy. Our Board of Missions should see to it that some representative of that body be at each of our great gatherings, such as district meetings, if not those of less importance.

Returning from this trip, sickness overtook me, and I was driven to the shelf for eight weeks; but part of the time went on with my missionary work, explaining plans, necessities, etc. Everywhere the cause was properly presented I found a hearty response, and an awakened zeal in the cause of missions generally.

Being advised to go to Abita Springs for the benefit of that water, I took in the St. Tammany Camp Meeting. Here I found division, even to the extent of strife. Who may be to blame for such condition of things is not for me to say, but there is blame somewhere, and as is so often the case, each of the parties seem disposed to accuse the other. But when men get too "holy" to live in the church of God, the facts seem against them. St. Paul says, "They went out from us because they were not of us," and this the average Christian mind is going to accept as truth—not of God's people, and hence "come-out-ists." This looks ugly for Christian men, and in a large measure may account for the "divisions" among that otherwise good people.

The gospel heard over there was as pure and simple in its presentation as I ever heard anywhere, and the effect was manifest at the closing service, when more than 250 people—some good witnesses say more than 400—came forward, pledging themselves to live a Christian life in the future. In all this wonderful move there was no excitement, but the deepest current of earnest endeavor was visible in almost all faces.

Leaving St. Tammany after a comfortable night spent at the boarding-house of our Sister Courtney, at Covington, I made my way to the Epworth Conference at New Orleans. When men make engagements to address an audience, they should do so, or let the contrary be known in time to avoid disappointment and confusion. The Conference was interesting, and, it is to be hoped, profitable.

My next engagement was with Bro. Woodward, at Simsport, when, on the sixth of October, I dedicated the church at that point after raising sufficient money to pay a small debt and paint the building. Bro. W. seems to be in high favor with his people, and his reports promise to be "full."

Such crops as are on the Atchafalya river I have never seen. Elsewhere the prospects are not so fine, except for corn. Louisiana, I guess, never had as much corn at one time as is at present in this State. The cane and cotton crop, as a rule, is not so good as last year, but prices are ruling higher; so the prospect is, after all, not discouraging.

If our pastors will make a pull, and bring up the sum of their assessments for domestic missions, our church in Louisiana will be far ahead of any former period. We need five French-speaking preachers for South Louisiana next year, and must have three. Our circuits are too small; our preachers do not occupy territory enough. We must spread out and cease this dribbling of our missionary money in the old and well-evangelized portions of our Conference. Practically, the destitution of our Conference is in Alexandria and Opelousas districts. For a time the presiding elder on the former district must be recognized as a missionary. This will so relieve the church as to enable them to take care of their preacher, with a few exceptions. A "circuit" is not a 'mission," and should not receive appropriations as such. By this dribbling method we have spent annually some $1,500 to little or no purpose. Better lay out a mission and stick to it till it develops into a circuit. As I understand the case, we must proceed among the people of South Louisiana just as we do in Mexico or Brazil—plant our banners and let the people know we are there to stay. Then, we have been criminally careless in selecting men for the little missionary work we have tried to do. The slench arising from some of this want of care still reaches our moral noses in certain quarters.

Now, we have command of men tried and true. Will the people send them? May the Lord help us do our duty! J. A. PARKER.

Keep Young.

Judicious mental work may help to lift one out of the ruts of premature old age. Read and think of what you read. Don't use your mind as if it were a sieve, and you were trying to see how much you could pour through it. There is a belief extant that knowledge, if gained at all, must be acquired in youth. Fallacious fallacy! Behold Gallileo at threescore and ten pursuing his studies with unflagging zeal; Cato beginning Greek when advanced in years; Ogilby commencing classical studies when past fifty. Gladstone is as much the student today as when the bloom of youth mantled his cheek. Be kind to the feelings and fancies of youth. If they prove perennial, so much the better. Don't forbid yourself glad, recreative thought and action. Smile without affectation; be pleasant without being silly—in short, be young as long as you can. —Selected.

A Chance to Make Money.

In the past three months we have cleared $660 75 selling Dish Washers. I did most of the work, my brother helped some. I expect to do better next month, as every Dish Washer sold advertises itself, and sells several more; I don't have to leave the house. People hear about the Dish Washers and send for them, they are so cheap. Any lady or gentleman can make money in this business, as every family wants a Dish Washer. Any of your readers who have energy enough to apply for an agency can easily make from $8 to $12 per day. You can get full particulars by addressing Mound City Dish Washer Co., St. Louis, Mo. They help you to get started and then you can make money awful fast.

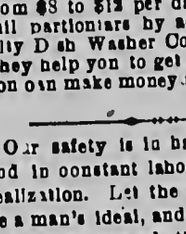
Thousands of Dollars



Mr. S. G. Derry.

I spent trying to find cure for Salt Rheum which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the humor. I was unable to lie down, could not walk without crutches, and had to have my arms, back and legs bandaged twice a day. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon could see a change. The flesh became healthy, the sores soon healed, the scales fell off, I was able to give up bandages and crutches, and a happy man I was. I took

Rome Wants Beer.

Archbishop Gross, of Oregon, declares:

"Sunday beer drinking in moderation is not wrong, nor is it sinful in the opinion of the Catholic Church. A man who can regulate his appetite has a right to indulge in whatever drink suits his taste. The law has no right to say what I shall eat or drink."

Archbishop Chapelle, of New Mexico, says:

"The Catholic Church does not condemn beer drinking in moderation Sunday or any other day as wrong or sinful."

Archbishop Janssens, of New Orleans, gives this opinion:

"If beer drinking on any other day is not in itself sinful, it is not so on Sunday. The only manner in which it can be sinful is by attaching scandal to it, by violating the law to indulge it. Sunday is the only day on which most poor men can get recreation, and many of these people find a great pleasure in drinking a glass of beer."

Archbishop Elder, of Cincinnati, tells us:

"It is not wise to impose by law restrictions that can not be enforced. It destroys respect for law. Very often a vitiated public sentiment makes even wise laws nugatory."

Chancellor Muldoon, of Chicago, declares the Catholic Church does not see how it could be wrong to drink or eat anything of God's creation. The only harm in drinking beer is that people do not always drink it moderately. If they do not drink it to excess there is no more harm in drinking it on Sunday than on any other day.

The above is taken from a recent issue of the Morning Star, a Catholic paper of this city. It is not, therefore, a Protestant version of Catholic opinion, but a deliberate expression of opinion by Catholics themselves. Notice, too, the high position of the persons whose opinions are quoted. Four of them are archbishops, and the fifth is a chancellor. These are representative men. Their views are the views of the Catholic Church. Of course, there are individuals in the church who do not accept their views; and there are many Catholics who have taken a total abstinence pledge. But, notwithstanding this, the church's attitude is that defined above: "The Catholic Church does not condemn beer drinking in moderation on Sunday, or any other day, as wrong or sinful." The position assumed is that while alcoholic stimulants should not be used to excess, a moderate use of them is allowable and proper. This reasoning is specious, but thoroughly sophistical. Temperance means moderation in the use of a thing proper to be used. Any use of a thing that is hurtful is an intemperate use. If alcohol were a food, as bread is, then the argument in favor of a temperate use would apply. But is this the case? Is alcohol a food? Does it have any beneficial effect upon the healthy human frame?

Fortunately for the cause of truth, the medical science of the present day is at no loss for an answer to these questions. In this age of progress medical science has advanced pari passu with other sciences, and in no department of her widely extended domain has she made more signal progress than in her investigations concerning the hygienic effects of alcohol. Questions of this sort must be determined, not by any process of a priori argumentation, but by careful, long-continued, widely extended observation of facts. Now, this strictly scientific method has been pursued in this case, and the results have been announced by the very highest authorities in the medical world.

Let us take up the several claims made in behalf of alcohol, and consider them separately:

One of these claims is that it invigorates the muscular and nervous systems, and thus increases one's capacity for labor, both physical and mental. What has medical science to say on this subject? It may be admitted that by the use of alcohol a man may so stimulate himself as to perform more labor within a very brief period of time than he could otherwise have done, but that period of unnatural excitement and activity will inevitably be followed by a period of corresponding languor and depression. In order that it may be seen how carefully medical men have proceeded in order to arrive at a correct conclusion in regard to this matter, we here present a quotation from the pen of one of the leading physicians of the nineteenth century, Sir Andrew Clarke, physician to the Queen of England:

Dr. Parkes got a number of soldiers of the same age, of the same type of constitution, living under the same circumstances, eating the same food, and breathing the same atmosphere. He divided the soldiers into two gangs—an alcoholic and a non-alcoholic gang—and he engaged these two gangs in certain work, for which they were to be paid extra. He watched these two gangs, and took the result of their work; and it turned out that the alcoholic gang went far ahead at first. They had buckets of beer by their side, and as they got a little tired they took beer, and the non-alcoholic gang were in an hour or two left nowhere. But he waited and watched, and as the experiment went on the energies of the beer-drinkers began speedily to flag, and, do what they would, before the end of the day the non-alcoholic gang had left them far behind. When this had gone on for some days, the alcoholic gang begged that they might get into the non-alcoholic gang, in order that they might earn a little more money; but Dr. Parkes, in order to make the experiment clinching and conclusive, transposed the two gangs. He made the alcoholic gang the non-alcoholic gang, and vice versa, the men themselves being very willing to lend themselves to the experiment; and the result was exactly the same—the alcoholic gang beat the non-alcoholic at the starting, but failed utterly toward the close of the day. [Dr. Parkes was a surgeon in the British army.]

Could any test be fairer or more absolutely conclusive? This is a sample of a multitude of experiments which have been performed by scientific men in order to ascertain the truth in regard to this matter. In every case there has been the same result. That result is thus stated by Dr. Clarke: "Alcohol is not only not a helper, but it is a certain hinderer of work."

The man who uses an alcoholic stimulant of any sort, under the belief that it gives him additional capacity for labor, either physical or intellectual, is a relic of a bygone age of intellectual darkness.
